ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book owes its existence to the great Alan Little, who compiled the first edition in 1991 and continued to update and add to it for the next 26 years. He was working on the 2018 edition when he died in 2017. I hope Alan would be proud of how the Compendium has continued to develop with each new Championships.

It is almost impossible to publish a book on Wimbledon history without in some way relying on the expertise of John Barrett, author of Wimbledon: The Official History. John's wisdom and support have been invaluable over the years.

Ian Hewitt, former Chairman of the All England Club, has also provided great support and his work in promoting the heritage of the Club and the sport of tennis simply cannot be overstated.

The work of compiling the Compendium every year involves liaising with many different colleagues, all of whom provide vital updates to the book. It is impossible to list everyone who has contributed information over the past 34 years, but I would like to thank the following colleagues who provided updates for this edition:

A special thank you this year to Malin Lundin, who has done an excellent job of revising the Trophies section.

As always, the efforts of Eloise Tyson are greatly appreciated for her proofreading and editing of the many revised sections.

Several people outside the AELTC have made invaluable contributions, most notably the late Ben Chatfield, who helped to re-write several chapters when the format of the book changed in 2019, and Paul Newman, whose annual preview articles have become a key component of the Compendium for the past seven years. The illustrations of Zebedee Helm are also a much-enjoyed addition to the book.

I am also grateful for the input of several independent tennis historians. The expertise of Bob Everitt, Richard Hillway and Attila Szabo has been invaluable over many years but this year I would especially like to thank Richard Sinclair, who has provided several fascinating new pieces of information on a variety of topics, including Royalty at Wimbledon, rackets used by champions, ambidextrous players and female officials.

Last but not least, a big thank you to Ed Davis, Jim Drewett and all the team at our publisher, Vision Sports Publishing. They not only do a wonderful job of putting the Compendium together every year and getting it ready in time for each Championships, but they are also a pleasure to work with.

In Memory of Alan Little M.B.E.

Although he is no longer with us, this book, the Wimbledon Compendium, exists entirely thanks to the work of one man. His dedication over many decades has ensured that we know so much more about Wimbledon than we otherwise would.

James Alan Little was born on 1 February 1928 in Greenwich, South East London. In 1946, after listening to the Gentlemen's Singles final on the radio, Alan decided to come to Wimbledon himself the next day, to watch the Ladies' final between Pauline Betz and Louise Brough. Thus began a lifelong love affair between Alan and Wimbledon. He missed the 1947 Championships whilst on National Service but returned the following year for his first of 70 consecutive Championships.

Alan had a 'real' job working for British Telecom (BT) but his main passion in life was tennis. From a young age, he loved to collect tennis books and magazines and to study the history of the game. One of his earliest contributions to tennis literature was when he wrote a letter to the editor of Lawn Tennis and Badminton magazine, pointing out an error in an article by Lance Tingay, one of the pre-eminent tennis writers of the time. This was typical Alan. Accuracy and attention to detail were the foundations of everything he did.

By 1960 Alan had become a regular contributor to Lawn Tennis and Badminton and was already described in the magazine as 'a keen British lawn tennis historical authority.' In 1967, when Lawn Tennis and Badminton became Tennis Pictorial International, Alan was Assistant Editor. He continued in this role when Tennis Pictorial International was succeeded by Tennis World in 1969 and, later that year, Alan became editor, a job he continued to do until 1976. By this time, he had been tasked with setting up a library in the new Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum. Nevertheless, he continued his association with Tennis World, in the capacity of Consulting Editor, until 1981.

When The All England Lawn Tennis Club decided to build a Museum and Library, Alan was the obvious choice to run the Library. After all, it had been his idea in the first place. In his March 1967 column in Lawn Tennis and Badminton, Alan proposed that a National Museum and Library of Lawn Tennis be built on land recently acquired by the Club: "The library section would probably be of more material value to the tennis lover," he wrote. "Believe me, information on the Game's history is hard to come by."

The Kenneth Ritchie Wimbledon Library (named after Lord Ritchie of Dundee, a long-standing Club Committee member) eventually opened in 1977 and, over the course of the next 40 years, Alan built it into the most comprehensive tennis library in the world. The Library now holds more than 6,000 books, as well as thousands more magazines, programmes, newspaper cuttings and miscellaneous publications from all over the world. Currently, there are 90 different countries represented in the collection. Alan was particularly proud of the Library's magazine collection and he had a special talent for tracking down rare sets of magazines and persuading their owners to donate them to the Library.

Initially, Alan combined his role of Honorary Librarian with his full-time job at BT. However, in 1983 he took early retirement and was now free to concentrate on his passion for tennis. By the 1990s he had settled into the weekly pattern that he maintained for the rest of his life. He would attend the Library every Tuesday and Thursday, almost without fail, except during The Championships when he would be there every day. His time in the Library would be spent working on The Compendium, as well as his many other books, and answering enquiries from fellow tennis researchers. Over the years, Alan helped countless people and made many friends from all over the world, all of whom revered Alan for the quality of his research. He himself enjoyed nothing more than being able to help anyone who shared his thirst for tennis knowledge.

As well as helping others with their research, Alan wrote many books of his own. His first publication was The Changing Face of Wimbledon 1877-1977, one of a set of booklets published to mark the centenary of The Championships. This publication was the forerunner of a popular 'trilogy' of booklets, first published in 2002, that describe the evolution of the Club and its Grounds: Wimbledon 1869-1921: The Changing Face of Worple Road, Wimbledon 1922: The New Ground and Centre Court, and Wimbledon 1922-2002: The Changing Face of Church Road. The latter was updated several times, most recently in 2014.

In 1980 he edited Know Your Wimbledon, a booklet that was sold alongside the Official Programme. The following year, the booklet was relaunched as This is Wimbledon and Alan continued to edit it every year until 2013. He was also responsible for compiling the first Lawn Tennis Championships Media Guide, a task he continued to do until 1990.

Between 1983 and 1985 Alan wrote a series of booklets on early Wimbledon Champions Lottie Dodd, Maud Watson, Kathleen Godfree, May Sutton, Dorothea Chambers and Lena Rice, as well as one telling the story of Vere St. Leger Goold, the 1879 All Comers' Runner-up, who was later convicted of murder. The book was drily entitled, A Tale of Two Courts, a title Alan often expressed great amusement in having thought up.

Alan's first book was published in 1984. Wimbledon Ladies: A Centenary Record 1884-1984 - The Singles Champions was co-written with Lance Tingay. This was followed two years later by Wimbledon Men: A Hundred Championships 1877-1987 - The Singles Champions, also written with Tingay, who produced essays on each Champion whilst Alan provided the statistics on their playing records and career achievements. Both books were updated four times, most recently in 2015, with John Barrett continuing Tingay's work as co-author.

Alan's first solo book was published in 1988. Suzanne Lenglen - Tennis Idol of the Twenties told the story of one of Alan's all-time favourite players, the six-time Wimbledon singles Champion whom he described as doing 'much to popularise the game as it is today'. A much-expanded version of this book was published in 2007 and listed the results of nearly every match played by Lenglen during her career.

Another of Alan's areas of interest was reflected in his next book, Tennis and the Olympic Games, which reviewed every Olympic tennis tournament from Athens 1896 through to Beijing 2008, complete with results of every match in Olympic history. After the London 2012 Games, Alan brought the Olympic tennis story up to date by publishing a booklet, The Olympic Tennis Event at Wimbledon 2012, which told the story of Andy Murray's historic victory for Great Britain.

Alan's final book was, apart from the Wimbledon Compendium, his biggest project of all. The Golden Days of Tennis on the French Riviera 1874-1939 was published in 2014 and told the story of the French Riviera tennis scene, which had its heyday in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

However, the publication Alan was most proud of was this book, the Wimbledon Compendium. First published in 1991, it consisted of a relatively modest 216 pages. For the next 27 years, Alan would update the book with meticulous attention to detail, regularly adding new categories of information. He did wonder occasionally if he'd gone too far: "I've created a monster!" he once exclaimed, when faced with the task of updating one of the more complicated sections. But, most of the time, Alan was never more content than when sitting in the Library on a Tuesday or Thursday, updating his Compendium.

Although Alan liked his expertise to be appreciated, he never wanted to be the centre of attention and never sought recognition for the work he did.

For him, being able to do something he loved was reward in itself. Nevertheless, Alan deservedly received many awards for his unique contribution to tennis, including an M.B.E. in 2014, the Lawn Tennis Writers Association's Annual Award in 2008 and the All England Club's Distinguished Service Award in 2016. As part of the latter, the Club commissioned a portrait of Alan, which now hangs in his beloved Library. Being a modest man, he didn't feel entirely comfortable having his portrait painted, but he went along with it graciously as he appreciated the sentiment behind it.

Perhaps the honour Alan was most proud of was being made an Honorary Member of The All England Lawn Tennis Club in 1985. As he once said: "The only way to become an Honorary Member is to win Wimbledon or start a Library!"

For a man of 89 years, Alan was incredibly sprightly and everyone who worked with him was awe of his energy and enthusiasm. Sadly, however, he became unwell shortly after the end of The Championships 2017 and passed away a just few months later. The loss of Alan's encyclopaedic knowledge has been keenly felt by everyone who knew him.

Nevertheless, Alan has left us with much to be grateful for. In his Library and his many publications, he has left an extraordinary legacy and he has enriched the lives of tennis lovers all over the world. Anyone who looks up a fact in this book should be grateful for the work of Alan Little.

AELTC Historian

In Memory of Ben Chatfield

All of us at the AELTC were deeply saddened to hear of the death of Ben Chatfield, a key contributor to this book, in October 2020. Ben passed away at the age of just 46, having been diagnosed with an aggressive brain tumour in the summer of 2019.

Ben had a successful career as a commercial author but it's his tennis work for which he'll be best remembered here at Wimbledon.

Ben grew up in Wimbledon and first visited The Championships in 1984 with his mum, Linda. The resulting lifelong passion for tennis led, more than three decades later, to the publication of his 2018 book, Standing in Line: 30 Years of Obsessive Queuing at Wimbledon. It was an affectionate, irreverent and highly amusing account of his Wimbledon adventures, which any dedicated tennis fan will be able to relate to.

In the process of researching his book, Ben was a regular visitor to the Kenneth Ritchie Wimbledon Library. He also wrote occasionally for wimbledon.com. As such, when we decided to give the Wimbledon Compendium a new look in 2019, Ben was the obvious choice to help us. The 'Wimbledon Year-by-Year' section was re-written in Ben's unique style and 'The Courts & the Stories they Tell' section was a wonderfully entertaining and informative new addition to the book.

Ben also wrote for The Daily Telegraph and wrote one other book, Mediterranean Homesick Blues: A Diary of Life-affirming Disasters on the Cote D'Azur, a highly amusing account of the year he spent in the South of France when he was in his twenties. In 2017 and 2018, he collaborated with his close friend, the artist Zebedee Helm, to produce a wonderful collection of Wimbledon cartoons, an example of which can be seen opposite.

Ben's memory is deeply cherished by his wife, Victoria, his daughter, Ruby, and his many friends, not just here at the AELTC but all over the world. We miss working with him on this book and on other projects, as we miss his knowledge, his enthusiasm for tennis and his sense of humour. But most of all we miss his friendship.

THE ORIGINS OF
LAWN TENNIS &
CROQUET CLUB

Hardly an eyebrow was raised in sporting circles that English summer's day in 1877 when the following announcement appeared in The Field magazine of 9 June: "The All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club, Wimbledon, propose to hold a lawn tennis meeting, open to all amateurs, on Monday, July 9th and following days. Entrance fee £1.1s.0d. Two prizes will be given – one gold champion prize to the winner and silver to the second player."

From the distance of almost a century and a half that simple announcement in The Field conceals an almost unbelievable story, and those of us who take for granted the universal appeal of The Championships at Wimbledon with their 14 days of unparalleled skill and excitement each year – witnessed by some half-a-million spectators at the famous grounds in Church Road and by a potential television audience of more than one billion viewers in almost 200 territories around the world – sometimes find it hard to believe that things were not always like this.

The story begins on 23 July 1868 when John H. Walsh, Capt. R.F. Dalton, J. Hinde Hale, the Revd. A. Law, S.H. Clarke Maddock and Walter Jones Whitmore met in the offices of Herbert Cox, the publisher of The Field, at 346 Strand in London, and the All England Croquet Club was founded. The following summer, the Club organised its first croquet championship, held on a cricket ground at Crystal Palace.

In October 1869, a ground of four acres in Wimbledon's Nursery Lane (now Nursery Road), between Worple Road and the London and South Western Railway, was rented for a period of three years at annual rents of £50, £75 and £100. Annual subscriptions for Club Members were set at £1.1s. for a gentleman or lady and £1.11s.6d. for a husband and wife. The ground was laid out in three terraces and opened in May. A pavilion was erected and in June 1870 a croquet championship was held at the Club's ground.

But by 1875 interest in croquet had waned and so had the Club's finances. The Committee, looking to revive the fortunes of the Club, announced that one croquet lawn would be set apart for playing lawn tennis, a new game introduced to the public by Major Wingfield in 1874 that was sweeping the country. Games were played in accordance with a code of laws for lawn tennis issued on 24 May by the Marylebone Cricket Club.

Such was the popularity of the new game, the following year an entire terrace of four croquet lawns was made over to lawn tennis and in April 1877 the Club was re-named 'The All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club'. Two months later the Committee decided to institute the first Lawn Tennis Championship – a gentlemen's singles event – and an announcement of such was published in The Field.

Not only would this event become the world's first tennis championship, the laws drawn up by a sub-committee of three All England Club members – Henry Jones, who would serve as the Referee at the first Championship, Julian Marshall and Charles Heathcote – effectively formed the long-term basis of the game as we know it today.

Included in the Club's new set of laws was the stipulation that the rectangular court should be set at 26 yards by nine yards (which have remained the dimensions into the modern day). The height of the net was to be five feet at the posts and three feet and three inches at the centre (reduced by 1882 to the current dimensions of three feet and six inches at the posts and three feet at the centre). The service line would be 26 feet from the net (changed by 1880 to 21 feet from the net). The real tennis form of scoring – 15, 30, 40, deuce and advantage – was adopted over the more commonly used rackets method of scoring of 15 points up, which the MCC had recommended from the start, with the decision also made that the server should have two chances on each point to deliver a fair serve. It was also determined that ‘sudden death’ would occur at five-games-all and that players would change ends between sets.

There were 22 entries for the first Championship, which was only open to gentlemen, and, as if to reinforce the relatively lowly initial status of the event in the London sporting hierarchy, no play was scheduled for the Friday or Saturday of that week in order not to clash with the Eton v Harrow cricket match at Lord’s.

Within three years, however, grandstands had been purchased to accommodate the growing crowds at the annual event, by 1881 the Club had raised enough funds to purchase the Worple Road ground and the following year croquet ceased to be played and the Club was renamed the ‘All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club’.

Now, of course, the names of the ‘All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club’ (Croquet as a sport was reintroduced in 1957, although the sport had returned to the club’s name in 1899) and ‘Wimbledon’ are famous the world over and synonymous with one of the world’s greatest and most popular sporting events. So much has changed since 1877, yet the relationship between a private members’ club and the world’s premier tennis Grand Slam remains wonderfully and proudly unique.

THE CHAMPIONSHIPS

RISING STARS TO SHINE AT 138TH CHAMPIONSHIPS

Paul Newman looks forward to The Championships 2025 as a new generation of talent looks to make its mark in London SW19

And then there was one. For the best part of two decades men's tennis was dominated by the so-called 'Big Four', but after Rafael Nadal and Andy Murray followed Roger Federer into retirement last year, Novak Djokovic is the last active player left of the four who won every gentlemen's singles title at The Championships between 2003 and 2022.

With two recent Wimbledon Ladies' Singles Champions, Angelique Kerber and Simona Halep, having also announced their retirements since last summer, this year's Championships will demonstrate how much the sport's landscape is changing. A new wave of talent has emerged, headed by the likes of Mirra Andreeva, Alexandra Eala, Diana Shnaider, Jack Draper, Jakub Mensik and Ben Shelton.

There is nothing new about teenaged champions in women's tennis – Martina Hingis and Maria Sharapova for example won Wimbledon at 16 and 17 respectively – but as players have become fitter and stronger it has become increasingly difficult for younger generations to make an impact. At the start of this year Andreeva was the only teenager in the world's top 100, which makes her achievements all the more remarkable – she only turned 18 in April, having just won two of the biggest tournaments on the Women's Tennis Association tour at Dubai and Indian Wells, which took her into the world's top 10. Might the ultimate prize now be within her reach? It should help that she is coached by someone who knows what it takes to win Wimbledon, Conchita Martinez having claimed the All England Club title in 1994. Andreeva, who played in her first Grand Slam semi-final at Roland-Garros last summer, has already proved her aptitude for grass, having reached the fourth round on her Championships debut two years ago.

What of the other young women who have been breaking through? Eala, who turned 20 in May, has taken longer than Andreeva to make an impact but enjoyed a remarkable run to this year's semi-finals in Miami, where she beat three Grand Slam champions in Jelena Ostapenko, Madison Keys and Iga Swiatek. Shnaider, who turned 21 in April this year, made the world's top 20 during her breakthrough season in 2024, winning four tournaments along the way, including the grass court event at Bad Homburg. Meanwhile Maya Joint, aged 19, and Polina Kudrmetova, aged 22, are set for their Championships debuts after making significant progress this year, while 20-year-old Linda Noskova and 21-year-old Ashlyn Krueger are among others with great potential.

The first 17 years of the 20th century saw Serena and Venus Williams dominate at The Championships, winning the ladies' singles title 12 times between them, but the last eight editions have been won by eight different players. Five have since retired (Serena Williams, Garbiñe Muguruza, Kerber, Halep and Ashleigh Barty), while the last three champions have all been ranked outside the world's top 20: Elena Rybakina was world No.23, Marketa Vondrousova No.42 and Barbora Krejčíková No.32. Rybakina went on to reach the quarter-finals in 2023 and the semi-finals last year, but Vondrousova became only the second defending Ladies' Singles Champion (after Steffi Graf in 1994) to go out in the first round when she lost to Jessica Bouzas Maneiro last summer. Krejčíková has been dogged by a back injury this year.

Recent Wimbledons might suggest the ladies' singles will be as open as ever this summer, but Aryna Sabalenka, semi-finalist in her last two appearances at the All England Club and world No.1 for most of the last year, will be hoping not to feature in any upsets. Going into Roland-Garros, the 27-year-old had made the quarter-finals or better in each of her previous nine Grand Slam appearances. Iga Swiatek, who was dislodged from the top of the world rankings last year by Sabalenka, has been dominant on clay in recent years, but has rarely found her best form at The Championships. Top seed for the last three years, the Pole lost in the third round in 2022 and 2024 and in the quarter-finals in 2023.

Mirra Andrejeva took The Championships by storm to reach the fourth round aged 16 in 2023 (above) and will be a genuine contender in 2025

Of the other leading women, Jessica Pegula has one quarter-final appearance to show from her five visits to The Championships, while Madison Keys, this year's Australian Open champion, has two from 10. Coco Gauff made a spectacular start to her Wimbledon career, beating Venus Williams as a 15-year-old debutant and going on to reach the fourth round, but has gone no further in her four subsequent appearances. Jasmine Paolini, runner-up last year, and Ons Jabeur, beaten finalist in both 2022 and 2023, will both be hoping to recapture their best grass court form, while Petra Kvitová and Belinda Bencic have returned to competition following maternity breaks.

Of the British women, Emma Raducanu, Katie Boulter and Sonay Kartal all have reasons for optimism. Raducanu has made the second week at The Championships in two of her three appearances and has shown signs this year of a return to the form that saw her win the US Open four years ago. Boulter is a proven grass court performer who has won matches at The Championships in each of the last four years, while Kartal made her big breakthrough last summer when she reached the third round of the main draw as a qualifier.

Teenaged champions are as rare in the modern men's game as they are among the women. Mensik and Shang Juncheng were the only teenagers in the world's top 100 at the start of this year. Mensik, nevertheless, has long been identified as a potential champion, not least by Djokovic, who invited the big-hitting Czech to train with him at his club in Belgrade three years ago. Djokovic was on the other side of the net when the 19-year-old enjoyed the biggest win of his career in March this year when he won the Miami Open, where three of his victims were ranked in the world's top seven. Mensik lost to Alexander Bublik first time out on his Wimbledon debut last year, but nobody will relish facing him this summer.

Much the same can be said of 22-year-old Shelton and 21-year-old Giovanni Mpetshi Perricard, who are two of the game's biggest servers. Shelton, who reached the fourth round last summer and made the US Open semi-finals in 2023, had a serve recorded at 150mph at Indian Wells earlier this year. Mpetshi Perricard meanwhile hit the joint fastest serve of the Fortnight (140mph) in reaching the fourth round on his Championships debut last year. In his very first appearance at the All England Club the Frenchman became just the seventh man in history to hit 50 or more aces in a match as he knocked out the No.20 seed, Sebastian Korda.

Arthur Fils, another 21-year-old Frenchman, broke into the world's top 20 at the end of 2024 and should go into The Championships full of confidence after reaching the fourth round last year, while Holger Rune, a 22-year-old Dane, has already appeared in a Championships quarter-final. As for the 'Next Gen' group of players, the likes of Daniil Medvedev, Alexander Zverev and Stefanos Tsitsipas might be wondering whether their Wimbledon chances are starting to fade.

In Murray's absence the weight of British expectations in the gentlemen's singles will fall largely on the shoulders of Draper. Physical issues had interrupted his progress until he made his big breakthrough by winning the grass court title at Stuttgart last summer. In his next tournament he beat Alcaraz at The Queen's Club and in March this year he joined the world's top 10 by winning Indian Wells. Draper, nevertheless, will need to improve on his record at The Championships, where he has never gone beyond the second round.

The progress made by the likes of Draper, Mensik and Fils has been putting pressure on 22-year-old Alcaraz and 23-year-old Jannik Sinner, who were the first players of their generation to win Grand Slam titles. In successfully defending his All England Club crown last summer Alcaraz became only the second man in the Open era (after Federer) to win his first four Grand Slam singles finals. He also won his first four Grand Slam titles at a younger age than Djokovic, Federer and Nadal, while Bjorn Borg and Boris Becker are the only other men to have won multiple Wimbledon titles before the age of 22. The youngest man ever to win Roland-Garros and Wimbledon in the same year, Alcaraz is already three-quarters of the way towards a 'career Grand Slam', with the Australian Open the only major jewel missing from his crown.

Alcaraz and Sinner dominated men's tennis in 2024, with Sinner winning the two other Grand Slam tournaments, in Melbourne and New York. The Italian won his third Grand Slam title in 13 months when he made a successful defence of his Australian Open trophy this January. He then missed three months after agreeing to serve a suspension following two failed drugs tests last year, although he was cleared of any deliberate intention to breach anti-doping rules. Although at his best on hard courts, Sinner won his first grass court title last summer at Halle. He has also won plenty of matches at The Championships, having reached two quarter-finals and one semi-final in his last three appearances. Sinner beat Alcaraz in four sets in their only previous meeting at Wimbledon three summers ago.

Although Murray's injury woes meant that he had never gone beyond the third round since limping out of The Championships 2017, the Scot will be missed this summer, having been a focus of British interest ever since his Centre Court debut 20 years ago. Nevertheless, the retirement of the 2013 and 2016 Gentlemen's Singles Champion has not meant his departure from the tennis scene as he made a surprise return for a six-month stint as Djokovic's coach at the start of this year. Djokovic went on to reach the Australian Open semi-finals, beating Alcaraz along the way, before a leg injury ended his chances of claiming his 25th Grand Slam title.

Djokovic's Melbourne victory over Alcaraz was the eighth meeting between the two men in what has become a fascinating battle of the generations. Alcaraz, who has only just turned 22, has beaten 38-year-old Djokovic in the last two Wimbledon finals. Indeed, Djokovic's only two losses in his last 41 matches at The Championships were in those two finals.

However, the Serb turned the tables on the Spaniard in last summer's Olympics final and took his head-to-head lead over his younger rival to 5-3 with that victory in Melbourne.

Can Djokovic win Wimbledon for the eighth time and thus equal the men's record held by Federer? If he does so he would eclipse Federer's record as the oldest man to win the title in the Open era, the Swiss having done so in 2017 at the age of 35 years and 342 days.

Djokovic is already the only man in the Open era to have reached three Wimbledon finals after his 35th birthday.

Djokovic made his Championships debut in 2005, when all line calls were still made by line umpires. Electronic Line Calling, enabling players to challenge line calls, was introduced in 2007. This year all 'out' and 'fault' line calls on all courts will be made by Live Electronic Line Calling following extensive testing during last year's Championships. There will also be a change to the schedule for the finals weekend. The gentlemen's and ladies' doubles finals will both start at 1pm, followed by the ladies' and gentlemen's singles finals at 4pm, on the second Saturday and Sunday respectively.

Meanwhile the public's passion for The Championships continues to grow. A record number of applications for tickets was received for the Public Ballot from the UK and around the world, with particularly strong interest from the United States, Italy and Ireland, and Keith Prowse – the Official Hospitality Partner of The Championships – reported that all hospitality packages were sold out by the end of April. Several broadcast partners reported record viewing figures last year and a number of new or extended media rights agreements will begin at these Championships.

Players will enjoy an enhanced restaurant this year as part of the Millennium Building project, which aims to improve their overall experience, while additional facilities for spectators will include a new public restaurant, The Cavendish, in the heart of No.1 Court. The restaurant is named after Henry 'Cavendish' Jones, a committee member of what was then the All England Croquet Club who in 1875 suggested setting aside an area where tennis and badminton could be played.

One hundred and fifty years on from that historic moment, this year's Championships will mark some other significant milestones. It was exactly 100 years ago that a Qualifying Competition for all five Championship events was held for the first time, at the Roehampton Club. This year also marks the 50th anniversary of one of the most remarkable finals at The Championships, when Arthur Ashe became the first black player to win the gentlemen's singles title by beating Jimmy Connors, who had been the overwhelming favourite. Who will be this year's headline-makers? We look forward to finding out.

Having broken into the world's top 10 in 2025, 23-year-old Jack Draper (above) will be aiming to go past the second round at The Championships for the first time

THE CHAMPIONS

The Championship Events

The following record shows the concluding matches which have decided the five Championship events over the years. From 1878 to 1921 the holder of the gentlemen's singles title did not compete until the Challenge Round, when he met the winner of the all comers' singles to decide The Championship. When the holder did not defend his title the winner of the all comers' singles automatically became champion and the years when this occurred are indicated by an asterisk. The same system applied to the ladies' singles and gentlemen's doubles from 1886 to 1921, but not the ladies' doubles and mixed doubles, which both commenced in 1913. In 1922 the Challenge Round was abolished and subsequently all competitors played through.

CHALLENGE ROUND ABOLISHED

In 1912 the United States LTA abolished the Challenge Round system in the gentlemen's singles at the American Championships held in the autumn. During the following winter The All England Lawn Tennis Club conducted a poll amongst the leading players of the day, which showed that 68 were in favour of playing through and 48 retaining the Challenge Round. The Committee decided that the majority was not sufficient to justify a change.

However, another poll carried out in 1921 showed that the numbers were 91 in favour and 27 to the contrary. The margin was considered large enough to bring about an alteration to the system and with the consent of the holders, the new system was introduced for the 1922 Championships.

A total of 144 Champions, 51 singles

Players are listed in the above table under the names they participated under at The Championships.

Where a player's surname changed after their final appearance at The Championships (e.g. after marriage), this name is not included.

In all instances, the player's forenames are listed next to their maiden surname.

If a surname is in capitals, this indicates the player won a title under this name.

In all instances, the surname listed first is the name in which they first won a title.

WIMBLEDON YEAR-BY-YEAR

by Ben Chatfield & Robert McNicol

This section details just what happened on – and off – the lawns of both the sites over the last century and a half, as painstakingly compiled by Alan Little in the Wimbledon Compendium over the last 28 years.

It's not a definitive report, giving just a snapshot of what feels most significant and most memorable for any given Championships. Some extra research across the board has added rich information to the early years, including some more weather (as if Wimbledon didn't have enough) and other details gleaned from a variety of reliable historical resources. Whilst continually looking to the future, The Championships' rich story has its roots in these real reports from the past, and with the men, women (and animals) who made it all possible.

The year in which it all began. 'The All England Croquet Club' (note the lack of the word 'tennis' in the title) was founded on Thursday 23 July when six gentlemen gathered in the offices of a magazine called The Field (still the world's oldest country and field sports magazine), at number 346 on The Strand in London. The meeting was chaired by the magazine's editor, John Henry Walsh, with the other attendees being Capt. Robert Fitzgerald Dalton, John Hinde Hale, the Reverend Arthur Law, Walter Jones Whitmore (elected Hon. Secretary) and Samuel Horace Clarke Maddock, who was the new Hon. Treasurer. It was here, in the editor's room at the offices of Herbert Cox, publisher of The Field, that the 'All England Croquet Club' was founded. The new Committee agreed to meet again two weeks later.

1869

July saw the new Club organise its first croquet championship, held on a cricket ground at Crystal Palace and won by George Joad, with a second event played later in the year in Eastbourne. On 24 September the decision was made to lease a four-acre site near what is now the centre of Wimbledon, by the railway track – but was then a semi-rural London outpost, a long way from The Strand. The site was off Worple Road, in Nursery Lane, which is still there today, but now known as 'Nursery Road'. The four-acre site was rectangular in shape, roughly 170 metres by 100 metres, and three-year rental went from £50 in year one to £75 in year two and £100 in year three – the equivalent of around £6,000, £8,500 and £11,000 in today's money. An agreement was also made with London and South Western Railway to run a pathway from Wimbledon Station to the Grounds, for the princely sum of one pound (just over £100 today). One pound would have also bought you an annual subscription to the Club, with a life subscription costing just over 10 pounds. The Earl of Essex was appointed the Club's first President.

1870

As interest grew, a pavilion was erected and in May the ground was spread out into three separate terraces, a decision which necessitated a gardener being hired. Fencing around the ground was put up and a small pavilion, containing gentlemen's and ladies' rooms, plus a club room, was built. In mid-Victorian England croquet was the main summer sport of the so-called 'leisure classes', and it could be enjoyed by young or old.

In June, the Croquet Championships were held on the Grounds for the first time, won by Walter Peel, as they would be in the following year as well. This was the first event in Wimbledon but effectively the second Championships, with the first having taken place in Crystal Palace in the previous July.

The value of the Club ground was estimated to be worth £2,500, or £300,000 in modern value. There are few first-hand reports but it is said that founding member John H. Walsh first offered to exchange his pony roller for a life membership of the Club for his daughter. A Lady's or Gentleman's Membership was then valued at one guinea (about £100 today), with the aforementioned Life Subscription costing 10 guineas. Further records of the era are not known but records show that Walter Hayward Peel retained his croquet title.

John H. Walsh, who had chaired the inaugural meeting in The Strand and who had now become Club Secretary, generously followed up on the offer of his pony roller to The Club, with the actual pony being sold on to them as well for the sum of £23. A story has circulated for years, which has no historical evidence, that the need to raise funds for the repair of this pony roller – in order to maintain the croquet lawns – was the reason for staging the first Lawn Tennis Championships. A similar roller for the Nursery Lane Grounds can still be seen on the Club's modern site, near the Museum building.

A man known only as 'Mr. C. Black' won the fourth croquet title, with Mrs J.H. Walsh taking the ladies' event.

In a confident move, the lease on the Worple Road ground was renewed for a further 10 years, at a cost of £100 a year. It was in December of this year that the first book of rules for the game was spoken of, being compiled by a Welsh army officer called Major Walter Clopton Wingfield. A party occurred in the December to which Wingfield later dedicated all of his rules booklets, promoted as The Major's Game of Lawn Tennis. A fan of many sporting endeavours, Major Wingfield was also an eccentric inventor, with a creative mind and boundless energy. He applied this entrepreneurial streak to sport, looking for ways to support his country estates and he was fascinated by this new racket sport, which could be played in the open air, away from the confines of an indoor arena.

In Club news, James Dunbar Heath won the croquet title.

Major Wingfield now applied for a patent for "a new and improved portable court for playing the ancient game of tennis", referring to the sport's storied past. He developed his rule book further, engaging with The Field magazine and its readers, creating a boxed set of the equipment needed to play – with balls, 'tennis bats', poles, pegs, netting, a mallet, a brush and the 'BOOK OF THE GAME'. This new phenomenon, now known simply as 'Lawn Tennis', began to catch the world's attention. Originating from the French 'jeu de paume' and the rather exclusive 'Real Tennis', the game's development accelerated with the advent of the lawn mower in 1830, allowing for flatter lawns with shorter grass. Influences from games such as 'Rackets' and the Basque 'Pelota' had already been seen, as clubs had already started to crop up in the UK, with these early adopters looking for a more rigorous exercise than provided by genteel croquet.

On 25 February the All England Croquet Club Committee made the decision to allocate one of the croquet lawns – interest in the sport had been on the wane – for the very purpose of playing this new sport of lawn tennis. Reginald Gray, from Bermuda but studying in London, was thought to be one of four men said to have played the very first game of lawn tennis on the ground early that summer. The court could also be used for badminton, the racket sport using shuttlecocks instead of balls, and the British game of ‘battledore and shuttlecock’. Marylebone Cricket Club, nine miles up the road had, on 29 May, issued its first set of ‘unified’ rules for this game of lawn tennis, as there were previously numerous versions being played. The Club chose to adapt these (an hourglass court, the use of real tennis scoring and only the server being able to win points) for the games being played on its lawns.

Early tennis adopter Reginald Gray went on to win the All England croquet title later in the summer season.

This new tennis phenomenon was really catching on now, with four new courts, or a whole terrace, being created, replacing croquet lawns. By the 29 June the Club saw the need to have a Committee member elected who would have exclusive responsibility for lawn tennis, and George Nicol was the man chosen for that role. Nicol was previously known as a croquet player, and was, in 1869, one of four men to all be considered an All England Croquet Champion, in the organisationally fragmented sport.

Colonel Busk won the croquet title.

A momentous year in Wimbledon’s history for two main reasons. Firstly, on 14 April the Club extended its name to become ‘The All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club’. Secondly, this name change was to be celebrated by the staging of its first lawn tennis Championships, beginning on Monday 9 July. There would only be a gentlemen’s singles event, with a field of 22, who each paid one guinea to enter, and a final to be played on 19 July. This 22-entry draw led to the strange situation of having three, rather than four, semi-finalists. There was a pre-agreed break in play on 13 and 14 July, due to the annual Eton v Harrow cricket match, played at Lord’s.

Using a now rectangular court and real tennis scoring methods the battles commenced on the 12 dedicated courts. The equipment for this first tournament was supplied by Jefferies and Co. of Woolwich, providing posts, nets and balls. The first final was won by Wimbledon local, Spencer Gore, beating William Marshall and walking away with a not unreasonable sum of 12 guineas, or £1,200 today. They were watched on a damp afternoon by around 200 spectators. On top of the financial reward, Gore received the highly valuable ‘Field Cup’, presented by The Field magazine.

Research through the Met Office shows us that the London weather between 9 and 19 July was generally mild and dry to begin with, followed by rain and wind in the middle and later period, with a final played on damp, slippery courts.

Wimbledon became a year-long commitment, as levelling work completed during the winter left the courts in rude health come the summer. The net height and the service line distances were also finessed and it is thought that the first attempts to introduce scoreboards were seen, if in an entirely unsatisfactory way! It is generally estimated that this was the year when the world first witnessed the overarm serve, debuted on the Wimbledon lawns courtesy of Dr. Arthur Thomas Myers, becoming widely adopted by the early 1880s.

As of this year it was decided that the holder of the trophy would not have to go through all that bothersome competitive tournament action but would simply turn up to play the winner of the 'All-Comers Singles' in the final, 'Challenge Round'. It would prove a popular idea (especially amongst the holders) and would stay in place until 1922. A whopping 700 people watched Frank Hadow steal victory from local man, and reigning champion, Spencer Gore in the aforementioned Challenge Round, the effective 'final'.

Warm and dry weather was enjoyed throughout London for the whole tournament from 15 to 20 July.

With all the change in recent history, 1879 was a reasonably uneventful third year in Nursery Lane, although crowds swelled and the event continued to grow in popularity, boasting 45 players in the main field. One notable change saw balls and court equipment being supplied by the company 'Ayres' for the first time. Ayres were a renowned sporting goods firm, dating back to 1810, having built their reputation in the world of archery. Spectators were also able to shelter from the weather under thatched summer houses, with open sides, which had originally been erected for the croquet players.

Over a thousand people watched the All Comers Final between John Hartley and the wonderfully named Vere St. Leger Goold. Goold was a colourful character to say the least, who took his own life on Devil's Island – the penal colony of Cayenne – as he served a life sentence for murder. Victorious Hartley went on to take the main trophy without playing a Challenge Round as the holder, Frank Hadow, had decided not to defend his title. The Committee rejected the suggestion to stage a Ladies' Singles Championship.

The tournament period from 7 to 16 July was generally cool in London with intermittent rain throughout.

Having commenced with the supply of balls and equipment in the previous year, Ayres now provided two movable stands, constructed and erected to the side of a 'centre court', in the middle of the ground. They also provided the first scoring boards and had their name emblazoned all over these constructions, in a promotional way that would never be seen again in Wimbledon's history. Crowds continued to grow, as 1,300 packed in to watch the Challenge Round, in which John Hartley retained his trophy, to gather up his final major title. The powers-that-were fiddled a little more with the actual rules of lawn tennis, most notably with the introduction of the 'let' service, when the ball clipped the net before landing in.

The tournament period from 15 to 20 July was cool with generally light but regular rain across London.

The growth continued, with further temporary stands erected around the previous year's idea of a principal 'centre court', now covering three sides of the playing area in the middle of the Grounds. These were logically named 'Stands A, B and C'. The hefty constructions were in place for the tournament from 2 to 13 July and were then stored down the road in sheds for the winter. With popularity soaring, the Club decided to purchase the freehold of the ground, for a not insubstantial amount of £3,000 – the equivalent of £300,000 in today's market – to be paid in instalments over the coming years.

William Renshaw won the first of his Gentlemen's Singles Championship titles, defeating John Hartley, for the loss of just two games. Renshaw, along with his brother, Ernest, would be seen as instrumental in the coming years for transforming tennis from a pastime to a popular competitive, and spectator, sport. They were a charismatic pair, with engaging personalities and a truly original lawn tennis style.

It was also a significant year for lawn tennis as it marked the first staging of the US National Championship (the future US Open) event, which would soon make up one quarter of the tennis majors, or all together, the 'Grand Slam' (alongside Roland-Garros, the Australian Open and The Championships at Wimbledon). The first event was held on grass courts in Newport, Rhode Island (moving to New York in 1915) and the gentlemen's singles was won by Richard Sears.

Hot weather was enjoyed in London at the start of tournament, which was held from 2 to 13 July, before some light rain and cooler temperatures towards the end.

A tipping point was reached when the Club decided to drop the word 'Croquet' from its title, such was the increasing popularity of this phenomenon known as 'lawn tennis', with the former no longer being played on the Grounds after this season. 'The All England Lawn Tennis Club' continued its upward surge, with over 2,000 attending the Challenge Round. They were not disappointed as William Renshaw defeated his twin brother, Ernest, in a nail-biting five-set final.

Records show that London experienced cool weather throughout the tournament, from 8 to 17 July, with regular showers and some strong winds towards the end of the period.

With professionalism the order of the day, the Club purchased a new heavy roller and, no doubt as a result, a new horse to do the hard graft. The investments were paying off with another 25 per cent jump in attendances as a crowd of 2,500 watched the final, once again played out between the Renshaw twins, once again running to five sets and once again being won by William, for his third on the trot. This would turn out to be the last year that only temporary stands would be used.

London experienced cool temperatures between 7 and 17 July, with rain over the weekend seeing the final, Challenge Round, delayed.

A momentous year for the Club with the launch of a Ladies' Singles Championships, to be played after the conclusion of the Gentlemen's Singles Championship. There was a field of 13 with young Maud Watson coming from a set down to beat her big sister, Lilian, in the final. She walked away with a silver flower basket as first prize, which she had chosen as there was no ladies' trophy for the first two years it was staged. The creation of this event established tennis as a liberating sport for women. It was not the only exciting new discipline to be introduced, being joined by a gentlemen's doubles, or 'four-handed', competition in which 10 pairs contested. Talented twins William and Ernest Renshaw came out on top, receiving a cup donated by Oxford University.

You hadn't previously needed to be British to enter the tournament, but it had certainly helped, as no other nationalities had previously bothered competing. That all changed in 1884 with three competitors in the gentlemen's singles taking the boat across the Atlantic – James Dwight, Arthur Rives and reigning US Open champion Richard 'Dick' Sears. They no doubt enjoyed the experience but couldn't prevent home favourite William Renshaw walking away with the trophy... again. An estimated 2,500 spectators, packed four or five deep, watched the Challenge Round, in spite of the dark clouds overhead.

The laborious process of flat-packing (increasingly large) stadia and storing them in sheds was addressed as Centre Court Stand A was given 'permanent covered structure' status, now sitting proudly in place all year round.

Intermittent and occasionally heavy rain disrupted play throughout.

Following the promotion of Stand A to permanent status the Club tethered down the other two, creating a loosely U-shaped collection of three structures, kept in place all year round.

The court-covering tarpaulin, one day becoming such an iconic vision of a rainy day in Wimbledon history, was introduced by the Club this year. The Centre Court had been re-laid, with the best Tooting turf, and had not been played on before the meeting.

The 'Bagnall-Wild method' of creating a draw was amended so that byes were now only given in the first round.

A large and vocal crowd of 3,500 crammed into the new permanent stands for the Gentlemen's Singles Challenge Round, watching William Renshaw beat Herbert Lawford to claim his fifth title. It was reported in sporting magazine Pastime as an "unusually loud and enthusiastic crowd for a lawn tennis meeting". In the ladies' event Maud Watson retained her title.

The weather was best described as 'unsettled' during The Championships, with a mixture of sun, showers and cooler days.

The U-shape created by the three independent, now permanent, stands surrounding the Centre Court was further developed, with corners added to make for a large, continuous construction for the increasingly lawn tennis-loving public. For the first time a section was partitioned off for the sole use of the press, recording the action for a wider audience. A terrace, soon to become 'Stand D', was added to the permanent A, B and C, boasting five raised tiers and allowing over 500 standing spectators to view. All fans could watch with less trepidation as large 'stop nets' were added at the end of each court to catch any wayward balls. These balls were, for the first time, 'Championship' balls, supplied by Ayres especially for this meeting. Refreshments were now being served in the pavilion.

On the courts, a Challenge Round was introduced for the ladies' singles and the gentlemen's doubles. The gentlemen's singles was once again won by William Renshaw, for a sixth on the trot – an all-time record which still stands to this day. A new ladies' singles trophy was first presented, the 'Venus Rosewater' dish, a mythologically themed sterling silver salver, partly gilded and 18.75 inches in diameter. It was won by Blanche Bingley, later known as Blanche Hillyard.

The weather was a mixed bag; initially delightfully warm and sunny with a cool breeze, before clouds moved in, meaning the Challenge Rounds were affected by rain.

The decision was made to run the two newest events – ladies' singles and gentlemen's doubles – concurrently with the gentlemen's singles, rather than following it. This created a kind of festival of lawn tennis, in the way we enjoy in the modern era.

The ladies' singles celebrated this promotion to the main stage by providing the tournament's most intriguing story as Great Britain's Charlotte 'Lottie' Dod became the youngest-ever winner, at the incredibly tender age of 15 years and 285 days. The sporting all-rounder from Cheshire also excelled at golf, hockey and archery, in which she won a silver medal at the 1908 Olympics. She is still the youngest Ladies' Singles Champion to this day, even if Martina Hingis bested her by three days when winning the ladies' doubles title in 1996 with Helena Sukova.

Almost more incredibly, the gentlemen's singles was not won by William Renshaw, his six-year run coming to an end after he suffered a bout of, you guessed it, tennis elbow. His brother Ernest stepped ably up for the final but lost to Herbert Lawford. Lawford became the first winner to lift the new 18-inch high silver gilt trophy, which replaced the Field Cup (1877–1883) and the Challenge Cup (1884–1886). These were both now in the permanent possession of William Renshaw after he won each three times in succession. The decision was taken that the new trophy would never become the property of the winner. The inscription on the front of the Cup read, "The All England Lawn Tennis Club Single Handed Championship of the World".

The weather remained very warm throughout, interspersed with cooler, breezier spells.

This year saw the advent of a Wimbledon tradition which would become synonymous with the tournament across the world: bad weather seriously interrupting, or even totally stopping, play. Atrocious conditions in the week running up to the start of the meeting saw the start date moved from the Saturday to the following Tuesday, delaying the unveiling of some lovely new gates at Nursery Road.

Ernest Renshaw went on to win his one and only Gentlemen's Singles Championship title on decidedly sodden courts, but in front of an impressive crowd of 2,000. Lottie Dod won the second of her five, from a field of just six in the ladies' singles, as the poor weather conditions continued for that event and the gentlemen's doubles.

A year of rebirth and modernisation, with the Club embracing the idea of the Grounds as a destination and pleasurable idyll in themselves. Shrubs and flower beds were added, the pavilion was redecorated and the stands were repainted, creating an altogether more pleasing tournament experience. After the previous year's less than clement weather, the drainage system of the lawns was also greatly improved.

On court, normal service was resumed as William Renshaw took the gentlemen's singles title home for a seventh time, at the expense of his brother again, a record that would be equalled by Pete Sampras in 2000 and beaten by Roger Federer in 2017. Renshaw's unprecedented success sparked a massive rise in interest in the sport and he came to be known as the 'founding father of tennis'. Together with his twin, Ernest, they are seen to have introduced the hard serve, the smash and aggressive volleying – forming the bedrock of the modern game.

Lottie Dod did not defend her Ladies' Singles Championship title, which she had won for the previous two years, due to an unwillingness to move a yachting holiday which she had booked with her sister on the west coast of Scotland.

The weather was delightful for the start of the event, becoming a little gloomy for the final rounds.

Very much 'The Year of the Irish', as all three titles were won by players from the Emerald Isle. Willoughby Hamilton defeated the returning William Renshaw in the gentlemen's singles, Joshua Pim and Frank Stoker took the doubles title and Lena Rice won the ladies' singles, in what would be smallest ever field for a Wimbledon competition, with only four entrants.

The weather was once again an irritation, leaving the courts – despite the use of tarpaulin covers – in a poor condition. Slight improvements were seen towards the end of the event.

Over the Channel, the 'Championnat de France', or the 'French Open' or 'Roland-Garros' as it would eventually become, was started, with entrance only open to members of French tennis clubs. This first event was won by a Briton, known only as 'H. Briggs'. The event would make up one quarter of the tennis 'Majors', or 'Grand Slam', when grouped together.

Back in London, a refreshed Lottie Dod won her third title, whilst Wilfred Baddeley won his first singles with a win in the All-Comers final over Joshua Pim, as Willoughby Hamilton did not defend his title in the Challenge Round. Baddeley then teamed up with his younger brother Herbert to win the first of their four doubles trophies.

Average weather with rain once again an unfortunate and regular presence for the tournament's climax.

Not much change was seen around the Grounds in 1892, although a scheduling change meant that it was the first year in which all events were played concurrently.

On court Wilfred Baddeley won his second gentlemen's singles title, beating Irishman Joshua Pim, who had taken part in what was considered to be one of Wimbledon's finest-ever matches in the All Comers' Final, beating Ernest Lewis in a match of the highest quality watched by an excited crowd. In the ladies' event, Lottie Dod won for an impressive fourth time.

After a warm run-up to the event the weather became much cooler, remaining changeable throughout.

A reduction in the price of tickets for the stands did not avert a slight drop-off in sales, although attendances remained at a generally healthy level. The Grounds continued to be improved, for this year's tournament a full repaint of the stands was taken on. Lottie Dod won her fifth and final ladies' title and Joshua Pim avenged his defeats in the previous two finals to beat his former conqueror, Wilfred Baddeley, for his first title.

The weather was initially overcast, with blustery winds and occasional downpours, but improved as the tournament went on.

The cosmetic appearance of the Grounds continued to improve, with new fencing and shrubbery all over. Elsewhere, three new baths were added as well as the introduction of a new-fangled 'shower bath'. Blanche Hillyard won her third title in the ladies' event while in the gentlemen's Joshua Pim once again proved too strong for Wilfred Baddeley in the Challenge Round.

The weather was average throughout, with frequent showers in the evenings and blustery winds affecting both Challenge Rounds.

Princess Stephanie of Austria and Prince Edmund Batthyany-Strattmann became the first Royal visitors to Wimbledon, starting a tradition which would remain a part of The Championships to the modern day. Whilst remaining popular, the event was not actually growing and the meeting was not an overall financial success, declaring a loss of £33, or roughly £4,000 in modern money.

After its effective introduction in 1885, a brand-new, much larger court-covering tarpaulin was introduced for Centre Court, sending the old one into semi-retirement on the outside courts. Gentlemen's Singles Champion Wilfred Baddeley's medal displayed an early version of the Club's crossed rackets emblem. The ladies' singles event was won by Charlotte Cooper (later Charlotte Sterry) for the first of her five triumphs.

The weather was fine, but blustery to start, getting much warmer, with the wind remaining a nuisance.

A new event was introduced, designed to give defeated players from the early rounds something to compete for if it hadn't quite gone to plan. The non-Championship event, the All England Plate, was initially only for the gentlemen, and entry was reserved for those eliminated from the first and second rounds of The Championships. It would run until 1981. The inaugural event was won by Arthur Gore, and other illustrious winners in its history would include Herbert Baddeley, Neale Fraser and Gordon Forbes. A women's event would start in 1933 and run until 1989.

After the financial loss and slight perceived drop in popularity from the previous year, the exiled croquet players were invited to return to the Club, no doubt thankful for the subscriptions once again. This croquet comeback would not last long but was appreciated in an hour of need.

In a field of 31 entries, Irish-based Harold Mahony won his only gentlemen's singles title, whilst in the ladies', Charlotte Cooper won her second from a field of just seven.

A very warm start, before breezier weather moved in, with rain by the end.

The starting date of the meeting was brought forward from July to June, as another field of 31 battled for the gentlemen's singles title, as opposed to just seven in the ladies' singles once again.

Tuesday 22 June was celebrated across the country, including a six-mile procession through London, marking Queen Victoria's Jubilee, with no play taking place that day – in the first week – in recognition of the event. Reginald Doherty took the gentlemen's singles title, also winning the doubles with his younger brother, Laurence. The Doherty brothers (Reginald, the taller, affectionately known as 'Big Do' to Laurence's 'Little Do') picked up and ran with the precedent set by the Renshaw twins, dominating the game and taking it to a new, and international, audience. Their quiet manners and immaculate dress saw them referred to as 'the gentlemen of the courts'. Blanche Hillyard won her fourth title in the ladies' event.

A dull start on the weather front, before intermittent bursts of warm weather and breezy, rain-threatened days.

A healthy field of 37 gentlemen was once again without some of the prominent Irish players and the Baddeley brothers. In the Gentlemen's Singles Challenge Round Reginald Doherty beat his brother Laurence in a thrilling five-setter, although it was finished in bad light and was twice interrupted by rain. In the ladies' a record field of 18 started, with Charlotte Cooper Sterry winning the third of her five titles (she would also come runner-up six times).

A slightly gloomy and damp summer in Britain, as seen throughout The Championships.

After inviting the croquet players back to the club in 1896, it was decided to restore the name of the Club to 'The All England Lawn Tennis & Croquet Club'. A higher attendance was registered than seen in the previous few years.

In the ladies' singles, Blanche Hillyard won the fifth of her six titles (she would also be the runner-up a whopping seven times) and Reginald Doherty won his third on the trot in the gentlemen's event.

It was not yet given championship status, but a ladies' doubles event was added to the growing programme.

Unremarkable London weather, with no reported rain interruptions.

A fifth event was added to the growing schedule with the introduction of a (non-Championship) mixed doubles competition. Following on from the men in 1884, the ladies' event became an international one with Marion Jones becoming the first overseas competitor in the singles, as Blanche Hillyard won the last of her six titles. This cosmopolitan field caught the attention of the public, as more visitors than ever poured into the ground. Reginald Doherty was also starting to put together a bit of a run, as he took home his fourth successive gentlemen's singles title.

Rain repeatedly interrupted play at the start, improving throughout the week before a return for the final matches.

A new pavilion was built at a cost of £1,200 and proved a popular addition for the 25th Championships. There were also sartorial changes, as the male players' belts, braces and blazers were fashionably twinned with long blanket coats to be worn to and from the courts, known as 'Owe-40s'. On court, Arthur 'Baby' Gore won the first of his three titles at the entirely grown-up age of 33, defeating Reginald Doherty, who had been going for his fifth in succession. A record women's entry field of 31 saw Charlotte Sterry win the fourth of her five titles.

Changeable weather, with occasionally frustrating winds and bursts of heavy rain.

It was one of the more curious years in Wimbledon's history, in which a Challenge Round was played twice. Muriel Robb started her ladies' contest with Charlotte Cooper Sterry on the Tuesday but the match was aborted at one set all (6-4 to Sterry, 13-11 to Robb) due to thoroughly foul weather. Rather than continue at one set all the next day the decision was made to start again on the Wednesday, this time Robb having a more comfortable ride, with a straight sets win, 7-5, 6-1. In the gentlemen's singles, 1898's losing finalist Laurence Doherty won his first title, in what would prove to be a five-year winning streak, something he also achieved in the doubles alongside his brother Reginald in 1897.

One of Wimbledon's most iconic names, Slazenger, became the official supplier of tennis balls to the tournament. Slazenger had been founded by two brothers, Ralph and Albert Slazenger, in 1881, specialising in rubber sporting goods, most particularly in golf and tennis. This would become the start of the longest partnership in sporting goods history – still in place to this day.

It had been a common occurrence in the early days of the event but this would be the last time that the four semi-finalists in the Gentlemen's Singles

All Comers were all British; Sidney Smith, Major Ritchie, George Caridia and eventual champion, Frank Riseley.

Olympic champion Laurence Doherty won the second of the five titles he won between 1902 and 1906 in front of a packed Centre Court crowd. Dorothea Douglass (later 'Lambert Chambers') was crowned Ladies' Singles Champion.

Poor weather in the run-up did not bode well, but the sun shone and rain did not interrupt as feared.

Centre Court grew again, with the addition of a 'D Stand', able to hold 600 chairs. The Grounds as a whole got a fresh look as each 'outside' court was surrounded by dark green canvas, allowing the players to view the white balls more clearly. A special tournament railway stop was erected, but the overall proximity to the tracks was not proving popular, with both players and spectators complaining about their clothes being soiled by smoke from the engines and difficulty in hearing the Umpires' announcements.

The year was also momentous for staging the only recorded occasion when a match was decided by the toss of a coin. It took place in a fifth-round match between Frank Riseley and Sidney Smith, locked at two sets all after a lengthy battle left them effectively tied at 26 games each. The reason given was that they were doubles partners and were worried they were damaging their chances of winning that event if they played for too long. The luckier of the two, Frank Riseley, battled on to reach the Gentlemen's Challenge Round, which he would lose against Laurence Doherty, watched by what was considered to be Wimbledon's largest-ever crowd. Dorothea Douglass was once again crowned Ladies' Singles Champion.

It would be the last year that croquet was played on the lawns of Nursery Road and the first time for Davis Cup matches.

Warm weather throughout with no reported rain delays.

The ladies' singles had its first winner from overseas, as May Sutton from the United States beat Britain's Dorothea Douglass in the Challenge Round. Sutton had actually been born in Plymouth, only moving to California when she was six years old, but there she excelled at tennis, winning the US Championships the year before at the age of 17, and she was also a gifted basketball player. Laurence Doherty retained his gentleman's singles title for a fourth on the trot.

1905 was the year which saw the first Australasian Championships, which would one day become the Australian Open. This would be the final event in the four-tournament series of 'Majors', which would now become known as the 'Grand Slam'.

Good weather to start was followed by a washout on the Friday with better weather to finish.

A sizeable investment was made in the enlargement of the stands around Centre Court, paving the way for what was estimated to be a record attendance. The Royal visits continued with Wimbledon welcoming the Grand Duchess Anastasie and Grand Duke Michael of Russia to the tournament.

Reginald Doherty's younger brother and losing finalist in 1898, Laurence, had quietly been putting together quite a run, this year taking home the gentlemen's singles trophy for the fifth year on the trot, besting his brother's winning streak by a year. The fraternal Doherty partnership also landed their eighth gentlemen's doubles title, a record still in place today. They came to be seen as the first great international stars of lawn tennis – boasting a career record of nine singles and eight doubles between them, plus four Davis Cups as the leading lights of the Great Britain team. Laurence had also become the first overseas player to win the US Championships in 1903. Dorothea Douglass was crowned Ladies' Singles Champion again.

Friday was once again a washout, with the rest of The Championships enjoying fairly favourable weather.

The latest in a line of Royal visits saw the nation's very own Prince of Wales, and future King George V, visiting The Championships along with his wife, the Princess of Wales – the first attendance from the home nation's monarchy. The momentous event was greeted by a rare summer thunderstorm. On top of the visit, he also found time during the day to accept the Presidency of the Club itself. Following on from May Sutton's win in the ladies' event in 1905, the first great Australian player, Norman Brookes, won the gentlemen's singles, from a whopping field of 84, becoming the first overseas man to achieve the feat, as well as the first left-hander. Brookes was also a top-class cricketer, golfer and a highly successful businessman. Sutton would also be the cause for raised eyebrows when, on the way to her victory in the Challenge Round against Dorothea Chambers, she rolled up her shirtsleeves, revealing her wrists. For the ladies, conventions were strict, with attire on a tennis court similar to dress worn during the day.

The ladies' doubles non-Championship event was discontinued, remaining off the schedule for the next five years.

Fine weather at the start and end, with rain interrupting in the middle period.

It was a remarkable event for the fact that not one drop of rain fell from the first day, 22 June to the last, 3 July. Another remarkable achievement occurred in the ladies' singles when the four-time winner, Great Britain's Charlotte Sterry, took her fifth title at the age of 37 years and 282 days – the oldest player to achieve this. The gentlemen's event was won once again by Arthur Gore.

The fourth modern Olympics were held in Great Britain and the Wimbledon site was chosen as the setting for the 'outdoor' lawn tennis event, one of 13 venues for an incredibly lengthy games, which ran from 27 April to 31 October. In addition to the grass court lawn tennis event there was also a 'covered court' event, held on wood at the Queen's Club in London. Britain won gold medals in both the ladies' and gentlemen's singles, both indoor and outdoor. For the latter this was thanks to Dorothea Lambert Chambers (from a final field of just five) and Major Ritchie, on the lawns of Wimbledon.

A dry and fine weather report throughout the tournament.

After the aridity of 1908, it was almost to be expected that 1909 should be one of the wettest Wimbledons on record, leading to play being extended into a third week for the first time in its history. Construction work had been going on all over the Grounds, with Centre Court having both a new stand and, for the first time, a clock on display. Another sizable aesthetic change saw the Club adopt its now ubiquitous colour scheme of green and purple for the first time. Whilst the exact reason for the choice is not known for sure, these original colours – blue, yellow, red and green – were almost identical to those of the Royal Marines colours, necessitating a change. The romantics liked to believe that the choice was inspired by “Wimbledon’s green and impurpled Hills”, a phrase used in a poem by William Blake, who was known to reference south London and Surrey regularly in his work.

Another phrase destined to be associated with The Championships forever, ‘Order of Play’, was first seen on the back of the programme, now available for sale in the Grounds. Not to be outdone by the ladies of the previous year, 1909 also featured the oldest player to win the singles title, when Arthur ‘Baby’ – the nickname was becoming ridiculous – Gore, won the last of his three titles at the tender age of 41 years and 182 days. He is still the oldest player to achieve the feat. Britain’s Dora Boothby won her one and only ladies’ singles title.

The improvements to the Grounds continued swiftly with an extensive plan to pave and concrete all the pathways. The year would also mark the first (and most certainly not the last) time that the Gentlemen’s All Comer’s Singles would be contested by two overseas players, New Zealand’s Anthony Wilding defeating America’s Beals Wright before edging Great Britain’s Arthur Gore in the Challenge Round. In the ladies’ singles, Olympic champion Dorothea Lambert Chambers won her fourth of seven.

Poor weather once again proved to be a problem for The Championships after a fine start, with rain and windy conditions.

The Grounds and court improvements continued, with an entire repaint on the stands and Centre Court having a tent-like rain cover fitted, allowing water to run off into drains running along the side of the court. The sight of this triangular construction raising up on its winch would become synonymous with Wimbledon over the rainy days in years to come.

A Championships memorable for the excellent weather enjoyed during the entire second week was also competitively red hot on the courts, as over 100 players entered the gentlemen’s singles – a new record. The event was won again by the popular New Zealander Anthony Wilding. The future world No.1 would prove to be his country’s only winner of a Major title at the time of writing. Dorothea Lambert Chambers once again triumphed in the ladies’ event.

Those in attendance on the second day also witnessed history in the making, as Great Britain’s Harold Bache became the first recorded player to hit a double-handed shot – in this case the backhand.

The suave fan-favourite Anthony Wilding once again triumphed in the gentlemen’s singles, beating Britain’s Arthur Gore for the second time in the showpiece event. Gore had also been serving as President of the Club for this and the previous year. In the ladies’ event Dorothea Lambert Chambers did not defend her title, as badminton specialist Ethel Larcombe beat five-time champion Charlotte Sterry.

Another wet Wimbledon, with rain on most days, leaving play well behind schedule and a tournament finish carried over to the third Monday.

There had been drama even before the tournament started when, on a February night, suffragettes attempted to set fire to the Centre Court stands. Fortunately, an alert night-watchman spotted the intruders just in time, but this still led to increased security at the tournament and delays as bags were searched.

Up until this point the meeting had been known as 'The Championships', but this was the year that the title was amended to 'The World's Championships on Grass' – which would last until 1923. The rather grandiose title had been bestowed on the tournament by the newly formed International Lawn Tennis Federation, and it was awarded to the British Isles in perpetuity, in honour of services to the game over the years.

In the packed Grounds the crowds enjoyed near perfect weather, with a reported 10,000 people present on the second Friday alone, as fans jostled for tickets to the Gentlemen's Challenge Round, changing hands for over £7, or £800 in today's climate. They witnessed Anthony Wilding win an impressive fourth on the bounce. A special tram service also now ran between Wimbledon station and the Grounds, as spectator numbers left the site often 'packed to suffocation'.

On the courts the mixed doubles and a newly revived ladies' doubles were upgraded to Championship status, but both events had finals which were hampered by bad luck. In the mixed doubles, Ethel Larcombe was struck in the face by a ball and forced to retire, an injury which also prevented her from defending her singles title in the Challenge Round, which was won for the sixth time by Dorothea Lambert Chambers. In the ladies' doubles the eminent Charlotte Sterry suffered a leg injury and sadly could not complete the match.

Following in the footsteps of Harold Bache two years earlier, Mrs A.A. Hall became the first woman to use a double-handed backhand at The Championships.

A tournament of perfect weather was enjoyed by the large crowds.

Major construction work to Centre Court's stands, with a covered passageway underneath, increased the court's seating capacity from 2,300 to 3,500. Two residential houses adjacent to the ground, on Worple Road, were purchased and converted into ladies' dressing rooms and a Club Office, with the two gardens converted to form part of the public tea lawn. The lawns were the source of some controversy, as the price of a cup of tea and a piece of cake was upped from five old pennies to six old pennies (just over £2 to just over £3). In the first reported case of illegal advertising a balloon promoting a well-known Sunday newspaper was seen hovering over the Grounds, much to the annoyance of competitors, and was promptly removed.

Poor weather at the end of the meeting once again saw the conclusion being held over to the third Monday, as Dorothea Lambert Chambers won the last of an incredible seven singles titles and Norman Brookes the second of his two gentlemen's. It would be the last tournament for five years, as the world stood on the brink of war.

1915–1918: The First World War Years

The First World War ravaged Europe. Expenditure was strictly confined to items necessary for the reasonable maintenance of the Grounds, as the Club was only able to survive due to the generous donations of members and well-wishers. Many players were lost in battle, including the extremely popular serial champion Anthony Wilding. Wilding played first-class cricket and rugby union for Trinity College, Cambridge, and competed in motorcycling events, but his finest achievements were in lawn tennis. The New Zealander won four successive titles from 1910 to 1913 and lost in the 1914 final. A much-loved player at Wimbledon, his appearances were marked by lengthy queues at the ticket gates. On the outbreak of war, he was in the US preparing to play in the US Championships but returned to England and joined the Royal Marines. He was killed on the Western Front in 1915.

The tournament took on its new format of ‘last week in June, first week in July’. The first post-war event opened with a new stand to the side of No.4 Court, matched by an unprecedented public demand for tickets. The Championships was once again attended by the British Royal Family, as King George V and Queen Mary visited the Grounds twice.

Communication channels increased with a new style of programme, now printed on paper rather than cardboard.

On court the field in the gentlemen’s singles event was extended to 128, but required a stern statement from the Club’s Committee, saying that they reserved the right to refuse entries of players whose standard of play did not, in their opinion, justify their inclusion.

In the ladies’ draw a young Parisian woman named Suzanne Lenglen triumphed, saving two match points on her way to defeating serial champ Dorothea Lambert Chambers, in a match considered to be the finest yet seen at The Championships. The elegant Ms Lenglen would prove to be something of a regular winner herself, this being the first of the six singles titles claimed by a woman known as tennis’ first ‘superstar’. Lenglen was an uninhibited trailblazer and cultural icon, who dressed like a fashion model and played tennis with joyful abandon. It would be the first tournament in which all five Championships were won by overseas players. The gentlemen’s singles was won by the Australian Gerald Patterson.

The familiar spectre of poor weather for the finals reappeared, meaning the meeting ran over to the third Tuesday.

Efforts to extend the boundaries of the Grounds at Nursery Lane proved fruitless, with the space being bordered by the train tracks and adjoining properties not available to purchase.

An enterprise called the All England Ground Company Ltd was incorporated, which then purchased a new plot in Wimbledon Park Road – a stretch which would later be known as Church Road. It was seen as an audacious move at the time, amid forecasts that the venue would become a white elephant.

The Wimbledon crowd’s darling, Suzanne Lenglen, became the first-ever player to win all three titles – singles, doubles and mixed doubles – in the same year.

In the gentlemen’s event the similarly iconic Bill Tilden of the United States won the first of his three Wimbledon titles. Meanwhile, a selection committee was appointed to reduce the gentlemen's singles to a manageable 128, from the 150 players who entered.

Temperatures were average for the month, with little rain interruption.

This last meeting to take place at the original site ended in the most fitting way, as the iconic French player Suzanne Lenglen struck the final ball on the historic lawns of Centre Court during the ladies' doubles event. Having comfortably won the ladies' singles, Lenglen matched this achievement in the doubles, the third year in succession that she would win both titles. The gentlemen's event was won again by Bill Tilden.

As well as being the last year at the old location, the move also marked the last year of the Challenge Round system, in which the reigning champion would only play one match, against the winner of the All Comers' Event in the deciding match. The playing field would now be levelled, with all players, including the champions, playing from the start of the event.

The eccentric Frank Donisthorpe made an unusual piece of Wimbledon history, using an extraordinarily large racket, by far the biggest ever seen at The Championships. He lost in the second round to Andre Gobert of France.

On 9 September, around 1.5 miles due north, building work commenced on the new Grounds in Wimbledon Park Road. The Centre Court was built with reinforced concrete, using 3,000 tons of shingle, 1,700 tons of sand and 600 tons of cement. The seating alone accounted for over 21 miles of wooden slats. A disc of paper, just 20mm in diameter, was placed on the turf to check that it could be viewed from every seat, guaranteeing exceptional views for all. The position of the court and the roof also ensured that no shadow would appear until 7pm. There would be 12 additional courts, an enormous tea lawn and parking facilities for 400 cars. In the words of Club Secretary, George Hillyard: "Let us look to it that we construct and equip our ground that it will immediately be recognised as the finest, not only in England, but the world."

The new 13-acre ground at Wimbledon Park Road was opened at a cost of £140,000, close to £8 million in today's market. Capt. Stanley Peach designed the brand-new Centre Court (which retained its name even if it no longer occupied a central position within the Grounds), housing an impressive 9,989 seated and 3,600 standing up, which was scheduled to open on the first day, 26 June, at 2.45pm, in the presence of King George V and Queen Mary. Quite fittingly there was a short rain delay before, at 3.30pm, the King appeared in the Royal Box, gave three blows on a gong and declared the new Grounds open.

After the tarpaulin was removed, at 3.45pm Great Britain's Leslie Godfree served the first ball to his compatriot, Algernon Kingscote, who netted the return. Godfree dashed forward to pocket the ball as a memento of the historic occasion. Wet weather meant that play was not possible on other courts that day, and the tournament itself was affected by rain on every single day. The outside courts became a quagmire during the second week as the event was forced to run over until the third Wednesday – the latest-ever finish.

Australia's Gerald Patterson defeated Britain's Randolph Lycett in the gentlemen's singles final, while the incredible Suzanne Lenglen took to the new arena with ease, winning her fourth consecutive singles title and adding the doubles title again for good measure.

Dean Mathey of the United States became the first player to use a metal racket at The Championships. Using the racket in his first round match against Jean Washer of Belgium, he lost the first set 6-0. Reverting to a wooden racket, he won the match in four sets.

For the previous year's opening event there was only one 'Show Court' – Centre Court – and this year saw the addition of back-to-back courts, No.2 (with 1,900 seats) and a smaller No.3 next door, using some of the wood taken from the stands at the old Grounds. That old site was sold to the Wimbledon High School for girls, who still own it – using it as playing fields – to this day, with the school still supplying Ball Girls for The Championships. This would be the last year that the events were referred to as the 'World's Championships on Grass', with the United States Lawn Tennis Association now joining the International Lawn Tennis Federation.

A board was placed over the entrance to Centre Court, under which the players would pass, bearing an inscription from Rudyard Kipling's poem, If:

*"If you can meet with triumph and disaster
And treat those two imposters just the same."*

Record-breaking Frenchwoman Suzanne Lenglen once again met triumph and no disaster in both the ladies' singles and the doubles, the fifth time she would achieve this feat. The Gentlemen's Singles Championship was won by the American Bill Johnston.

A largely fine fortnight, some days very hot, was enjoyed after a rainy start.

A new showcourt – No.1 – was opened, situated on one side of Centre Court, with an overall capacity of 3,250, taking the number of arenas in total to 16. The largely three-sided stadium and architectural oddity would stay in place until 1996, when demolition started as part of the Club's 'Long Term Plan'.

A much-loved Wimbledon tradition, the ballot, was introduced for Centre Court, allowing all members of the public to a place in the draw for tickets. Other introductions from 1924, which have lasted to the modern day, included a re-styled official programme, with a cover, and the availability of seat cushions, making the wooden benches an altogether more appealing prospect.

On court the introduction of a rudimentary form of 'seeding' for the first time, in which four representatives of each nation were drawn into four different quarters of the draw, was first used. It was every bit as complicated as it sounded. Britain's Kitty Godfree took advantage of Suzanne Lenglen withdrawing through injury at the semi-final stage to take her first title, beating a young lady by the name of Helen Wills in the final. Frenchman Jean Borotra beat his compatriot Rene Lacoste in the gentlemen's final.

As the tournament's popularity grew, and the number of entries increased, the need for a Qualifying event became evident. The lawns had to be kept in pristine condition so it was decided that the event would be held in Roehampton, three miles up the road, in the week before the main events. Only the last eight survivors in the singles and the last four doubles pairs made it through to the main draw.

On court the meeting went into to the third Monday as the gentlemen's doubles was held over, allowing two of the competitors, legendary French players Jean Borotra and Rene Lacoste, to rest following their singles final, won by Lacoste. On that Monday the two adversaries teamed up to triumph in a lengthy five-set doubles final. Their compatriot, Suzanne Lenglen, returned to winning ways in her own inimitable style, once again triumphant in both the singles (she dropped just five games in her five matches) and the doubles for an incredible sixth time.

The first week was occasionally chilly, featured a very wet first Wednesday, before giving way to fine weather for the rest of The Championships.

Celebrating 50 years since the first tournament in 1877, the 1926 'Jubilee Championships' saw improvements and alterations for players, public and officials. Centre Court was re-laid, seats were added, drainage was improved and more entrances were put in place. A band played on Centre Court, before ex-singles champions were presented to King George V and Queen Mary, with each receiving a silver commemorative medal. The Royal connection was also seen on court, as the Duke of York, later King George VI, competed in the gentlemen's doubles event. The only Royal to compete in the tournament, he and his partner, Louis Greig, were comfortably beaten in the first round by a doubles pairing with a healthy combined age of 110.

The ladies' events saw great controversy as a scheduling mix-up saw Suzanne Lenglen arrive late for a second round match. The fact that Queen Mary was in attendance and had been kept waiting caused the previously popular Frenchwoman to be booed the next day when she played a mixed doubles match. She promptly withdrew from Wimbledon and never played there again. Her record at The Championships was an astonishing one. In winning 15 titles (six singles, six doubles and three mixed) Lenglen was victorious in 91 of the 94 matches she contested. Lenglen's only defeats were two in mixed doubles and one in ladies' doubles. In her absence, Britain's Kitty Godfree once again triumphed in the singles. The Gentlemen's Singles Champion was Jean Borotra once again.

A thunderstorm on the first Thursday was the only meteorological blip in a tournament of exceptionally fine weather.

It would be one of the wettest Wimbledon meetings on record, as heavy rain swept the area, affecting play on most days, and causing a programme extension to the third Tuesday. Despite tempestuous weather the tournament still enjoyed record crowds, with over 22,000 spectators present on the first Saturday alone, setting up a new Grounds record. Queues formed outside the Grounds from 5am and over 2,000 disappointed fans were turned away.

Technological advances saw a public-address system used from the Umpire's chair on Centre Court, as well as a first radio broadcast taking place on the BBC.

On court, all five Championships were seeded for the first time and an additional Qualifying competition was held in the north of England, for entrants from northern counties and Scotland.

For the first time, all of the players left in the last eight of the gentlemen's singles were from overseas. An even more notable milestone, in a sartorial sense, was reached in the ladies' singles when South Africa's Ruth 'Billie' Tapscott became the first woman to play without wearing stockings.

Henri Cochet won the gentlemen's title, one member of the so-called 'Four Musketeers' from France (with Jean Borotra, Rene Lacoste and the doubles specialist Jacques Brugnon). Brugnon aside, they would capture every Gentlemen's Singles Championship from 1924 to 1929. In the ladies' event, one Helen Wills would win the first title of what would prove to be many.

A whole raft of changes was made to the structure of the Grounds, with gangways and entrances, covers and staircases helping the space cope with an increasing public interest. To that end, the queue (which would one day be known simply as 'The Queue') became a more organised event, with barriers inside the fence in both Somerset and Church Roads extended to enable the public to group in variously priced lines. Adjoining land was purchased for use as car parks. During The Championships, the Frenchman Rene Lacoste beat his fellow Musketeer Henri Cochet, and Helen Wills won her second title, as she followed in the footsteps of her rival, Suzanne Lenglen.

Excellent weather was enjoyed throughout, barring rain on the first Tuesday.

Prince George (later the Duke of Kent) became President of the Club, beginning a long association with the Kent family. Again, more improvements were made, with a focus on the facilities for spectators and easier movement within the jam-packed Grounds. Electric scoreboards were installed for the first time on Centre Court, alongside electric clocks, and two former hardcourts were converted into two more grass courts – Nos. 15 and 16.

On court Colin Gregory became the first Englishman to be seeded in the Gentlemen's Singles, at number eight, although he would be defeated by one of the many rising French stars in the fourth round.

Henri Cochet defeated countryman Jean Borotra to claim his second title. In the ladies' singles, Helen Wills – the Californian nicknamed 'Miss Poker Face' by the media – continued in her attempt to match the dazzling 1920s achievements of Suzanne Lenglen on the lawns of Wimbledon, winning her third on the trot.

Aside from an afternoon's play being curtailed due to rain, fine weather was largely enjoyed throughout.

1929's new electric scoreboards were not to last, replaced swiftly this year by much larger ones, showing previous sets and games. Another new addition was added in the North Hall of Centre Court, as 'Martin's Bank Ltd.' opened its doors for business.

On the grass America's Wilmer Allison became the first unseeded player to reach the final of the gentlemen's singles. In sartorial firsts, Britain's Brame Hillyard became the first man to play wearing shorts – an event which took place on No.10 Court. Helen Wills was now Helen Moody, but the result was the same as she won the ladies' singles, for a fourth year on the trot.

Bill Tilden won the third of his three titles, 10 years after his first, at the tender age of 37. It would be his last Major victory before joining the newly formed professional tour.

Excellent weather was enjoyed throughout.

More improvements were seen as the wrought iron Doherty Memorial gates, celebrating the famous brothers, were erected at the south-east entrance of the Grounds. Elsewhere, the Ball Boys were given a rest room, near to the Referee's office, which must have been a blessed relief.

On court it was a remarkable year, as there was no Gentlemen's Singles final. America's Sidney Wood walked away with the trophy after his compatriot and good friend Frank Shields withdrew with an ankle injury, sustained in defeating Jean Borotra in the semi-final.

It would be the only time in tennis history that a Major final would be won by default. Wood had beaten a promising English 22-year-old called Fred Perry in four sets in the semi-finals. It would not be the last we would hear of the latter. The ladies' singles final was an all-German affair with Cilly Aussem beating Hilde Krahwinkel.

Incredibly, during a largely wet summer, no rain affected the tournament at all.

Another new stand popped up on the side of No.2 Court, the third of the so-called 'Show Courts'. For the first time the admission to the Grounds was reduced after 5pm, creating a kind of evening session that soon proved extremely handy for those coming straight from either work or school.

The Ball Boys were now all dressed in a new uniform of grey shirt, long grey trousers and grey felt hat.

In the ladies' singles world No.1 Helen Moody beat fellow American Helen Jacobs in the final. Californian Ellsworth Vines took the gentlemen's crown on his debut in the event, at the age of 21, comfortably defeating Britain's Bunny Austin.

Rain on the second Thursday was the only blip in a tournament of otherwise fine weather.

Another year of development, with a standing area added on No.1 Court, a tea bar, new turnstiles and car parking now able to accommodate 2,000 vehicles. With an increasing number of foreign visitors attending, an interpreter was positioned outside Centre Court to assist them. The international feel was seen on court as well, with players from 27 countries taking part in the meeting. There was also a sartorial milestone when Britain's Bunny Austin became the first man to play on the Centre Court wearing shorts – first seen on his countryman, Brame Hillyard, in 1930, but then on an outside court. The first All England Ladies' Plate was held, with players losing in the first two rounds qualifying automatically.

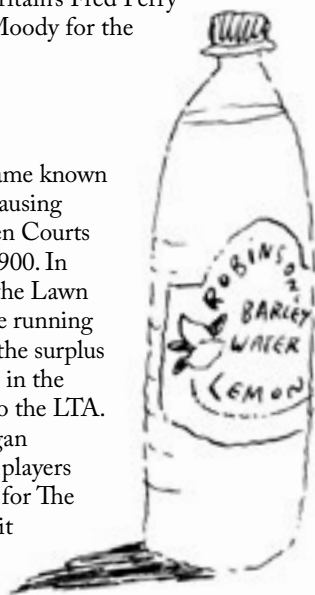

A fascinating – considered to be one of the greatest – gentlemen's singles finals saw Australian, 'Gentleman' Jack Crawford, already holder of the Australian and the French titles, add the Wimbledon crown to his collection in a fascinating five-set battle with Ellsworth Vines. The victor would come within one match of the fabled 'Grand Slam' weeks later when he reached the final of US Open, only to lose to Britain's Fred Perry in another five-setter. The ladies' title was claimed by Helen Moody for the sixth time.

Hot weather throughout the entire Fortnight.

It was a sickly tournament for the players as a virus, which became known as the 'Wimbledon Throat', spread through the locker rooms, causing widespread retirements. A new concrete stand was built between Courts No.2 and No.3, taking the capacity from 200 to a whopping 1,900. In administrative news, The All England Lawn Tennis Club and the Lawn Tennis Association (LTA) signed an agreement establishing the running of the tournament by a Joint Championship Committee, with the surplus takings each year going to the LTA. In addition, half the shares in the company which owned the Church Road site were also given to the LTA.

One of the tournament's most recognised partnerships began when Robinson's Lemon Barley Water was made available to players on Centre and No.1 Court. The drink was created exclusively for The Championships, made of British barley and lemon juice, and it would soon become a national favourite.

Britain's Eileen Fearnley Whittingstall made sure that it wasn't just the gents who were having all the fun in shorts, becoming the first lady to play on the Centre Court in a pair. The British success story continued as Dorothy Round and Fred Perry won the ladies and gentlemen's singles titles respectively, the first British double triumph since 1909. Huge crowds had endured an all-night wait to see Perry in his first singles final, as prices were not excessive and a ground pass enabled the first 2,000 to secure a place in the free standing area on the Centre Court.

Fine weather was enjoyed throughout the tournament.

The South Stand of Centre Court was enhanced by a long balcony, giving excellent views across all of the outside courts. Extra seating, tunnels, restaurants, lounges and bars were all added to the increasingly well-provided Grounds. For the players, a new restaurant was also built above the Referee's office.

On court Fred Perry triumphed again, beating Gottfried von Cramm (struggling with a leg injury) then teamed up with his compatriot, and the previous year's Ladies' Singles Champion, Dorothy Round to scoop the mixed doubles title as well.

Helen Wills Moody won her seventh title, with her victim being a fellow Californian, and frequent victim, Helen Jacobs. Jacobs did win it in 1936 when, with Wills Moody absent (she played no singles tournaments in 1936 or 1937, when she 'travelled extensively'), she won her only Wimbledon title.

Glorious weather was enjoyed throughout, apart from a storm on the first Tuesday which transformed courts into lakes and prevented play until late afternoon.

Fred Perry won Wimbledon for the third time, beating von Cramm for the second year in succession as he completed a hat-trick in successive years. His impressive feat was partly attributed to his exceptional fitness, no doubt helped by his regular training sessions with the Arsenal football team. The British public didn't know it then, but the wait for the next one would go on for a while – 77 years to be precise. It would also be the last on-court appearance for the popular Perry at SW19, as he would turn professional at the end of the season, making him ineligible for future Championships. The Ladies' Singles Champion was finally Helen Jacobs, who had been runner-up on four previous occasions.

There was rainfall on several days, including heavy downpours on the first Friday.

In August 1936, commentator Leslie Mitchell had presented the introductory BBC television programme to the public with the words:

"It is with great pleasure that I introduce you to the magic of television." Less than a year later matches from Wimbledon were televised on the BBC for the first time, limited to Centre Court, with just two cameras – one for close-ups and one for the overall court view. Coverage was limited to half an hour each day and it only reached an audience of a few thousand within a 40-mile radius of the BBC's transmitters in north London. The first match to be covered was between Bunny Austin and George Lyttleton-Rogers. The next day The Daily Telegraph reported: "You could observe every movement of the players and even the passage of the marks of the lawnmower over the grass were distinctly visible."

On court the American Donald Budge became the first man to win all three titles he could enter, matching Suzanne Lenglen's achievement from 1920. In the gentlemen's singles he beat the unfortunate German, Gottfried von Cramm, who lost in the final for the third successive year – a record in itself.

Largely good weather was enjoyed throughout, with only one day interrupted by rain.

After Donald Budge's clean sweep in the previous year the Americans were once again the dominant force, winning all five titles. Budge himself repeated his hat-trick and, having already won the Australian and French Championships, would win the US Championships in the late summer. He beat Britain's Bunny Austin in the final, the second time the Cambridge graduate had come within just a match of the title, after his first defeat in the 1932 showpiece.

The ladies' singles was won by Helen Wills Moody for the last time, making an incredible total of eight victories spanning 11 years. It would remain a women's record until Martina Navratilova eclipsed it in 1990.

A fine first week was followed by a problematic second, as gusty winds and rain led to frequent interruptions.

HM Queen Mary attended on the first and second days, as 70 overseas players battled it out in the draw. The inclement weather led to slippery courts, but it also proved to be a great leveller. It was to be another year of USA dominance as American players again took home all five trophies, competing against each other in the five all-American finals. The 21-year-old Bobby Riggs celebrated a first, and only, appearance at Wimbledon by winning the singles and the doubles, and then teaming up with Ladies' Singles and Doubles Champion Alice Marble to take the mixed doubles title as well.

The Fortnight was dogged by wind and rain, most particularly seen on the first Wednesday and the second Thursday.

1940-1945: The Second World War Years

The Championships did not take place during the Second World War, when the Club just about managed to remain open, despite the absence of many staff members, led by Acting Secretary Norah Cleather. The Grounds were used for a variety of civil defence and military functions such as fire and ambulance services, the Home Guard and a decontamination unit. Windows were painted black and boarded up. There was even a small farmyard on the site of the old car parks, where some of the land was ploughed to grow crops. Pigs, hens, ducks, geese, rabbits and a donkey were raised there to provide food.

Over 1,000 bombs fell on Wimbledon during the six years of war, destroying over 14,000 homes, with 16 hitting the Grounds. On the night of Friday 11 October 1940, five 500-pound bombs struck the area; one striking the Centre Court roof, one demolishing the tool house, one striking Church Road and two hitting the Wimbledon Park Golf Course, creating a couple of sizable new bunkers. The damage to the Centre Court would lead to the loss of around 1,200 seats for the first three meetings after the war. By the summer of 1945 the Grounds were back in use for the purpose of playing tennis, with various tournaments involving servicemen taking place and their finals being held on No.1 Court.

The Championships returned after seven years, with players from 23 nations competing. For economic reasons, very little work had been done to the Grounds, with building restrictions imposed by the Ministry of Works. Service personnel were used as Stewards for the first time, a tradition which has lasted to this day, and Ball Boys were now provided by Dr. Barnardo's Homes for the first time, having previously been supplied by the Shaftesbury Homes.

The break had not affected the popularity of the event, with London Transport announcing a marked increase in passengers travelling by bus from the nearby train and underground stations. It would be one of only two years (the other in 1947) when Wimbledon was held before Roland-Garros.

The Gentlemen's Singles Champion from 1939, Bobby Riggs, had since turned professional so did not defend his title, which was claimed by Yvon Petra, who would also be the last player to compete regularly in long trousers. The ladies' event was won by America's Pauline Betz.

A blissful fortnight of weather was enjoyed on the tournament's return.

A record-breaking year kicked off with a bang, as over 20,000 spectators crammed in on the opening day. The first Saturday would see that number go up even further, breaking another record for the event, with 30,000 inside the Grounds. In a year of firsts, American Jack Kramer became the first Gentlemen's Singles Champion to wear shorts, receiving the trophy from King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

The first boys' singles event was staged, won by Denmark's Kurt Nielsen, who would reach the gentlemen's final twice in the 1950s. America's Margaret Osborne won the ladies' title. The inaugural girls' singles event would take place the following year.

It was a tournament of mixed weather, including torrential rain on the first Friday, which caused severe flooding.

Records continued to be smashed, this time on the first Saturday as 33,000 were admitted to the Grounds. Debentures were sold, allowing the Club to carry out considerable repairs, rectifying wartime bomb damage. These ticket packages have continued to be issued to the public to this day.

Action on court was largely memorable for the fact that Louise Brough won the 'Triple Crown' – the ladies' singles, the ladies' doubles and the mixed doubles. The gentlemen's singles event was won by America's Bob Falkenburg.

The Games of the XIVth Olympiad took place in London weeks after the end of The Championships. Tennis would not feature in the calendar of events, having been dropped after 1924 due to political wrangling between governing bodies. The sport would not return as a full medal event until 1988.

Rain delayed the start of The Championships but the weather rapidly improved.

An event which was then viewed as 'The Greatest Wimbledon' kicked off with a bang as 25,000 attended on the opening day. After post-war renovation work had finally started, with building restrictions lifted, Centre Court had been restored to its former capacity, and glory, with seats also being added to other areas of the stands. Lines Women officiated on the Centre Court for the first time.

The Gentlemen's Singles Champion, America's pipe-smoking 'Lucky' Ted Schroeder, became the first champion to be presented with his trophy on Centre Court. You couldn't say he didn't deserve it, the top seed battled through five-set matches in four of the rounds, losing a total of eight sets, a record which stood for 36 years. In the final, which obviously went to five sets, he defeated the popular Czechoslovakian Jaroslav Drobny. He was also a runner-up in the doubles, no doubt exhausted by his efforts throughout the rest of the fortnight. Incredibly, it would be the only time he would play in The Championships.

In the ladies' event Louise Brough achieved the remarkable feat of playing in 117 games in one 24-hour period, as she completed three matches on the final day, winning her second singles and doubles double header.

Brilliant sunshine was enjoyed for the whole meeting.

The South Stand of the No.1 Court was extended to accommodate a new Competitors' Lounge and roof garden.

On court it was considered to be one of the most open Wimbledon tournaments, with a particularly strong field in the ladies' event, most notably from the all-conquering Americans.

Louise Brough demonstrated this by taking home the ladies' singles and doubles titles for an impressive third year on the trot in front of Queen Mary and the Duchess of Kent in the Royal Box. Her subsequent victory in the mixed doubles also gave her a second 'Triple Crown', marking her out as defining player of her generation. In the gentlemen's singles, her compatriot Budge Patty beat Frank Sedgman for his second Major of 1950.

The excellent weather was spoilt only by rain until late afternoon on the second Monday.

Players from 34 nations competed in the 65th staging of The Championships, which also threw up a couple of lesser-known winners. In the ladies' event the defending champion Louise Brough could not repeat her success, as Doris Hart won her one and only Wimbledon. She also won the doubles and the mixed doubles, having three years previously lost in all three finals. A few years later she took her place as one of the few players to win a 'Career Grand Slam' in singles, and is also one of only three players, all women, who won Majors at every possible event (singles, doubles, mixed doubles) at every single Grand Slam event. In the gentlemen's singles the American Dick Savitt won his second Major of the year, having already bagged the Australian title.

Rain on the second afternoon was the only interruption to the fine weather.

Representing the growth of the medium, a television interview room was constructed within the Centre Court complex.

For the first time the top eight seeds in the gentlemen's and ladies' singles reached their appointed places in the quarter-finals.

The ladies' event saw a first win for the American Maureen Connolly, who won her debut title at the youthful age of 17, defeating the reigning champion Louise Brough in the final. She had won the US Open the previous year at the age of just 16, earning her the nickname 'Little Mo'.

Frank Sedgman, who had won the gentlemen's doubles Grand Slam the previous year, took his one and only Gentlemen Singles' Championship title.

Rain completely washed out play on the second Thursday after an opening period of extreme heat.

1953: The Coronation Championships

In June over 7,000 spectators were admitted to the Grounds for free to watch matches played on No.1 and No.2 Courts between the Club and a team representing the Queen's Club and the International Club of Great Britain, to commemorate the Coronation.

Further celebrations for The Championships saw the balustrades of the Centre Court decorated with the crests of the LTA and The All England Lawn Tennis Club and the stadium being floodlit in the late evening.

Maureen 'Little Mo' Connolly, now coached by legendary Australian Harry Hopman, retained her title, which would become part of her incredible achievement in winning the Grand Slam, only the second player, after Donald Budge in 1938, to reach this pinnacle. The Gentlemen's Singles Champion was the American Vic Seixas. The gentlemen's singles proved especially memorable for a third round match between Jaroslav Drobný and the American Budge Patty, which eventually finished at 9.15pm. Drobný came through as victor 8-6, 16-18, 3-6, 8-6, 12-10 – a total of 93 games – a record in a singles match at Wimbledon at that time. To mark this outstanding occasion both players were presented with inscribed cigarette cases by Wimbledon's Management Committee. The tobacco-based gifts did not stop there as every single competitor received an ash-tray bearing a medallion commemorating the Coronation. A very hot first week was followed by much cooler weather, with some rain on the second Wednesday.

Boxes were provided at the exits from the Centre Court and No.1 Court to enable departing spectators to leave partly unused tickets for resale at a reduced price, in aid of the National Playing Fields Association. It is a tradition which has lived on, with various different charities benefiting over the years.

The ladies' singles was another thrilling affair as Maureen Connolly once again proved too hot to handle for her vastly experienced compatriot Louise Brough in the final. Her achievement would soon be overshadowed by an accident later that summer when the young Texan suffered a broken leg in a horse-riding accident, which would end her career. Connolly tragically died from cancer 15 years later, at the age of just 34.

In the gentlemen's singles the previous year's marathon man, Jaroslav Drobný, triumphed, beating the young up-and-coming Australian Ken Rosewall in the final.

A dry first week was broken when rain washed out the first Friday, followed by a mixed second week.

A considerable sum of £100,000 (almost £3 million in today's money) was spent on maintenance and improvements at the Grounds. The most spectacular innovation was the extension of the West Open Stand structure of No.1 Court, which provided a further 900 seats and considerable standing room. Underneath the extension three new restaurants were provided for the use of Officials, Umpires, Stewards and Club staff. Every seat in the Centre Court was modified by the provision of a curved back rest made of plastic.

The whole of the Centre Court structure was re-cemented, waterproofed and re-sprayed green. This entailed laying back the Boston Ivy creeper on special scaffolding away from the walls while the work was in progress, with over 3,500 nails later used to secure the creeper.

A new procedure in the issue of balls for the matches came into operation. Instead of new balls being provided at the beginning of each set, they were changed after the first seven games and each subsequent nine games, another rule which has stayed in place to this day.

The Americans once again reigned on court, with Tony Trabert and Louise Brough taking home the respective singles trophies. Ms Brough beat the only ever ambidextrous finalist, Beverly Baker Fleitz.

The only rain of the event came on the second Wednesday, when a great downpour interrupted play and caused some minor flooding. Sunshine was resumed for the rest of the Fortnight.

In the year that Independent Television first started its transmission from Wimbledon, one of the great gentlemen's singles finals took place as the increasingly dominant Australians marked their arrival on the world scene. Young Antipodeans Lew Hoad and Ken Rosewall had been nicknamed 'The Tennis Twins' when first arriving at Wimbledon on 1952, winning the doubles event in 1953, and repeated the trick this year. Fate was to lead them towards this, their one and only Wimbledon singles final, which proved to be a classic. Hoad came through in four sets for the first of his two titles, but Rosewall would never manage to take the trophy home. The popular Australian would win eight other Majors and reach the Wimbledon final on four occasions across 20 years.

America's Shirley Fry won the ladies' title, to complete her set of all four Majors – although not in the same calendar year.

Changeable weather, with some rain during the second week.

Queen Elizabeth II attended The Championships for the first time and presented the ladies' singles and the gentlemen's doubles trophies on court. The American Althea Gibson was the recipient of the ladies' singles at only her second attempt, the first black player of either sex to win the title, having the year previously become the first black player to win a Major title, at Roland-Garros. Gibson also won the doubles and was runner-up in the mixed doubles. At the Wimbledon Ball at the end of The Championships, Althea sang Billie Holiday's I Can't Give You Anything But Love to the crowd. The gentlemen's title was won once again by Lew Hoad.

During the gentlemen's doubles final Helen Jarvis of Croydon invaded the Centre Court, shouting and waving a banner in her campaign for a new world banking system, called the 'Life, Love, and Sex Appeal Party'. The message on the banner, rather confusingly, began with the words, "God Save Our Queen". The intruder showed great respect in sporting a white hat and flat white shoes so as not to damage the grass as she made her way to the centre of the court before being escorted away by the Referee and a policeman. The Queen watched the incident unfold from the Royal Box.

An opening day of rain and cold weather looked ominous before brilliant sunshine and high temperatures took over for the rest of the Championships.

Various improvements were carried out, including the construction of an LTA office, modernisation of the ladies' dressing rooms and the building of the competitors' lounge and even a 'writing room'. Approximately one third of the Centre Court roof was renewed.

In a rather wet fortnight the Gentlemen's Singles semi-finals were split between the Centre Court and No.1 Court for the first time. The event was once again dominated by the Australians, Neale Fraser and Ashely Cooper battling it out in a four-set final, won by Cooper in the year in which he would also win the Australian and US Opens, narrowly missing out on the Grand Slam when losing in the semi-finals of Roland-Garros. Althea Gibson retained her title, beating Britain's Angela Mortimer in the final.

One of the wettest first weeks on record, before improvements saw the tournament finish on time.

Much work was carried out on the Centre Court, including the completion of major work on the roof. An early version of a Wimbledon shop opened when a permanent book and photographic stall were built and situated in the Centre Court complex.

The Club made a first proposal to the LTA to make the Championships 'open' to all players, in the interests of lawn tennis. A vote on the subject the following year narrowly failed to be passed at a meeting of the International Lawn Tennis Federation.

In the Gentlemen's event a man called Rodney 'Rod' Laver made his first appearance in a final, losing to the American Alex Olmedo. The ladies' event was won for the first time by Maria Bueno.

A strike unfortunately prevented the daily order of play and results of matches being printed in the programme.

Steady rain on the first Wednesday was the only interruption to otherwise lovely weather.

On the first Saturday Jan Lehane of Australia became the first female player at The Championships to hit a double-handed shot – the backhand. Brazil's popular Maria Bueno would go on to win the second of her three titles, beating South Africa's Sandra Reynolds. In the gentlemen's event Rod Laver once again lost in the final, this time to compatriot Neale Fraser.

The Club Croquet Championship was revived after a lapse of 56 years, an event which would be dominated by Bernard Neal – the former tennis player Neal would soon bring a new meaning to the phrase 'serial winner'. The Englishman would lift the trophy on no fewer than 37 occasions between 1963 and 2002, before adding one more for good measure after that.

Three days of glorious sunshine to open, followed by many days interrupted by rain.

1961: The 75th Championship Meeting

The occasion was celebrated when the Club's President, Princess Marina (later the Duchess of Kent), chaired a lunch to celebrate 38 past and present champions. The distinguished gathering included 10 Gentlemen's Singles Champions and the four living British Ladies' Singles Champions, headed by Charlotte Sterry, who won her first singles title in 1895.

For the first time since 1914 two British players competed in the ladies' singles final, Angela Mortimer defeating Christine Truman to become the first British woman to hold the trophy aloft since 1937.

In the gentlemen's event Rod Laver finally won the Gentlemen's Singles Championship, having lost the previous two Wimbledon finals, beating Chuck McKinley in straight sets.

On the meteorological front, a period of extremely hot weather was enjoyed after a slightly damp start.

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth attended the tournament on the second Friday and presented the trophy to the Gentlemen's Singles Champion – the increasingly dominant Rod Laver – on court.

Months later he would add the US Open title which, having already won the other three Majors in the calendar year, would bring him the fabled 'Grand Slam'. Incredibly it would not be the last time he would achieve this. The ladies' event was won by America's Karen Susman, for her one and only Major singles title. It was also the first occasion when the Umpires of both singles finals were presented on court, another tradition which has lasted to this day.

There were plenty more structural changes, with a new press and television room and seating increased on No.1 Court.

Largely dull weather with occasional rain throughout the second week.

For the first time regulations laid down that competitors must be dressed 'predominantly in white' throughout. This would be taken a step further in 1995 when redefined as 'almost entirely in white'.

Defending champion Rod Laver was ineligible to compete as he had turned professional, leaving Chuck McKinley to take his one and only Major title. The ladies' event was won by Margaret Court, beating Billie Jean Moffitt (later King) and marking the latter's first appearance in a Wimbledon final.

A meeting which was generally cold, miserable and wet. Rain completely washed out play on the last Saturday, so the four finals were all delayed until the following Monday.

A huge order-of-play and results board was constructed over the tunnel entrance to the stands, allowing spectators to check out all the action at a glance. New entrances were provided into the Centre Court standing area.

The day of a first round match between South Africa's Abe Segal and American Clark Graebner went down in history. The match took place on a hot and sunny afternoon, just after the annual Umpires and Line Judges Championships' cocktail party. Play was held up when one of the Line Judges, Dorothy Cavis Brown, was thought to have fallen asleep. A Ball Boy unsuccessfully attempted to wake her up, leaving Segal to walk over and tap her on the shoulder. It worked, Segal won the match and Mrs. Cavis Brown was given a few days off from her duties.

For the first time a military band was engaged from noon onwards to entertain early arrivals to the Centre Court on both the finals days, with the balletic Maria Bueno winning her third and final ladies' singles title against her great rival, the outstandingly athletic Margaret Court. Roy Emerson won the first of his two gentlemen's trophies.

It was a fortnight of fine weather with the exception of rain on the second day and showers on the second Friday.

Members of the London Fire Brigade were used as Stewards in the Grounds for the first time. Poor weather and the resulting slippery conditions led to interruptions and lower attendances in the first week. Roy Emerson successfully defended his trophy, beating his fellow countryman Fred Stolle for the second year on the trot. Margaret Smith (later Court) beat defending champion Maria Bueno in the ladies' event. It was another all-Australian affair in the gentlemen's doubles with John Newcombe and Tony Roche defeating Ken Fletcher and Bob Hewitt. Fletcher then teamed up with Margaret Court to take the mixed doubles, against yet another Australian pairing, Tony Roche and Judy Tegart.

A wet first week gave way to splendid weather in the second.

After this year the Northern Qualifying competition in Manchester was folded into the Southern meeting, meaning all qualifying events would be held together at the Bank of England Sports Ground in Roehampton, the week before the main event.

Eugene Scott of the United States and Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia defeated Cliff Richey of the United States and Torben Ulrich of Denmark in a record first round gentlemen's doubles match of 98 games.

On the third day, Australian Gail Sherriff defeated her younger sister Carol in the second round of the ladies' singles on No.14 Court, 8-10, 6-3, 6-3, to record only the second occasion two sisters had ever met in the event. Billie Jean King went on to win her first ladies' singles title, defeating Maria Bueno in the final, as Spain's Manuel Santana won the gentlemen's title. Santana had allegedly shown his lack of enthusiasm for the surface before the event when becoming the first player to be attributed with saying that "grass is for cows".

An unsettled opening period experienced rain most days before a largely dry second week.

In February, Barkers Sports Ground – to the north of the Club – was purchased by the All England Lawn Tennis Ground Ltd for £150,000 (the equivalent of £2.7 million now). The space was then let to the London New Zealand Sports & Social Club and would later be known as 'Aorangi Park', with Aorangi ('Cloud in the Sky') being the Maori name for Mount Cook, New Zealand's highest mountain.

The very first colour television transmission in this country took place on the first Saturday, when BBC2 showed a four-and-a-half-hour programme from the Centre Court, commencing at 2pm. The first match shown was South Africa's Cliff Drysdale versus Britain's Roger Taylor, with further transmissions in colour being made each afternoon of the following week, and a highlights programme shown each evening.

It would prove to be a bumper tournament, with a record 301,896 spectators attending The Championships over the two weeks.

A first major 'professional tennis' event, The Wimbledon World Professional Championships, took place in August, sponsored by the BBC to mark the introduction of colour television. They were staged on the Centre Court over three days, with eight players competing for total prize money of £12,500. Rod Laver beat his fellow Australian Ken Rosewall in the final of an event which would have a major effect on the campaign for 'open tennis'. In December the Annual General Meeting of the LTA voted overwhelmingly to abolish the distinction between amateur and professional players.

In the autumn the Grounds were used to film part of the movie Nobody Runs Forever, which starred Rod Taylor, Christopher Plummer and Lili Palmer.

Excellent weather for the Fortnight after a damp first day.

The International Lawn Tennis Federation yielded to pressure and allowed each nation to determine its own rules regarding amateur and professional players. This signified the start of the period known as 'Open Tennis' and making it the first time The Championships was open to all categories of players, including professionals, with prize money on offer. The tournament was the second Major to do this after Roland-Garros a few weeks before. Prize money available totalled £26,150 (the equivalent of about £450,000 in today's market), although only about half of it was actually paid, as the amateurs competing could obviously not receive their allocated winnings.

The attendance was down by 24,000 owing to a rail 'go-slow', industrial action from the Union of Railwaymen, which worsened as the days passed and caused chaos across the nation.

The American Herb Fitzgibbon defeated the Yugoslavian Nikola Pilic in the gentlemen's singles first round, becoming the first amateur to overcome a professional at the tournament. In the Ladies' Championships Billie Jean King won the title for the third year running.

Independent Television (ITV) covered The Championships for the last time.

The first week was one of the wettest on record with an enormous backlog of matches. However, a dramatic change in the weather combined with a 1pm start on three days enabled The Championships to miraculously finish on time.

Ball Boys were now provided by local schools, in a tradition which has lasted through to the modern day.

The second week's play was reorganised so that the finals of the ladies' singles and gentlemen's doubles were played on the Friday and the finals of the gentlemen's singles, ladies' doubles and mixed doubles were played on the Saturday. This practice continued until Sunday play began in 1982.

America's Richard 'Pancho' Gonzales and compatriot Charlie Pasarell contested a high-quality first round gentlemen's singles match of 112 games – an all-time record at that point, which spanned two days, lasting five hours and 12 minutes. Gonzalez, at 41 years old a healthy 16 years older than his opponent, came from two sets to love down to win 11-9 in the fifth.

Britain's Ann Jones won the ladies' title, becoming the first left-handed female to do so. Rod Laver of Australia won the gentlemen's singles for the fourth time, two months before his win in the US Open brought him the 'Grand Slam' for the second time, the only player to ever achieve this feat.

A complete washout of the first day was followed by near perfect weather for the rest of the Fortnight.

Several alterations were carried out, including a new press restaurant, radio commentary boxes on the Centre Court, new roofing on No.1 Court stands and work on No.2 Court providing standing room for 1,000 people.

The Ladies' final was a nail-biter, as Margaret Court defeated Billie Jean King in two lengthy sets for her 19th Grand Slam win and her third and final Wimbledon. It was televised in colour and described by commentator John Barrett as "one of the most dramatic finals ever seen at Wimbledon". In the gentlemen's event John Newcombe won his second title, in front of a crowd rooting for his opponent, when he overcame Ken Rosewall in the final. The elegant Rosewall was much loved by the fans, partly as he had yet to win the singles title, and this marked his third appearance in the final, 16 years after his first.

A sunny first week was followed by cold, windswept and rainy weather.

In the Grounds the development continued apace, as the Club entrance hall, staircase and landing were redesigned, a police office was established and No.2 and No.3 Courts both received a general overhaul.

On court, the tie-break system was adopted to operate when the score reached 8-all in any set except in the third or fifth set of a three-set or five-set match respectively.

John Newcombe successfully defended his title, this time beating Stan Smith in a five-set final, which would prove to be his last win. In a ladies' singles final seen as marking the start of one era, and the end of another one, Evonne Goolagong beat her compatriot Margaret Court for her first trophy, giving the Australians a double triumph once again.

A generally fine Fortnight, but at times chilly, with blustery winds.

A dispute between the International Lawn Tennis Federation and World Championship Tennis (WCT) led to the governing body banning a number of 'contract professionals' from official tournaments, preventing some leading gentlemen players from competing at The Championships. Reigning champion John Newcombe was in this group, as were Arthur Ashe, Rod Laver and Ken Rosewall.

At the Qualifying competition all rounds except the last in the gentlemen's singles and doubles were reduced to three sets.

Courtesy cars and drivers to transport competitors and officials were provided for the first time.

The first rain of the meeting washed out play on the final Saturday meaning that the gentlemen's singles final and other finals were played on a Sunday for the first time in the event's history. The Centre Court and No.1 Court were packed with spectators who were admitted free of charge.

Stan Smith and Billie Jean King won the singles titles as a young Swedish player called Björn Borg won the boys' title.

Once again politics were to the fore as the tournament was boycotted by 80 male players, who were instructed to do so by the Association of Tennis Professionals following the ILTF suspension of the Yugoslav Nikki Pilic, who had allegedly refused to play in a Davis Cup tie. This meant that 12 of the top 16 seeds did not play, as a large number of qualifiers got their chance to step into the spotlight.

New radio and press interview rooms were constructed under the gentlemen's dressing rooms, which were renovated. The first Post Office Telephone Information Service was started – with a whopping 450,000 calls being received.

Rain on the second Friday necessitated the gentlemen's singles final, won by Jan Kodes, and the ladies' singles final, won for a fifth time by Billie Jean King, being contested on the Saturday and play being extended to the Sunday to conclude the mixed doubles event.

Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert, who were engaged to be married at the time, won their respective singles titles, both employing their signature double-handed backhands to great effect. Connors beat the overwhelming sentimental and crowd favourite, Ken Rosewall, who had incredibly reached the final for a fourth time, at the age of 39. He would return once more but would never take the only Major to elude him.

Chairs were first provided on court to enable players to rest when changing ends, for which they were allowed 90 seconds. This allocation had rarely been fully used up when the players would simply stand for refreshments as they changed ends, but also met with the new commercial break needs of some TV stations.

Three days of fine weather followed by three very wet days forced the second week's programme to be reorganised so that play commenced at noon on all but one of the six days. The gentlemen's singles and ladies' singles semi-finals were split between the Centre Court and No.1 Court as a result.

A new building on the east side of the Centre Court was constructed above the Debenture Holders' Lounge and restaurant, built principally to house a museum and library. More free-standing room was made available on No.2 Court. The bookstall was re-sited on the public Tea Lawn where, for that one year only, a William Hill bookmakers' tent was erected.

Arthur Ashe became the first black Gentlemen's Singles Champion, as he defied the predictions of many experts to beat the bullish top seed, and reigning champion, Jimmy Connors in four sets. In the ladies' event Billie Jean King won her sixth and final singles title, which would also prove to be her last singles win in a Major.

A sunbaked fortnight followed a damp opening day.

In January vandals broke into the Grounds and damaged the Centre Court. In the morning staff found five holes in the turf, the largest about nine inches long, and red and white paint splashed around the court and in the stands.

Elsewhere a temporary stand holding 1,450 spectators was erected adjacent to No.14 Court. The construction of the first Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum and library continued for their planned official opening at the Centenary Championships the following year.

The Umpires and Line Judges appeared for the first time wearing their new uniform of navy-blue blazer and grey trousers or skirts.

Previous boys' winner Bjorn Borg won his first gentlemen's title, at the age of just 20. Chris Evert won her second ladies' trophy before teaming up with great future rival, Martina Navratilova of the Czech Republic, to win the doubles.

A record-breaking British summer meant that this was probably the hottest meeting on record, without even a hint of rain.

1977: The Centenary Championships

For the occasion of the centenary the Clubhouse and Centre Court were repainted and special decorations erected around the ground. The Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum and the Kenneth Ritchie Wimbledon Library, on the east side of the Centre Court, were opened in May by the Duke and Duchess of Kent. The Library was named in memory of Lord Ritchie of Dundee (1902–1975), who was for many years Chairman of the London Stock Exchange and a long-serving member of the Club Committee. It was founded by Alan Little (1928–2017), who ran the Library, in his capacity of Honorary Librarian, until 2016.

The gentlemen's and ladies' Qualifying competitions were held at different centres, for the ladies this was in Eastbourne and the gentlemen in Roehampton.

Ball Girls were used for the first time on the outside courts.

On the opening day of the meeting 41 surviving singles champions paraded on the Centre Court and were presented with silver commemorative medals by the Duke and Duchess of Kent. The Band of the Welsh Guards played on the Centre Court, prior to the start of play, for five days of the meeting. A Queen's Silver Jubilee Salver was given to the winner of each Championship event, while all competitors received a commemorative pen and pencil set.

Queen Elizabeth, accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh, attended the meeting on the second Friday and presented the trophy to the winner of the ladies' singles on court, which in this case was, fittingly, the British player, Virginia Wade. The British men could not repeat the trick, Mark Cox the last surviving player in the gentlemen's draw, going out in the fourth round, as the increasingly popular (especially with female fans) Bjorn Borg reclaimed his trophy. As Rod Laver made his last appearance, an 18-year-old John McEnroe marked his arrival, becoming the first qualifier to reach the semi-finals and the youngest player in the last four for 100 years.

There were no poor weather interruptions during the Fortnight, although it was a little chilly in the first week.

The gentlemen's and ladies' Qualifying competition reverted to the former practice of being held at the same venue, in Roehampton.

The ladies' singles final, not for the last time, was fought out between Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova, the latter winning to claim her first Major title. Bjorn Borg once again beat Jimmy Connors for his third triumph in three years, to a soundtrack of hearty screaming from his legions of young fans.

Just before the ladies' final on the second Friday, the Centre Court was used to film part of the Paramount picture The Players, which starred Dean Paul Martin, Ali McGraw and the Argentinian player Guillermo Vilas.

After the meeting the boundary of the ground north of the Centre Court was extended into Aorangi Park as the construction of a new building and four grass courts began.

A dull and wet meeting which resulted in seven days being interrupted by rain, including a washout on the first Thursday leading to earlier start times throughout the second week.

Extensive building and other alterations were carried out, most notably seen with the roof of the Centre Court being raised by one metre to provide an additional 1,088 seats, making a new capacity of 11,739. The number of turnstile entrances to the ground was doubled from 10 to 20.

New clocks were provided throughout the premises and Grounds. The Centre Court and No.1 Court scoreboards were fitted with digital clocks, courtesy of Rolex, which also indicated the duration of each match.

On court, the tie-break regulations were changed to operate at 6-all in any set except the final one of a match. Umpires were issued with stopwatches to ensure players did not exceed the time limit of 90 seconds between the changes of ends. Catherine McTavish became the first woman to umpire on No.1 Court.

Martina Navratilova repeated her achievement of the previous year, beating Chris Evert Lloyd for her second title. Billie Jean King won the ladies' doubles and so brought her total tally of titles to a record-breaking 20. Bjorn Borg made it four in a row in the gentlemen's singles event.

Centre Court was once again used as the backdrop for a film, when part of the Paramount film Rough Cut, starring Burt Reynolds, Lesley-Ann Down and David Niven was filmed there in July, with over 600 extras employed.

Apart from a little rain on the first day there was no real weather disruption.

Four new grass courts were brought into commission north of Centre Court and numbered 14 to 17, returning the principal arena to a more central position, as originally seen at the previous ground in Nursery Lane and whence came its name. In Aorangi Park 12 grass courts were made available for practice before and during The Championships.

An electronic service line monitor, called Cyclops, using infra-red rays, was used for singles matches on the Centre Court and No.1 Court for the first time.

Bjorn Borg of Sweden became the first player to win the gentlemen's singles five times in succession since the abolition of the Challenge Round, beating John McEnroe in a classic final. The thrilling fourth-set tie-break lasted 22 minutes, or 34 points. Evonne Goolagong Cawley won her second title in the ladies' event.

On Sunday morning, the 13 July, a church service to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the diocese of Southwark was held on the Centre Court, with 11,000 people in attendance.

One of the wettest meetings on record which necessitated play starting at noon on the last nine days.

The No.1 Court complex was rebuilt, leading to a large increase in court capacity. It would be the last year that female competitors paid an entry fee – in the case of 1981 this was £9. A special Wimbledon uniform for Umpires and Line Judges was introduced – dark green jackets and light green trousers or skirts. On the first Tuesday trailblazing Catherine McTavish became the first woman to umpire on Centre Court.

A bad tempered historical first occurred on the second Tuesday when the Centre Court match between Sue Barker and Ann Kiyomura and JoAnne Russell and Virginia Ruzici was halted at 9.35pm due to bad light, with the score poised at 5-5 in the final set. Amid boos and jeers, seat cushions, programmes and other objects were thrown on the court. Bad tempers were a feature of the tournament, as John McEnroe's clashes with Umpires and other authority figures throughout the event made press headlines all over the world.

Bjorn Borg was finally bested on the Wimbledon lawns, in his attempt to match William Renshaw's 'six in succession', although he did reach the final again. John McEnroe avenged his epic defeat from the previous year with a win in four sets over his rival, marking the last appearance for the popular Borg at The Championships. In the ladies' singles, Chris Evert Lloyd won her third, and last, title.

The weather was generally dry but cold, with light rain on the first Wednesday.

For the first time The Championships was actually scheduled to last 13 days, with the tournament ending with play on a Sunday. A London Underground strike for the first eight days, followed by a rail strike, considerably reduced the attendance, which was already not helped by poor weather.

Aorangi Park was brought into the perimeter of the Grounds to give more room during The Championships, providing additional facilities for the public, including catering, several private marquees, a merchandising shop and a scoreboard showing results, game by game, on each court.

Jimmy Connors earned his second, and last, gentlemen's title, with a hard-fought win over defending champion John McEnroe. Martina Navratilova, now representing the United States, also returned to the winners' podium, defeating Chris Evert Lloyd again, before adding her second doubles title alongside Pam Shriver.

In December, former champion Virginia Wade became the first lady to be elected to the Club Committee.

A very wet first week, with rain interrupting play for the first week and a half, meaning play started early on the last eight days.

The development of the Grounds continued, with new seating on the Centre Court, a new electricity supply for the Club being installed and more additions to the Aorangi Park area.

The entry for the Ladies' Singles Championship was raised to 128, having previously had a field of 96.

Trey Waltke of the United States appeared on court dressed in an old-fashioned outfit of long white flannel trousers, with a necktie for a belt and a white button-down long-sleeve shirt. He beat former champion Stan Smith in that match but lost in the next round to Ivan Lendl in the same vintage attire.

On court John McEnroe comfortably regained his trophy, for his second title, as did Martina Navratilova in winning her fourth. John Lloyd partnered Wendy Turnbull to mixed doubles success, becoming the first British man to win any kind of title since Fred Perry in 1936.

Wonderful weather was enjoyed throughout, with only two hours' delay for rain on the first Friday.

1984: The Ladies' Championship Centenary

The highlight of the celebrations occurred on the second Monday when 17 former ladies' champions paraded on the Centre Court and were presented with a specially commissioned piece of Waterford Crystal by the Duke and Duchess of Kent. The list included Louise Brough, Althea Gibson, Doris Hart and Kitty Godfree. Helen Jacobs and Helen Wills were not able to attend but did receive the crystal in person – from Kitty Godfree on behalf of the All England Club – later that summer, during the Los Angeles Olympics. For the first time a female military band played on the Centre Court on both finals days.

Changes were afoot across the Grounds with new stands, dressing rooms, a players' doctor's surgery and large swathes of new, tip-up seating.

On court it would be the first time that all five Championship titles were retained. Georgina Clark became the first woman to umpire a final on the Centre Court as the women's final, fittingly for the Centenary year, was played between great rivals Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd. Navratilova won in three sets. In the gentlemen's singles John McEnroe routed Jimmy Connors the following day, 6-1, 6-1, 6-2, in one of the tournament's most one-sided finals.

A Fred Perry statue, situated opposite the entrance to the Members' Enclosure, was unveiled to commemorate the 50th Anniversary of Perry's first victory in the gentlemen's singles. The gates at the Somerset Road entrance to the ground were also dedicated to the legendary British champion.

Superb weather, with just two days briefly marred by rain and nine daily temperature records broken.

Record attendances, despite the poor weather that was to plague the event, with further expansion across the stands and Grounds. The Lawn Tennis Museum was completely redesigned, with a much larger exhibition area.

It was an eventful Wimbledon all round, kicking off when Anne White of the United States controversially appeared on No.2 Court wearing a neck-to-ankle all-white leotard, created by the legendary tennis clothing designer, Ted Tinling.

At the age of 17 years and 227 days, Boris Becker became the youngest player, the first unseeded player and the first German to win the gentlemen's singles. When he lifted the trophy, after beating South African Kevin Curren in the final, he had lost an incredibly taxing eight sets on the way to achieving it, playing an exhausting 292 games along the way. Paul McNamee and Martina Navratilova played 117 games in three mixed doubles matches on the final day. Navratilova must have been exhausted, having played another three sets in notching her sixth singles title the day before, against her old foe and great friend Chris Evert Lloyd.

A very wet first week led to early starts throughout The Championships, with rain each day and the improbable sight of lightning actually striking Centre Court. On the second Friday a spectacular storm brought 1.5 inches of rain in just 20 minutes.

1986: The 100th Championship Meeting

The occasion was commemorated in a variety of different ways with the design of a modern 'Flying W' logo, the formation of the 'Last 8 Club' and a dinner party held on the second Thursday for guests who had made significant historic contributions to The Championships. The two oldest living singles champions – Kitty Godfree and Jean Borotra, respectively – handed over the trophies on the final weekend, alongside The Duke and Duchess of Kent.

Yellow balls were used for the first time, largely as the white balls were getting stained green on the grass, sometimes making them almost impossible to see on TV, where tennis was increasingly popular. The balls came packaged in new blue cans, featuring the new logo. In other firsts, Ball Girls were used on the Centre Court for the first time and players and officials were asked to undergo drug tests.

In Aorangi Park a two-storey pavilion was built replacing the old dilapidated wooden structure, creating a whole new quarter within the Grounds, housing competitors' dressing rooms, a dining area and a crèche.

In a feat possibly as impressive as his win the previous year, Boris Becker retained his title, now at the age of 18, beating Ivan Lendl. Martina Navratilova quietly went about doing what she did best – winning the singles title, making a total of seven.

A very warm meeting marred only by rain on the first and 12th days.

Some improvements were made to the Grounds for the 1987 Championships, with work to the Clubhouse, some of the stands and some new Museum wrought-iron gates at Church Road. Five individual daily attendance records were broken, despite a new policy of restricting the crowd to 28,000, instead of 31,000.

On the lawns, it was the last year that male players paid entry fees – a sum of £35. Martina Navratilova of the United States won the ladies' singles for the sixth time in succession to equal the all-time record of eight victories, held by Helen Wills Moody. She beat the new force in women's tennis, Steffi Graf, who was appearing in her first final. The gentlemen's final was memorable as the Australian Pat Cash broke protocol and climbed up from the court into the stands, over the commentary boxes and into the players' box to hug his girlfriend, family and coach.

Much wet weather during the first week, including a first Monday which was washed out. The second week enjoyed largely warm sunshine throughout.

A new procedure was introduced allowing a ticket holder priority for the following year when applying for a seat if bad weather had meant there was no play on the Centre Court or No.1 Court. New media facilities were opened, plus contemporary dressing rooms and walkways, as the permanent offices of the International Tennis Federation ceased to be housed at the Club.

On the playing side, 1988 marked the first time at The Championships that no player used a wooden racket. After a blissful first week of weather, rain occurred each day of the second week bar one. On the concluding Sunday only five games were possible in the gentlemen's singles final, which was postponed until the third Monday. It would be the start of a trilogy of finals between Boris Becker and genial Swede Stefan Edberg. Edberg won that day and became the first person ever to beat Boris Becker on Centre Court. Steffi Graf won her first ladies' title before going on to win something truly unique; the 'Golden Slam', which was all four Majors, plus the Olympic gold medal.

Despite, or perhaps partly due to, the inclement weather, the 13-day attendance figure was 400,288 – an all-time record, with three daily records also being broken. There had been the normal flurry of activity throughout the off-season, with a new staircase for No.1 Court and extra temporary stands all over the Grounds. All scoreboards now displayed point by point information. Marking a sign of the times, the Club appointed its first TV Marketing Director.

On court it would prove to be the last appearance at The Championships for the much-loved American Chris Evert, who reached the semi-finals and departed with a graceful wave. She was beaten by Steffi Graf, who would go on to win the title, beating Martina Navratilova once again in the final. Boris Becker returned to winning ways, beating Stefan Edberg in the gentlemen's final.

Rain badly interfered with the programme on the last three days of the tournament, forcing the gentlemen's singles semi-finals to be played on different days and the gentlemen's singles final and ladies' singles final both to be contested on the Sunday.

Following the tragedies at Bradford's Valley Parade and Sheffield's Hillsborough football Grounds the safety standards at places of sport came under greater scrutiny. This resulted in the standing room area on the Centre Court being replaced by seating, as this, and a number of other courts, became fully ticketed. The ground capacity was fixed at 28,000 and once this number was reached the only means of entry to the Grounds was by the purchase of tickets handed in for re-sale by spectators leaving for the day. Consequently, the attendance figure for the Fortnight was greatly reduced to 347,979. Smoking was prohibited in the covered stands of the Centre Court and No.1 Court for the first time. Meanwhile, on the evening of the first Saturday the Centre Court was cleared due to a bomb scare.

A large television screen, situated adjacent to the Pavilion in Aorangi Park, showed matches on the Centre Court and other courts as well as messages and other information.

Martina Navratilova, representing the United States, won the ladies' singles to attain the all-time record of nine victories in the event, edging out Helen Wills Moody. In the gentlemen's event Stefan Edberg met Boris Becker in the final for the third successive year, with the Swede winning his second of their three battles.

Dry and pleasant weather apart from minor interruptions by rain on the second Wednesday and Thursday.

1991: 'The Wettest Wimbledon'

One of the wettest first weeks ever, with the first Monday totally rained off and only 52 out of approximately 240 scheduled matches completed in the nine hours and 15 minutes of play available by Thursday evening. Faced with the prospect of further bad weather the decision was taken on the Friday evening to play for the first time ever on the first Sunday.

This 'Middle Sunday' became a unique day in Wimbledon's history. There was a queue stretching for 1.5 miles outside the Grounds, as 11,000 Centre Court and 7,000 No.1 Court tickets were sold at the flat rate of £10 and 5,000 ground passes at £5. By the start of play at 12 noon the Centre Court was jam-packed with excited spectators, creating a carnival atmosphere with repeated Mexican waves bringing roars from the crowd. A special programme was on sale and past champions were invited to the Royal Box.

Replica gentlemen's singles and ladies' singles trophies were provided to the winners for the first time. In the gentlemen's case this was taken home by the German, Michael Stich, who beat his countryman Boris Becker, who was appearing in his sixth final in seven years. The ladies' title went once again to Steffi Graf, winning for a third time.

For this one year, the (generally dreadful) weather – which did improve in the second week – itself formed the key part of the narrative above.

Amongst much pre-event building work, and aesthetic improvements all over, the Centre Court roof was completely replaced by a new structure supported by four pillars instead of 26. This mammoth operation allowed a completely perfect, instead of a restricted, view from 3,601 seats.

High on the buzz from the previous year's 'Middle Sunday', new arrangements were introduced for the first Saturday in a desire to recreate that special atmosphere. On the day nearly 2,000 Centre Court seats were sold at a reduced price, with other ticket prices also reduced. Before start of play on the Centre Court the crowd were entertained by a traditional jazz band.

In a groundbreaking development, a special radio station known as 'Radio Wimbledon' provided visitors and the local community with up to 14 hours of live programming each day during The Championships. The station, which broadcast from the Grounds, had a range of up to four miles.

The gentlemen's singles title was claimed by American Andre Agassi, for his first Major, on a surface he had previously not favoured and rarely even played on. The popular Las Vegas won an epic final against Goran Ivanisevic. In the ladies' event Steffi Graf overwhelmed Yugoslavia's Monica Seles. A marathon gentlemen's doubles final saw John McEnroe, in his last professional match at Wimbledon, win 19-17 in the fifth set with his partner Michael Stich.

A week of fine weather to start must have been a relief after the previous year, but this gave way to much rain during the latter part of the second week, featuring a washout of a Friday and a programme extended to Monday.

1993: The 100th Ladies' Championships

A number of commemorative events were held for the occasion, as surviving Ladies' Singles Champions were presented with a special gold bracelet, while all female competitors received a gold bracelet and a commemorative shirt. A ladies' military band played on the Centre Court on the last two days.

The Club announced its 'Long Term Plan' to enhance and protect the pre-eminence of The Championships, as its associated Ground Company purchased the freehold of the neighbouring Wimbledon Park Golf Course. Major internal refurbishment of the Grounds had taken place over the preceding year and around the courts there was much tighter security, following the shocking stabbing of Monica Seles at Hamburg earlier in the year.

As in the previous year, efforts were made to create a festive atmosphere on the first Saturday, as 2,000 Centre Court seats were sold on the day at a reduced price. At 2pm a number of the Royal Box guests were introduced to the public, including the 1933-1936 British Davis Cup team, the Chairman's special guests (all ladies) and other sporting personalities. This would become a popular annual tradition on the middle Saturday.

On court the American Pete Sampras won his first title, whilst Steffi Graf won her fifth, as she beat Jana Novotna of the Czech Republic. The match was memorable for Novotna's collapse from the brink of victory, after leading by a double break of serve in the third set and seemingly in complete control. Graf stormed back to win and Novotna cried uncontrollably on the sympathetic Duchess of Kent's shoulder during the trophy presentation, in what has become one of Wimbledon's most enduring images.

A warm and sunny meeting, during which there were no interruptions for rain, attracted a near-record crowd. The temperature on Centre Court soared to 106°F and the Ball Boys and Girls were issued with caps.

In view of the wide-ranging Long-Term Plan very few major improvements were carried out during the year.

On court the ever-impressive Pete Sampras retained his title and Spain's Conchita Martinez won her first – and only – Major, as she beat Martina Navratilova in the ladies' singles final. Martinez in the process became the first-ever Spanish woman to win the Ladies' Singles Championship.

In July the All England Lawn Tennis Ground Ltd. purchased the freehold of the three-acre site of Southlands College, at the nearby junction of Bathgate Road and Queensmere Road, to provide extra practice courts.

With the exception of one day, The Championships enjoyed excellent weather and concluded with the temperature peaking at 116°F on the Centre Court during the final day.

Centre Court had 5,000 new tip-up seats installed and the combined open stand and seating between No.6 and No.7 Courts were completely replaced. The construction of the new No.1 Court stadium had reached the second level, with flat areas used as a platform for marquees and other public facilities. The Club appointed its first I.T. Director.

The rule concerning competitors being dressed predominantly in white throughout was clarified to mean almost entirely in white'. The time allowed between the moment the ball goes out of play at the end of each point, until the time the ball is struck for the first service of the next point, was reduced from a maximum of 25 seconds to 20 seconds.

The first Friday was extremely hot and, as the temperature tipped 110°F, Britain's Shirli-Ann Siddall collapsed with heat exhaustion during her match on No.14 Court. Overheating was the order of the week when, on the first Wednesday, Britain's Tim Henman became the first player to be disqualified from The Championships. Henman hit a ball in anger and struck a Ball Girl, Caroline Hall, during his first round gentlemen's doubles match and was also fined £2,000 for the indiscretion. Two other players were disqualified during the meeting; Jeff Tarango of the United States was disqualified from his third round gentlemen's singles match for three offences and Murphy Jensen of the United States was disqualified from his second-round mixed doubles for failing to show up.

The top four seeds in both the gentlemen's and ladies' singles reached the semi-final stage in the same year. Pete Sampras went on to beat Boris Becker for his third title in succession and Steffi Graf beat Spain's Arantxa Sanchez Vicario for her sixth in total.

A fortnight of warm and sunny weather, with no interruptions for rain, attracted high daily attendances throughout.

The attendance for the meeting was down compared to the last few years, possibly due to a couple of London Underground strikes and the Euro 96 football competition, taking place in England. Work ceased on the Club's Long Term Plan, for the period of The Championships, allowing spectators to view the inside of the new No.1 Court's stadium and lawn.

The match between Richard Krajicek and Pete Sampras, played on the Centre Court on the second Wednesday, was interrupted by rain for over three and a half hours. During this period, all-round entertainer Sir Cliff Richard regaled the glum spectators by singing many of his old songs, including – of course – Summer Holiday.

At the age of 15 years and 282 days, Martina Hingis of Switzerland became the youngest champion of all time when she won the ladies' doubles with Helena Sukova. Todd Woodbridge and Mark Woodforde of Australia became the first pair since the abolition of the Challenge Round to win the gentlemen's doubles four times in succession. The gentlemen's semi-finals were split between Centre Court and No.1 Court.

Euro 96 was being held across England, with the national team somewhat surprisingly enjoying great success. On the first Wednesday the Club decided to embrace the unfamiliar and allow spectators to stay until 10pm to watch the crunch semi-final match between England and Germany on the large TV screen. The familiar returned when Germany won on penalties.

Just prior to the commencement of the gentlemen's singles final, a female streaker ran across the court, wearing just an apron, much to the amusement of almost everyone. The frolicsome act would be repeated six years later during the gentlemen's singles final, this time by a male enthusiast. This year's showpieces would be won by Krajicek and Steffi Graf.

September saw the last match ever played on the original No.1 Court, taking place during the Davis Cup tie between Great Britain and Egypt. The demolition of the arena began shortly afterwards.

Mixed weather during the first week was followed by rain on most days causing the programme to be extended to the third Monday.

The Qualifying Competition, held at the Bank of England Sports Ground at Roehampton the week before the meeting, had been severely interrupted by rain, forcing many matches to be decided indoors at Queen's Club and on Wimbledon's covered courts. It did not improve, as probably the wettest first week ever unfolded. Only 94 matches had been completed by the Friday evening and all car parks had turned into bog land. The decision was made to once again play on 'Middle Sunday', in an event which became known as 'Super Sunday', and 31,204 spectators attended as seats on Centre Court and No.1 Court, as well as all ground passes, were made available at low prices. With huge local crowd support behind Tim Henman, the fans were covered with Union Jacks, in sights rarely seen at SW19.

The new No.1 Court was officially opened on Monday 23 June, when a ceremony, commencing at 1.30pm, took place on the court surrounded by Ball Boys and Girls holding the flags of the 58 nations competing at The Championships. The Duke of Kent, President of The All England Lawn Tennis Club, was present as were the 10 past champions, who had won the singles title at least three times: Louise Brough, Rod

Laver, Margaret Court, Billie

Jean King, John Newcombe,

Chris Evert, Martina

Navratilova, John McEnroe,

Boris Becker and Pete

Sampras. The first match on court was between

Tim Henman of Great Britain and Daniel

Nestor of Canada, with

first ball.

One of the side effects of the new court was the giant screen that was now installed across the western edge, facing a landscaped picnic area on a hill, allowing the spectators to watch the action in a natural amphitheatre.

By winning the ladies' singles title, Martina Hingis of Switzerland became the youngest singles champion this century at the age of 16 years and 278 days. Pete Sampras returned to winning ways, claiming his fourth title.

During August the Centre Court was completely re-laid using mature turf which had been grown in Yorkshire for two years. The old 'Lodge' building, situated just inside the Somerset Road main entrance, was demolished.

A very wet first week, containing two days completely lost to rain. A succession of early starts followed as a gradual improvement in the weather allowed the Fortnight to end just on time.

Another very wet first week brought about a backlog of matches, which necessitated a succession of early starts and format changes, allowing the meeting to conclude on time. The total attendance of 424,998 became a new 13-day record, as were the daily figures for the second Friday, Saturday and Sunday. After a year's absence No.14 and No.15 Courts were once again in use.

On the first Saturday smoke from a fire in an adjacent tower block of flats billowed across Aorangi Park. As a precautionary measure play on No.18 Court, between Todd Martin and Todd Woodbridge, was suspended for a period.

In the Royal Box on the second Tuesday The Duke of Kent presented a Waterford Crystal Vase to Donald Budge of the United States to mark the 60th anniversary of his Grand Slam in 1938.

There were victories on court for Pete Sampras, for the fifth time, and Jana Novotna, who made for a popular Ladies' Singles Champion after her emotional defeat in 1993. It would be Novotna's first and only career Major singles title, with the trophy being handed over by her old sympathiser, a clearly delighted Duchess of Kent. In the boys' singles event a young Swiss player called Roger Federer won the title in straight sets.

Rain interrupted play on several days during the first week and on the second Monday, but thereafter the weather was mild and dry.

Excellent weather during the first week and the latter half of the second, together with the raising of the ground capacity figure to 33,500, attracted the all-time record attendance of 457,069, with daily records broken for nine of the 13 days.

The new Centre Court West Stand extension was in use, as were No.16 and No.17 Courts again, bringing the total number of Championship courts to 20. For the first time spectators on the Centre Court and No.1 Court were able to see the speed of players' service, displayed in units installed at ground level at both ends of each court.

The Argentinian player David Nalbandian was disqualified in the semi-final of the boys' singles due to his late arrival for the match.

On the Saturday both gentlemen's and ladies' singles semi-finals were played, split between the Centre Court and No.1 Court, and on the Sunday all five finals were decided – the first time this had ever occurred on the last day. In the ladies' singles, Lindsay Davenport beat Steffi Graf for her one and only title and Pete Sampras defeated Andre Agassi to win his sixth.

A week of fine and sunny weather was followed by much rain during the early part of the second week, including a completely rained off Tuesday.

2000: The Millennium Championships

In celebration of the Millennium a number of former champions were invited to The Championships for five days over the middle weekend. The highlight of the occasion was on the first Saturday, when 64 players were presented on the Centre Court with a memento by H.R.H. The Duchess of Gloucester, Honorary President of the L.T.A.

Extensive new facilities were provided across the board, for players, officials, media and spectators, with whole new buildings, walkways, restaurants, screening, parking and other facilities. This was most clearly seen in the construction of the 'Millennium Building', providing extensive media and player facilities as well as a new home for the Members' Enclosure.

Two innovations were introduced for the gentlemen's and ladies' finals; just prior to play, two youngsters, representing nominated charities, performed the coin tossing ceremony to decide which player served first and immediately after the match the BBC's Sue Barker interviewed both finalists on court.

In what would prove to be his last triumph, Pete Sampras lifted the gentlemen's singles trophy for the seventh time, equalling the record set by William Renshaw in 1889. In the semi-final of the ladies' singles, Venus Williams of the USA defeated her younger sister, Serena, 6-2, 7-6(3) to record only the third occasion when two sisters had ever met in the event. They later became the first sisters to win the ladies' doubles and the first to win that title as wild card entries. Todd Woodbridge and Mark Woodforde of Australia won the gentlemen's doubles for the sixth time.

During the autumn the Clubhouse was closed while exploration and enabling works were carried out in readiness for the refurbishment planned for after The Championships 2001, which included the complete removal of the historic Boston Ivy.

A fortnight of generally dull weather with little sunshine. Rain in the latter half of the second week forced play to the third Monday.

One of the more unforgettable Championships in memory brought a record attendance for the scheduled 14 days of 490,081 – in part as the ladies' singles final was contested on the Sunday and the whole of the gentlemen's singles final was played on the third Monday.

The usual breadth of improvements were made to the Grounds before the tournament started, with a new location for a footbridge across Church Road during The Championships. A demonstration of wheelchair tennis was given on No.14 Court by four of Britain's leading players.

For the first time in the tournament's history 32 players were seeded in both the gentlemen's and ladies' singles events. The eventful action sprung to life when seven-time champion Pete Sampras was defeated in the fourth round by 19-year-old former Boys' Singles Champion Roger Federer. It would be the only time the two would play each other competitively.

The screen to the side of No.1 Court really caught on, with thousands heading there to watch Show Court matches shown on the large TV screen. This was particularly seen with matches involving Tim Henman, seeing the area nicknamed 'Henman Hill'. The popularity of this feature prompted the Club to install a second screen at the south end of the Grounds for the last four days, shipped from Holland and installed overnight, in time for play on Friday.

The gentlemen's singles semi-final between Henman and the wild card entry Goran Ivanisevic was played over three days, starting on that Friday and finishing on the Sunday, traditionally the day of the final. Ivanisevic broke British hearts by battling through, leading to a Monday final, against the Australian Pat Rafter. During the Saturday afternoon, when play was restricted to 50 minutes, spectators had been entertained by a number of interviews with the personalities present, including the former US President Bill Clinton.

In the ladies' singles event Venus Williams won her second title, at the expense of Belgium's Justine Henin.

A total of 10,000 unreserved seats were available for the Centre Court on Monday to see the gentlemen's singles final as spectators packed the Centre Court and produced an electric atmosphere. The chanting was continuous, akin to a football or rugby match, and likely unparalleled in the history of The Championships.

Five sets later Goran Ivanisevic became the first Croatian, the first wild card and only the second unseeded player to win the Gentlemen's Singles Championship. It marked the culmination of a lifelong dream, after he had been defeated in three previous finals. During the event Ivanisevic served a total of 212 aces – beating his own record set in 1992.

It was a generally warm and sunny meeting, only marred by rain on the second Friday and Saturday.

The second highest attendance ever of 469,514 over the scheduled 13 days was achieved. Work on the complete refurbishment of the Clubhouse was concluded on time and the balcony overlooking the southern end of the Grounds was renewed and extended, with fresh Boston Ivy planted against the front wall.

The Chairman of Dunlop Slazenger, Robert Brooke, was introduced to the spectators on Centre Court by the Chairman of the Club, to mark the 100th anniversary between Slazenger and the AELTC.

For the second time ever two sisters, Serena and Venus Williams, of the United States, contested the ladies' singles final, won by Serena. This had not happened since 1884, when Maud Watson beat her sister, Lilian. The Williams sisters also won the ladies' doubles title for the second time as wild cards. Todd Woodbridge of Australia won the gentlemen's doubles crown for the seventh time.

Following in the bare footsteps of his female trailblazer in 1996, a male streaker invaded the court during the gentlemen's singles final, won by Australia's Lleyton Hewitt. Goran Ivanisevic did not defend his title.

A dry sunny first week gave way to cool and showery weather during the second week, with occasional interruptions to the programme.

Owing to safety concerns over the size of the increasingly popular overnight queue for the first Saturday, measures were taken to reduce the numbers, estimated to be around 9,000 – an increase of 6,000 on other days.

The Club President, the Duke of Kent, requested players not to bow or curtsy to Royalty in the Royal Box, except when the Queen or The Prince of Wales were present.

On the sartorial front, 2003 was the year Robby Ginepri proudly became the first man to wear a sleeveless shirt in SW19.

The court action was eventful as defending champion Lleyton Hewitt lost in the first round to Ivo Karlovic, playing in his first Major tournament. The 17-year-old Spanish player Rafael Nadal became the youngest man since Boris Becker to reach the third round.

Roger Federer, of Switzerland, won his first Gentlemen's Singles Championship, which was also his first Major. For the second year on the trot two sisters, Serena and Venus Williams, contested the ladies' singles final, with Serena winning once again. Todd Woodbridge of Australia won the gentlemen's doubles title for a record eighth time. Martina Navratilova won her 20th title, the mixed doubles, at the tender age of 46.

The Club assisted in the making of the film Wimbledon, a romantic comedy, starring Kirsten Dunst and Paul Bettany. Scenes were filmed during The Championships and throughout July and August, extensively on the Centre Court and around the Grounds in general. The film also featured appearances by John McEnroe, Chris Evert and John Barrett in the commentary box.

Mostly warm and sunny throughout the first week, followed by considerable rain in the middle of the second week.

Prior to The Championships, in April, five bronze busts were unveiled in front of the Clubhouse, celebrating the victories of the five British Ladies' Singles Champions who had won their titles at the Church Road ground – Kathleen McKane Godfree, Dorothy Round, Angela Mortimer, Ann Jones and Virginia Wade. Also, in the spring, Rolex, celebrating 25 years association with the Club, provided new clocks throughout the premises and Grounds.

It was another meeting badly affected by rain, necessitating the decision to play on the middle Sunday for the third time in 14 years. The occasion was less well attended than in previous years, and The Championships' attendance overall was well down on the previous few years. The bad weather, the European Football Championships and a London Underground 24-hour strike all contributed to this drop.

Just before play began on Centre Court on the first Saturday, the London stage of the Athens Olympic Torch Relay was launched, with Sir Roger Bannister (the first four-minute miler) saluting the crowd before walking through the Clubhouse to pass the torch over to Tim Henman. He in turn ran through the Grounds, passed the flame to Virginia Wade, who handed over the torch to the first of a series of runners organised throughout London.

No.13 seed Maria Sharapova became the first Russian and lowest-seeded player to win the ladies' singles. She then created a precedent on court by using a mobile phone to attempt (unsuccessfully) to call her mother. In the gentlemen's event Roger Federer retained his trophy, beating Andy Roddick in the final. After the previous year's record eighth time, Todd Woodbridge of Australia won the gentlemen's doubles for a record ninth time.

It was another meeting affected by poor weather, with two days completely lost due to rain.

Structural work on the new Museum building was completed and installation of the services continued, meaning Club staff could move in before the end of the year.

Great Britain's Andy Murray made his first appearance in a Major when he was given a wild card. The 18-year-old did not disappoint the success-starved British fans, battling through to the third round, only losing in a fifth set to former finalist David Nalbandian. Other young players making waves included Spain's Rafael Nadal who caused a stir by wearing 'pirata' shorts, which were so long that they were actually closer to trousers, reaching well beneath the knee.

Roger Federer won the gentlemen's singles title for the third year in succession, beating Andy Roddick once again in the final. Venus Williams of the USA became the lowest ranked champion, at No.14, when she took the ladies' singles title for the third time. The gentlemen's doubles proved particularly memorable for the fact that Todd Woodbridge did not win it.

A Wheelchair Gentlemen's Doubles event, for four pairs, was staged on No.14 and No.15 Courts over the last Saturday and Sunday for the first time.

A warm and sunny first week did not follow through in the second, with frequent rain interruptions on the Thursday and Friday.

The attendance of 447,126 showed a slight drop on recent years, probably due to the football World Cup being staged in Germany during the Fortnight. The new Museum building was fully completed and occupied, with the Wimbledon Shop, new turnstiles, the Ticket Office and the Museum all in place. In April H.R.H. The Duke of Kent opened the new Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum and Kenneth Ritchie Wimbledon Library. The Doherty Memorial Gates, erected at the main Church Road entrance to the Grounds in 1931, were removed to allow the installation of wider gates, with the originals being relocated to the southern end of the Grounds. A new Chair and Line Umpire's uniform was introduced, designed by Ralph Lauren.

The longest match ever played at The Championships occurred on the second Wednesday and Thursday on No.2 Court, when in the quarter-final of the gentlemen's doubles, Mark

Knowles (Bahamas) and Daniel Nestor (Canada) beat Simon Aspelin (Sweden) and Todd Perry (Australia) 5-7, 6-3, 6-7(5-7), 6-3, 23-21 in six hours and nine minutes.

Players were normally only interviewed on court after a final, but an exception was made on the first Saturday after Rafael Nadal had defeated Andre Agassi on Centre Court. The crowd-pleasing American, appearing at The Championships for the last time, was interviewed by Sue Barker and given a nostalgic send-off by the crowd.

For the first time, the Club decided to annually commission an artist to produce a unique record of The Championships. Using a variety of media, each artist would be asked to record their interpretation of the Fortnight – the competitors, the spectators, the support services and the Grounds. An illustrator, Mathew Cook, was the first one appointed.

Roger Federer of Switzerland won the gentlemen's singles title for the fourth time in succession, beating Rafael Nadal in the final. Elsewhere it was a year of firsts; Amelie Mauresmo became the first French woman to win the Ladies' Singles Championship for 81 years, Zi Yan and Jie Zheng became the first Chinese players to capture a Championship title when they won the ladies' doubles and Andy Ram became the first Israeli to win a title when he took the mixed doubles.

Between July and September, the permanent roof of the Centre Court was completely removed, enabling work to start on the new retractable version and the new buildings around the complex.

Apart from rain restricting play on the opening day to 45 minutes and causing delays on the second Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the Fortnight was extremely warm and sunny throughout.

A busy year off-court began with the announcement that equal prize money would be awarded for the first time to gentlemen and ladies in all events at The Championships. The Hawk-Eye electronic line-calling system was in full operation on the Centre and No.1 Courts for the first time, having previously been used on BBC television. In order for the players, officials and spectators to see the replays, large screen video boards were installed.

Due to the grand scale of the modernisation of the Centre Court, as part of the Club's Long Term Plan, many of the facilities during The Championships were temporarily relocated or significantly changed. This was most clearly seen in the fact that there was no roof on the Centre Court, in preparation for the new, sliding mechanism. It left the wide open 84-year-old stadium resembling a Roman amphitheater.

In the second round of the Gentlemen's Doubles, Marcelo Melo and Andre Sa of Brazil beat Paul Hanley (Australia) and Kevin Ullyett (Zimbabwe) 28-26 in the longest ever fifth set played at The Championships. It was the highest number of games ever played in the event at 102, as the rain-affected match was played over four days and lasted five hours and 58 minutes.

Following terrorists' car bomb attacks in London and Glasgow over the middle weekend, extra security safeguards were in operation from the second Monday, including concrete vehicle blockers installed at the main entrances to the Grounds.

Roger Federer won the gentlemen's singles title for the fifth time in succession, beating Rafael Nadal in five sets, matching Bjorn Borg's feat. The legendary Swedish star was watching on from the Royal Box, enthusiastically applauding the achievement. Venus Williams won the ladies' singles crown for the fourth occasion, again as a low seed, down at No.23. Andy Murray's older brother Jamie won the mixed doubles with Jelena Jankovic, becoming the first Briton in 20 years to lift a trophy at SW19.

After The Championships all areas of the Centre Court were quickly vacated in preparation for a rapid start to the major works. A significant symbol of the Club, the ivy-clad water tower, was demolished, having been erected with the move in 1922, originally connected by pipeline to the lake in Wimbledon Park. The croquet lawn was cleared early in September.

Frequent showers throughout the first week and early in the second week gave way to dry and sunny weather.

A buoyant year at The Championships, most significantly remembered for one of the tournament's all-time great matches – the gentlemen's singles final between Roger Federer and Rafael Nadal.

The modernisation of the Centre Court, as part of the Club's Long Term Plan, was complete apart from the installation of the retractable roof, scheduled for 2009. The fixed part of the roof was by now in place and six extra rows of terracing raised the capacity of the stadium to over 15,000.

The increasingly popular 'Queue', having previously been made up of two separate entities, Church and Somerset Roads, merged into one and was moved in to the more comfortable confines of Wimbledon Park. This meant that the overnight queuers could camp on grass, rather than the unforgiving concrete pavements around the Club.

The gentlemen's singles final was generally considered to be the greatest ever seen, with the Spaniard Rafael Nadal avenging his defeats in the two previous years by winning the fifth set 9-7 on his fourth match point. The lack of roof was keenly felt, as frequent rain breaks meant that the last shot was hit in the dark at 9.16pm, leaving just enough time for the presentation and quick interviews. They had played a total of 62 games lasting four hours and 48 minutes – both records for a final.

A resurgent Venus Williams of the United States won the Ladies' Singles Championship for the fifth time, defeating her sister Serena in their third meeting in the final since 2002.

The weather was largely warm and sunny, aside from some rain interruptions on the first Friday and on a few days towards the end.

During the months leading up to The Championships much testing and preparation was carried out to ensure that the Centre Court's new retractable roof was functioning properly. The Club staged a 'Centre Court Celebration' in May designed to fully test the roof and management systems. Exhibition matches featuring Andre Agassi, Tim Henman, Kim Clijsters and Steffi Graf were played, as well as numerous musical performances.

It was the highest-ever attendance at the meeting with a total of 511,043, in part due to the increase of the daily ground capacity, from 36,500 to 40,000. There were record crowds on nine of the 13 days and the first Wednesday's total of 46,826 became the all-time record. The gates were closed on eight days when the ground reached capacity.

Centre Court's retractable roof, which brought the complete modernisation programme for the stadium to an end, was only needed once during the Fortnight due to the weather, forcing a pause in the Amelie Mauresmo v Dinara Safina match. It was then resumed as an indoor battle. The decision was then taken to keep the roof closed for the last match on the court, Andy Murray v Stanislas Wawrinka, which finished at 10.39 pm, making it by far the latest time play had ever taken place on the Centre Court.

On the first Monday, the Duke of Kent, accompanied by Club Chairman Tim Phillips formally opened the new No.2 Court. The year also welcomed the first Ladies' Doubles Wheelchair event.

Roger Federer was once again half of an incredible final, winning his sixth singles title, by defeating Andy Roddick for the third time in the showpiece event. The epic match had a final set score of 16-14, as the clock ticked past four hours and 16 minutes, over 77 games. Roddick lost his service game only once – in the very last game. The gentlemen's trophy had run out of space in which to engrave the dates and names of the champions, so a black plinth with an ornamented silver band was designed to accompany it.

Another all-Williams final saw younger sister Serena triumph over Venus, before the two of them paired up shortly afterwards to win the doubles title for the fourth time.

Glorious weather, warm and sunny every day, with only a brief blip of light rain on the second Monday.

Various temporary stands were erected, and courts renumbered as the Grounds continued to evolve to the tournament's changing needs. The Centre Court's retractable roof was not used to counter rain but, on one occasion, the first Monday, closed to allow the gentlemen's singles first round match between Novak Djokovic and Olivier Rochus to finish.

HM Queen Elizabeth visited The Championships on the first Thursday. After meeting various Club officials, she met a collection of players, including defending champions Roger Federer and Serena Williams and past champions such as Martina Navratilova and Billie Jean King.

The most memorable match of the tournament, possibly any Wimbledon tournament, occurred on No.18 Court, as the American John Isner finally overcame France's Nicolas Mahut. The marathon gentlemen's singles first round encounter played out over three days (from Tuesday to Thursday), produced a total of 183 games and lasted for 11 hours, and five minutes. To put it into perspective, the fifth set of 70–68 alone took eight hours and 10 minutes, and was longer than the previous longest entire match. In terms of length of time and the number of games, it was the all-time record for the game of lawn tennis.

Rafael Nadal regained the gentlemen's singles title and Serena Williams retained the ladies' singles title, the latter winning the crown for the fourth time.

A glorious two weeks of weather, warm and sunny every day and not a hint of rain in sight.

2011: The 125th Championships

Every player was given an inscribed gift – a leather washbag for the gentlemen and a silver bracelet for the ladies. The developments continued with considerable excitement around the opening of the new No.3 Court, on the site of the old No.2 Court, which accommodated nearly 2,000 spectators. There was also a new No.4 Court, situated to the side of No.3. The Club announced details of a project to develop a long-term plan for the Grounds for the next 10 to 15 years, named 'Wimbledon 2020' and focused on the Grounds and their redevelopment as The Championships continued to grow.

Incredibly, as Nicolas Mahut and John Isner were about to unveil a courtside plaque to celebrate the previous year's epic encounter, the draw was announced, and they had been thrown together again, for a second first round encounter. Isner would once again go through, this time in straight sets and requiring nine hours less court time.

There were two new singles champions, Serbia's Novak Djokovic beat Rafael Nadal in the final, as he also replaced him as the world No.1. Petra Kvitová, of the Czech Republic, beat former champion Maria Sharapova, in the ladies' singles.

On Thursday 24 August the BBC returned to SW19 to stage an Antiques Roadshow programme in the Grounds, which included the valuation of a 30-year-old wooden racket, smashed in frustration by John McEnroe.

In an indifferent Fortnight the first week was overcast with some rainy periods, followed by dry but generally cloudy weather thereafter.

With such a flurry of construction activity over the previous few years less major work had taken place over the off-season. This was also partly due to the upcoming Olympics, with the lawn tennis event being held at the All England Club for the first time at its modern site.

There was an on-court first at The Championships, as a player won 24 consecutive points to win a 'golden set', 6-0. This occurred in the third round of the Ladies' singles, when Yaroslava Shvedova of Russia beat Sara Errani of Italy, 6-0.

The Prince of Wales, accompanied by the Duchess of Cornwall, made a rare visit to The Championships on the first Wednesday, having last visited in 1970. Several other members of the Royal Family were present during the fortnight, including the Duke of Kent, President of the Club, and the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, who returned after their first visit in 2011.

Roger Federer won the gentlemen's singles title for an incredible seventh time, to equal the record jointly held by William Renshaw and Pete Sampras. He beat Andy Murray in the final, who had become the first Briton to reach this stage of the event since 1938, when Bunny Austin lost to Don Budge. The on-court interviews with Sue Barker were an emotional finale, as Andy Murray acknowledged both the nation's support and his own desire to provide the elusive gentlemen's singles title, which was now a 76-year wait. Serena Williams captured the ladies' singles title for the fifth time and followed that with a fifth ladies' doubles crown, with her sister. There was a surprise in the gentlemen's doubles event when the wild card pair of Jonathan Marray and Frederik Nielsen won the title, making Marray the first British winner since 1936.

On Monday 23 July the Olympic Torch Relay passed through the All England Club, the torch being carried by Andy Murray, who handed over to Venus Williams. The tennis event took place from 28 July to 5 August and involved a total of 184 players competing in the five events. In the men's singles final Andy Murray avenged his Centre Court defeat to Roger Federer a few weeks earlier, winning in straight sets to take the gold medal. Serena Williams won the women's gold medal.

A week of sun, interrupted by showers, was followed by cloudier skies and intermittent drizzle, with occasional sunny periods.

Prize money reached a record £22.6 million, an increase of 40 per cent from 2012, with the winners of the Gentlemen's and Ladies' Singles Championship each receiving £1.6 million compared with £1.15 million the year before. The Club also officially unveiled a new Master Plan in which it set out its vision for the future of the Grounds.

The first week proved remarkably unpredictable on court as seven of the top 16 seeds in the gentlemen's singles and nine of the top 16 in the ladies' singles had been eliminated by Thursday. There was also an unusually high number of players who withdrew, either before or during a match, due to injury, often from slipping on grass that had been dampened by the poor weather.

The longest-ever gentlemen's semi-final took place when Novak Djokovic beat Juan Martin del Potro of Argentina over four hours and 43 minutes. The Ladies' Singles Championship was captured by Marion Bartoli, the third French lady to do so, when she beat Sabine Lisicki of Germany in the final.

Joyous scenes were witnessed across the country as Andy Murray became the first British player to win the Gentlemen's Singles Championship for 77 years when he beat Novak Djokovic of Serbia in the final. Under a scorching sun Murray won an incredibly tense match in three sets, falling to his knees in disbelief in the moment of victory. Bob and Mike Bryan of the United States won the gentlemen's doubles title for the third time and in so doing became the holders of all four Major titles and an Olympic gold concurrently.

On 1 August the Club acquired the LTA's 50 per cent shareholding in the All England Lawn Tennis Ground plc, giving the Club sole ownership of the Grounds at Wimbledon.

The weather for the first week was generally damp, with some drizzle on the Thursday and Friday. The following week continued in the same vein, except for the last three days which were extremely warm and sunny.

The normal availability of 19 courts was reduced by two to 17, owing to No.14 and No.15 Courts being out of action. The total attendance of 491,084 for the meeting was high, resulting in the third-highest-ever figure. There was a small, but significant, change on Centre Court when a small gate was installed in the players' box. This meant that the new singles champions could easily access and greet their family and team from the court without having to clamber over numerous obstructions, dating back to Pat Cash's win in 1987.

Prize money rose again, with the total for the meeting reaching £25 million, as the winners of the gentlemen's and ladies' singles each received £1,760,000. In this case it was Novak Djokovic of Serbia and Petra Kvitova of the Czech Republic, who both recaptured the titles they had won in 2011. The gentlemen's final between Djokovic and Roger Federer of Switzerland was one of the event's great matches, let alone finals, with extreme tension right to the end of the gripping five-set match. The ladies' final was, by comparison, disappointing in that the contest lasted less than an hour, with Kvitova hitting such a rich vein of form that Canada's Eugenie Bouchard struggled to compete.

A generally warm and sunny Championship, marred by rain at the end of the first week, the start of the second and on the last Saturday.

For the first time since 1897, The Championships commenced a week later than usual, with an extra week after Roland-Garros. This allowed for a longer grass court season, culminating in The Championships, after the lengthy clay court swing. The reintroduction of No.14 and No.15 Courts brought the total available back to 19.

In a fortnight of generally warm and sunny weather the temperature peaked at 35.7°C (the hottest on record) on the first Wednesday. This spike caused a Ball Boy on No.17 Court to collapse, requiring medical attention, as St John Ambulance also treated 170 spectators for heat-related conditions. There were two occasions when the start of play on the outside courts was delayed allowing all present in the Grounds to unite with the country's one-minute silence for those who had lost their lives in recent terrorist attacks.

Serena Williams won the Ladies' Singles Championship for the sixth time, meaning she held all four Majors for the second time in her career. At 33 years old she was also the oldest ladies' champion in the Open era. Novak Djokovic of Serbia registered his third Gentlemen's Singles Championship, once again defeating Roger Federer in the final. The ladies' doubles and mixed doubles titles were won by Martina Hingis of Switzerland, in partnership with Sania Mirza and Leander Paes respectively, both from India. Hingis had captured the doubles title 19 years earlier in 1996, which had then made her the youngest champion of all time.

A splendid two weeks of continuous warm and sunny weather only interrupted by short showers in the second week.

Before The Championships, the construction of a new centre at the Club's Grounds in nearby Raynes Park was completed, with six grass courts and six hard courts. The ground, known as the All England Club Community Sports Ground, became the new home for the Wimbledon Junior Tennis Initiative, also being used for the training of Ball Boys and Ball Girls in the winter. The total attendance for the normal 13 days was 469,305, the lowest since 2007.

Poor weather in the first week once again necessitated a 'Middle Sunday', with the ticketing being managed entirely online for the first time. 22,000 tickets were available online via the Ticketmaster website, which were sold out in 27 minutes, as some 111,000 people applied.

New uniforms designed by Ralph Lauren were introduced for the Chair and Line Umpires as well as the Ball Boys and Girls. The Wheelchair Doubles events introduced in recent years were now matched by Ladies' and Gentlemen's Singles disciplines.

The Davis Cup trophy was on view to the public during the Championships, after the British team had triumphed against Belgium the previous December.

Serena Williams retained her Ladies' Singles Championship, bringing her tally up to seven, and giving her a total of 22 Major titles, tying her with Steffi Graf in the Open era. Andy Murray won the Gentlemen's Singles Championship for the second time, defeating Canada's Milos Raonic in the final. For the first time, two French pairs, Pierre-Hugues Herbert and Nicolas Mahut and Julien Benneteau and Edouard Roger-Vasselin contested the gentlemen's doubles final, with the former winning the title. The ladies' doubles was won by Serena and Venus Williams for the sixth time.

Immediately after The Championships the northern part of Aorangi Park was made a restricted area and work started in earnest to provide a retractable roof for No.1 Court, to bring it in line with the Centre Court.

Intermittent rain on several days of the first week caused a backlog of matches and led to play on 'Middle Sunday'. Conditions were mainly dry and warm, with occasional showers, during the second week.

For the first time since 1896 The Championships did not commence until July. This was made possible two years earlier when the gap between Roland-Garros and The Championships was extended from two to three weeks.

In other changes, the Qualifying event, staged in Roehampton, became ticketed, with all funds raised donated to the Wimbledon Foundation. On site, the retractable roof project took shape on No.1 Court, as the previous fixed roof was removed.

The association between the Club and the BBC was commemorated by the celebration of three anniversaries – 90 years of radio coverage, 80 years of television coverage and 50 years of colour television coverage.

It was a momentous year on court as Switzerland's resurgent Roger Federer captured the Gentlemen's Singles Championship for the eighth time, surpassing the total held by William Renshaw and Pete Sampras. He also became the first man since 1976 to win the title without dropping a set. Garbiñe Muguruza of Spain, the runner-up of 2015, became the new Ladies' Singles Champion after defeating Venus Williams, back in the final after an absence of eight years.

Lukasz Kubot of Poland and Marcelo Melo of Brazil became the first men from their respective countries to win a Wimbledon title after they triumphed in an epic men's doubles final against Oliver Marach (Austria) and Mate Pavic (Croatia), lasting almost five hours. This meant that the ladies' doubles final didn't begin until 9:28pm. Somewhat incredibly, it was finished by 10.24pm, as Ekatarina Makarova and Elena Vesnina of Russia beat Hao-Ching Chan of Taipei and Monica Niculescu of Romania 6-0, 6-0. Great Britain's Jamie Murray repeated his feat of 10 years earlier of winning the mixed doubles, on this occasion with Martina Hingis.

2017 marked the first year that H.R.H. The Duchess of Cambridge took her position as the Club's Patron, taking over from Her Majesty The Queen.

The weather for the Fortnight was generally warm and sunny, with the latter half of the first week quite hot, marred by drizzle on the first day and rain on the second Tuesday.

2018: 150th anniversary

The All England Lawn Tennis & Croquet Club celebrated its 150th anniversary, with various events marking the occasion. Celebrating the Club's origins as a croquet club, the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum held a special exhibition looking at croquet's evolution through the ages. The year also marked 50 years of Open tennis and 125 years of the Ladies' Singles Championship.

The development of No.1 Court continued throughout the previous year, with a new fixed roof in place, in preparation for the final stage – the retractable section – due for completion before The Championships 2019. Prize money continued to rise substantially, with the total for all events amounting to £34 million and the winners of the Gentlemen's and Ladies' Singles Championships each receiving £2.25 million.

In technological advancements a first match was broadcast live via the AELTC's global broadcast partners and on wimbledon.com. Spectators in the Queue were able to pay for their tickets using contactless and other card payments for the first time and free public wi-fi was extended into the Queue and throughout the Grounds.

On court the main story was in the ladies' singles as Serena Williams reached the final 10 months after giving birth to her first baby. Ranked down at No.181 in the world the seven-time Ladies' Singles Champion was seeded No.25 but lost to Angelique Kerber of Germany.

The story of the gentlemen's singles revolved around the extraordinary length of matches. In the first (and longest-ever) semi-final Kevin Anderson took six hours and 36 minutes to subdue 2010's marathon man John Isner, the final set finishing 26-24. Novak Djokovic and Rafael Nadal followed them on court, proceeding to play the second-longest semi-final in Wimbledon history, taking five hours and 15 minutes. Djokovic eventually won the match, which extended into Saturday and was played under the roof, before returning the next day to defeat an exhausted Anderson and claim his fourth title.

After a very wet early summer, nobody would have predicted that 2019 would produce one of the driest Championships on record. Not a single minute of play was lost to rain during the Fortnight. Nevertheless, the new No.1 Court retractable roof was called into action on four occasions to allow matches to be completed after dark. The roof had been officially tested in front of a capacity crowd at the No.1 Court Celebration event in May. No.1 Court was also the subject of Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum's special exhibition for 2019-2020.

Ground capacity was increased to 42,000 and the aggregate attendance for The Championships (500,397) totalled over half a million for just the second time in history.

Total prize money for The Championships increased to £38 million, an 11.8 per cent increase on 2018. The ladies' and gentlemen's singles champions each received £2.35 million.

Quad Wheelchair Singles and Doubles events were introduced to the programme for the first time, Dylan Alcott of Australia winning the singles and teaming up with Great Britain's Andy Lapthorne to win the doubles.

Following the previous year's interminable semi-final between Kevin Anderson and John Isner, tie-breaks were introduced to decide any match reaching 12-12 in the final set. The new rule was implemented on three occasions, including only once in singles. Remarkably, this just happened to be the gentlemen's singles final between Roger Federer and Novak Djokovic. After Federer failed to convert two championship points on his own serve earlier in the set, it was Djokovic who prevailed in the deciding tie-break and won the title for the fifth time. He received the Challenge Cup from HRH The Duchess of Cambridge, the AELTC's Patron, who was presenting the trophy for the first time.

Despite his failure to clinch a ninth title, Federer did achieve two notable landmarks during The Championships. He became the first man to win more than 100 singles matches and he also surpassed Goran Ivanisevic's record for most career aces at Wimbledon.

The gentlemen's singles final was the longest in Wimbledon history, lasting four hours and 57 minutes. By an amazing coincidence, the previous day's gentlemen's doubles final had lasted exactly the same length of time. Juan Sebastian Cabal and Robert Farah became the first Colombians to win a Wimbledon title when they beat Nicolas Mahut and Edouard Roger-Vasselin in five sets, the first four of which went to tie-breaks.

In the ladies' singles final, Simona Halep of Romania played an almost flawless match, making only three unforced errors in a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Serena Williams. Halep's performance was statistically the 'cleanest' final in recorded history and left Williams still tantalisingly short of a record-equalling 24th Grand Slam title.

Earlier in the year, The All England Lawn Tennis Ground plc announced the issue of 2520 Centre Court debentures for The Championships 2021-2025. The issue was fully subscribed and raised £162.3 million (net of the nominal value, VAT and estimated expenses). The proceeds will be used for AELTG's capital investment in the continuing development and improvement of the Grounds, including the No.1 Court Project, the wider AELTC Master Plan and the acquisition of The Wimbledon Park Golf Club.

In December, Philip Brook retired after nine years as Club Chairman and was succeeded by Ian Hewitt. One of Hewitt's first acts was to appoint Sally Bolton as the AELTC's first female Chief Executive. Following a period of handover, Bolton took over from Richard Lewis on 1 August.

For all the wrong reasons, 2020 was one of the most extraordinary years in Wimbledon history. With the world in the grip of the deadly Covid-19 pandemic and the UK in lockdown, it was announced on 1 April that the 134th Championships was cancelled. Options for playing The Championships behind closed doors, or later in the year, had been considered. However, in the end, cancellation, while regrettable, was the only realistic decision. Fortunately, the AELTC had had the foresight, as long ago as 2003, to add pandemic cover to its insurance policy, meaning that the AELTC's financial position remained secure despite the cancellation. Since the first Championships in 1877, the only other times The Championships had not taken place were during the two world wars (1915-1918 and 1940-1945).

In the absence of The Championships, the AELTC turned its attention to contributing to the emergency response to the Covid-19 crisis. The AELTC kitchen delivered 200 daily hot meals for three months for those in need in Merton and Wandsworth, and much of the 2020 strawberry supply was donated to local hospitals. In addition, the 2020 balls were donated to clubs, parks and schools across the UK and 2020 towels were donated to charities supporting the homeless, including Crisis. The Wimbledon Foundation also created a £1.2m Coronavirus Fund (later increased to £1.5m) to be distributed among local and national charities.

Thanks to the insurance cover, it was possible to pay £10m in lieu of prize money to the 620 players whose world ranking would have enabled them to gain entry to The Championships 2020 by direct acceptance into the Main Draw or Qualifying event. Payments were also made to many of the officials who would have worked at The Championships 2020.

In an effort to fill the gap left by The Championships, the AELTC launched its 'Wimbledon Recreated' campaign, providing tennis fans around the world with tennis to watch and interact with across linear, digital and social media platforms during the grass court season and the 2020 Wimbledon Fortnight. The centrepiece was 'The Greatest Championships', a round-by-round re-telling of some of Wimbledon's greatest matches, made available across TV, digital and social media.

The Championships made a much-anticipated return after a two-year absence. Due to the ongoing Covid-19 pandemic, crowds were initially limited to 50 per cent of normal capacity. However, with the tournament being designated part of the UK government's Event Research Programme, limits were increased over the Fortnight, culminating in full houses on Centre Court to witness the two singles finals.

To ensure the safety of players and spectators, a 'Minimised Risk Environment' was in operation during The Championships. Players and their entourages, including those who lived locally, were required to stay in official hotels and were not allowed to mix with the general public.

No Public Ballot for tickets was held, 'with those who had paid for tickets for the cancelled Championships 2020 having their allocations carried over to 2022. Instead, all tickets were sold online in the weeks leading up to The Championships. Neither the traditional Queue nor Ticket Resale were in operation. Also absent from The Championships 2021 were the Invitation Doubles events.

Throughout the Fortnight, Royal Box invitations and Centre Court tickets were distributed to individuals and organisations who had contributed significantly in the response to the pandemic as a 'thank you', with The Hill also featuring a 'thank you' message throughout the Fortnight.

For the first time, the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum was open for free to ticket holders during The Championships. Visitors were able to enjoy the new temporary exhibition celebrating the upcoming centenary: 'Centre Court: 100 Years of Change'.

Novak Djokovic won his sixth gentlemen's singles title, joining Roger Federer and Rafael Nadal on 20 Grand Slam titles in the process. Ashleigh Barty was a popular winner of the ladies' singles, becoming the first Australian to take the title since Evonne Goolagong Cawley in 1980.

The ladies' doubles was won by Hsieh Su-Wei and Elise Mertens. It was Hsieh's third victory in the event, each with a different partner. The gentlemen's doubles was won by the Croatian pairing of Nikola Pietrangeli and Mate Pavić.

The mixed doubles final featured three British players, with Neal Skupski and his American partner, Desirae Krawczyk, defeating Joe Salisbury and Harriet Dart.

Following The Championships, HRH The Duke of Kent stood down as President of the AELTC, a position he had held since 1969. Later in the year, a new No.1 Court debenture issue, covering the period 2022 to 2026, raised £46.875 million.

For the first time since 2019, The Championships took place without the need for significant Covid-19 restrictions. Capacity around the Grounds returned to pre-pandemic levels and the Queue and Ticket Resale also returned. The Wimbledon Public Ballot, however, did not return, as tickets were allocated to those originally successful in the ballot for the cancelled Championships 2020.

In a sign that the pandemic wasn't entirely over, several players missed The Championships after testing positive for Covid-19, including former gentlemen's singles runners-up Matteo Berrettini and Marin Čilić.

Also missing were players from Russia and Belarus, who were excluded from The Championships following Russia's invasion of Ukraine (and the latter's support of it). As a result, the ATP and WTA withheld world ranking points from The Championships.

The format and scheduling of The Championships saw significant changes. For the first time, play was scheduled on Middle Sunday, meaning that the fourth round was played over two days instead of one. The second Tuesday and Wednesday saw an even split of gentlemen's and ladies' quarter-finals, and the mixed doubles final was brought forward to the Thursday.

Other changes included the introduction of a 14-and-under event to complement the Junior Championships and the doubling in size of the Quad Wheelchair draws. The Invitation events, being played for the first time since 2019, also saw a change, with the Gentlemen's Senior Invitation Doubles being replaced by a Mixed Invitation Doubles event.

In a move to standardise the scoring system across the Grand Slams, the final set tie-break rule was amended so that a first-to-10 tie-break would take place at six games all. Other innovations saw new Umpires' chairs on Centre and No.1 Courts, new Umpires' and Ball Boys' and Girls' uniforms and a new central entrance for players onto Centre Court.

2022 saw the All England Club celebrate the centenary of its move from Worple Road to the new Church Road Grounds. To mark the occasion, a special ceremony took place on Centre Court before the start of play on Middle Sunday. Sue Barker and John McEnroe introduced a parade of 26 former singles champions. Also honoured was Barker, who was retiring after 30 years of presenting the BBC's TV coverage of The Championships.

On the court, Novak Djokovic won his fourth consecutive gentlemen's singles title, his seventh in total, bringing him level with Pete Sampras and William Renshaw and just one short of Roger Federer's record. Elena Rybakina of Kazakhstan won the ladies' singles, becoming the first player from her country to win a Grand Slam singles title. Barbora Krejčíková and Katerina Siniakova won the ladies' doubles for the second time, four years after their first victory, and Neal Skupski and Desirae Krawczyk retained the mixed doubles title they had won in 2021. The gentlemen's doubles was won by the Australian pair Matthew Ebden and Max Purcell.

The return to normality following the Covid-19 pandemic continued with the reintroduction of the Wimbledon Public Ballot, which had not taken place since 2019. Also returning to The Championships were players from Russia and Belarus, who had been excluded the previous year due to Russia's invasion of Ukraine. In order to compete, players from these two countries were required to sign personal declarations agreeing to play as neutral athletes, not make public expressions of support for Russia's invasion of Ukraine or accept state funding in relation to their participation in The Championships.

An amendment was made to the 'almost entirely white' clothing rule, allowing female players to wear mid- or dark-coloured undershorts if they chose, relieving a potential source of anxiety around menstrual cycles. In other innovations, The Championships joined the other Grand Slam tournaments in a one-year experiment to allow off-court coaching, while as part of the All England Club's commitment to become 'environment positive' by 2030, a number of initiatives were introduced for 2023. One of the most noticeable changes saw players provided with evian refillable water bottles on court, replacing the existing plastic bottles.

Media interview facilities moved from their former home in the Millennium Building to a purpose-built space on top of the Broadcast Centre called the Media Pavilion. The Media Pavilion features a new Media Theatre, containing state-of-the-art technology, and a further seven interview rooms, an outdoor broadcast mixed zone, and stand-up and presentation positions for rights-holders.

In a change to the schedule, the Wheelchair events were played over five days rather than four, allowing more time for rest and recovery for those players who reached the latter stages of both the singles and doubles competitions.

On the court, a new Gentlemen's Singles Champion was crowned for the first time since 2013, with Carlos Alcaraz becoming the third Spaniard to win the title and the fifth-youngest men's champion. Alcaraz defeated defending champion Novak Djokovic in a thrilling five-set final that lasted four hours and 42 minutes, the third-longest in Wimbledon history. It was Djokovic's first defeat at The Championships since 2017 and his first on Centre Court since he lost to Andy Murray in the 2013 final. It was also the first time since 2002 that the title was not won by one of Djokovic, Roger Federer, Rafael Nadal or Murray.

There was a surprise winner of the ladies' singles title, with Marketa Vondrousova of the Czech Republic becoming the first unseeded winner of the event and the seventh different champion in as many years. Vondrousova defeated Ons Jabeur, who lost in the final for the second consecutive year. The popular Elina Svitolina of Ukraine, who was returning from maternity leave, became just the third wild card to reach the semi-finals of the ladies' singles. Five-time Ladies' Singles Champion Venus Williams competed in the event for the 24th time, equalling the record of Virginia Wade and Blanche Bingley Hillyard.

Great Britain's Neal Skupski and Wesley Koolhof of The Netherlands won the gentlemen's doubles. The event was played over the best of three sets for the first time, bringing The Championships in line with the other Grand Slam tournaments. Hsieh Su-Wei and Barbora Strycova regained the ladies' doubles title they had first won in 2019. For Hsieh it was her fourth victory in the event, with three different partners.

The mixed doubles was won by Mate Pavic of Croatia and Lyudmila Kichenok of Ukraine, who defeated Joran Vliegen and Xu Yifan in the final, having saved a match point in their second round match against Nikola Pietrangeli and Bernarda Pera. As a result, Kichenok became the first Ukrainian to win a Wimbledon title.

Despite regular interruptions for rain throughout the Fortnight, improved conditions on the final weekend ensured that the Championships schedule was completed on time. Over the course of the 14 days, a record aggregate crowd of 532,651 attended The Championships 2023.

In August, Ian Hewitt stood down as Chairman of the AELTC and was replaced by Deborah Jevans CBE, who became the Club's first female Chair. Also retiring was Championships Referee Gerry Armstrong, to be replaced by Denise Parnell – an Assistant Referee since 2006 – who became The Championships' first female Referee.

For the second consecutive year the Fortnight was badly affected by the weather, creating a challenging first Championships for new Referee Denise Parnell. However, despite being 80 matches behind schedule after prolonged rain on the second Tuesday, conditions improved enough for the programme to be completed on time. A record 109 matches were scheduled on the second Wednesday, 107 of which were played, and 15 finals were played on the last day of The Championships. Despite the weather, the total attendance for the Fortnight was 526,455, the second highest aggregate in Championships history and just the fifth time it has exceeded half a million. Daily attendance records were broken on both the second Friday and Saturday.

Carlos Alcaraz retained his gentlemen's singles title after defeating Novak Djokovic in a rematch of the previous year's final. Djokovic had come into The Championships with serious doubts over his fitness, having had surgery on a knee injury just a few weeks previously. Alcaraz was presented with the trophy by HRH The Princess of Wales, who was making just her second public appearance of the year since revealing that she was receiving treatment for cancer. The previous day, the Ladies' Singles Trophy had been presented by Club Chair, Deborah Jevans.

Although the final saw a one-sided straight-sets victory for Alcaraz, the gentlemen's singles draw was characterised by a series of close matches. Thirty-seven went to five sets, a record for any Grand Slam tournament. In 11 of these matches, a player fought back from two sets down to win. And, for the first time in the Open era in any Grand Slam event, there were no 6-0 sets.

On the ladies' side, Barbora Krejčíková became the eighth different Ladies' Singles Champion in eight years and the second in a row from the Czech Republic. In the final, she defeated Jasmine Paolini, the first Italian to reach the final. In winning the title, Krejčíková played a total of 175 games, the most any player has ever played in the event. The previous record was 173 by Conchita Martínez in 1994, who also won the title.

Paolini's semi-final against Donna Vekić was the longest in Wimbledon history. Lasting two hours and 51 minutes, it was one minute longer than the 2009 match between Serena Williams and Elena Dementieva.

In the gentlemen's doubles, Harri Heliövaara of Finland and Great Britain's Henry Patten became the 14th unseeded pair to win the title. In a final that didn't feature a single break of serve, they saved three match points before defeating Max Purcell and Jordan Thompson 6-7(7), 7-6(8), 7-6(9).

The ladies' doubles final also featured a tie-break in each set, with Katerina Siniakova and Taylor Townsend beating Gabriela Dabrowski and Erin Routliffe 7-6(7), 7-6(7). It was Siniakova's third victory in the event, having won in 2018 and 2022 alongside the new Ladies' Singles Champion, Krejčíková.

In the mixed doubles final, Jan Zielinski and Hsieh Su-Wei beat Santiago Gonzalez and Giuliana Olmos. It was a first mixed doubles title at The Championships for Hsieh, who had previously won the ladies' doubles four times. Due to the adverse weather, a first-to-10-points tie-break replaced the third set in every round of the mixed doubles.

The draws for the Wheelchair Singles and Doubles events were doubled in size to 16 players and eight pairs respectively. Diede de Groot won the Ladies' Wheelchair Singles for the sixth time. It was her 15th consecutive Grand Slam title. In the Gentlemen's Wheelchair Singles, there was joy and relief for Great Britain's Alfie Hewett, the defeated finalist for the previous two years, who completed the career Grand Slam.

There were also emotional scenes on the first Thursday, when Wimbledon said goodbye to two-time Gentlemen's Singles Champion Andy Murray. Although not fit enough to compete in the singles, Murray made his final appearance at The Championships alongside his brother, Jamie, in the doubles. After they lost their first round match to Rinky Hijikata and John Peers, a ceremony took place on Centre Court in which a video montage of his career highlights was shown and he was interviewed on court by Sue Barker. Murray had been due to also compete in the mixed doubles alongside Emma Raducanu, but Raducanu withdrew before their first round match.

Also taking place on the first Thursday, 4 July, was the UK general election. It was the first time the election had taken place during The Championships since 1895.

The Championships 2024 saw record prize money, totalling £50 million, an increase of more than 10 per cent from 2023. The singles champions received £2.7 million each. Earlier in the year, a successful Centre Court Debenture issue for 2026-2030 raised £238.2 million.

Spring 2024 also saw the completion of the AELTC Community Tennis Centre at Raynes Park, with the opening of the new two-storey clubhouse, housing a cafe, changing rooms and a multi-function studio space.

This year also marked the 10-year anniversary of the Wimbledon Foundation, the charity of The All England Lawn Tennis Club and The Championships. Over the past decade, the Foundation has invested more than £20 million on charitable activities locally, nationally and internationally.

THE CHAMPIONSHIPS

Tracing its origins back to the Victorian era, The Championships transformed the game of lawn tennis. The Championships continues to break new ground both on and off the court as new events are added and new innovations are developed and delivered in order to ensure that the Fortnight continues to provide tennis lovers around the world the best possible experience.

Structure

CHAMPIONSHIP EVENTS

Founded in 1877, The Championships has become the world's premier annual tennis tournament and one of the biggest annual sporting events in the world. Comprised of five main events – the Gentlemen's Singles, Ladies' Singles, Gentlemen's Doubles, Ladies' Doubles and Mixed Doubles, The Championships has grown to include four junior events for 18-and-under boys and girls in singles and doubles, singles events for 14-and-under boys and girls, six wheelchair events for Gentlemen, Ladies and Quad Wheelchair players in singles and doubles, and three invitation events – gentlemen's, ladies and mixed doubles – for players who have retired from professional tennis. The Championships reaches an audience of over a billion across broadcast media, digital and social media platforms in over 200 territories around the world, and generates revenue in excess of £200m per year.

The following section aims to summarise the major aspects of The Championships in terms of its structure, management and finances and other key operational considerations. For further information on any aspect of these, please visit www.wimbledon.com.

Seeding

A simplified form of seeding was introduced in 1924 when up to four representatives of a nation were drawn in four different quarters of the draw.

In 1927 full seeding was carried out and competitors were selected according to ability irrespective of nationality. Since then, an unseeded player has won the gentlemen's singles twice, in 1985 and 2001, and the ladies' singles once, in 2023. 14 unseeded players have reached the final of the gentlemen's singles (including Kurt Nielsen of Denmark, who achieved this twice) and five unseeded players have reached the final of the ladies' singles. 14 unseeded pairs have won the gentlemen's doubles, nine unseeded pairs have won the ladies' doubles and 14 unseeded pairs have won the mixed doubles.

Since 1975, seeding has been based on computer rankings. Since 2001, 32 players have been seeded in the gentlemen's and ladies' singles.

From 2002–2019, seeding in the gentlemen's singles was determined by a surface-based system. The top 32 players in the world rankings were guaranteed to be seeded, however their exact placing was adjusted according to a formula that took into account grass court form over the previous two years.

For the ladies' singles, the seeding order followed the world ranking list, except where, in the opinion of the Committee, the grass court credentials of a particular player necessitated a change in the interest of achieving a balanced draw.

Since 2021, seeding for both the gentlemen's and ladies' singles draws has been based solely on world ranking.

SEEDED PLAYERS IN THE CONCLUDING ROUNDS

The following tables reveal the progress of seeded players in the concluding rounds of The Championships since full seeding was first introduced in 1927, with the numbers used denoting a player's seeding position, e.g. the Gentlemen's Singles Championship 1927 was won by the No.4 seed, France's Henri Cochet.

Wild Cards

Wild cards are players without a high enough world ranking to go straight into the draw but who are specially nominated by the Committee, usually because of past performances at The Championships or to increase British interest. Wild cards have been allocated to The Championship draws from 1977 and to the Qualifying competitions from 1981. From 2003, a number of the Gentlemen's and Ladies' Singles wild cards, allocated to the Championship draw, were decided by play-off competitions, held two weeks before The Championships. In 2003 a restricted draw for the events took place, but from 2004 to 2006 a 24-draw for both singles events comprised 20 direct acceptances dependent on World Ranking, and four wild cards decided by LTA. The winners were guaranteed a place in The Championship draw and prize money was awarded. These events were only open to British players. The procedure was abandoned after 2006 and the system of wild cards being allocated directly by the Committee resumed. Since 1981 wild cards have been allocated to the Qualifying competitions.

From 2007 a number of singles wild cards allocated to the Qualifying draws has been decided by play-off competitions, held two weeks before The Championships.

Qualifying Competitions

From 1919 the entries for The Championships were so numerous that it was necessary to restrict the numbers accepted. The entries fell into two categories, one consisting of the players nominated by their national associations and the other individual entries. The former were accepted without question, but the latter were subjected to a careful scrutiny by a sub-committee of five, including the Referee.

In 1925 a Qualifying Competition for the five Championship events was held for the first time, during the week before, at the Roehampton Club, London. In singles the last eight survivors qualified and, in the doubles, the last four pairs. In 1927 an additional Qualifying Competition was held in the North of England, restricted to entries from northern counties and Scotland. In the singles the last two survivors qualified and, in the doubles, the last pair.

Qualifying was not held in 1946 but both the Southern and Northern competitions were reinstated for the 1947 Championships. In 1966 the Northern competition was held for the last time and since that date Qualifying has taken place in the south.

There was no qualifying for the gentlemen's doubles and mixed doubles in 1973, owing to the A.T.P. boycott, and for the mixed doubles in 1977, when the ladies' singles and doubles were played at Eastbourne simultaneously with the Federation Cup. Qualifying for the mixed doubles was discontinued after 1991, and both gentlemen's and ladies' doubles Qualifying was discontinued after 2018.

From 1925 to date all matches involving ladies have been contested over the best of three sets. From 1925 to 1971 the gentlemen's singles and doubles matches were contested throughout over the best of five sets. From 1972 to date, with the exception of 1973, 1993, 1997 and 1998 these matches were reduced to the best of three sets except in the last round, where they were contested over the best of five sets. In 1973 (A.T.P. boycott), 1993, 1997 and 1998 (rain) the best of three sets were played throughout.

Acceptance for the Qualifying Competition has been by computer ranking since 1977. Seeding began in 1978.

From 1983 to 2003 the Lawn Tennis Association held Pre-Qualifying singles events, two weeks before The Championships. For further details, see 'Events No Longer Held'.

LUCKY LOSERS

Lucky Losers are players who have lost in the final round of the Qualifying Competition and, if more Lucky Losers are required for substitutes, those players who have lost in the previous qualifying round. A Lucky Loser is inserted in The Championships draw as a substitution for a player who withdraws before their first round match. The procedure originated in 1937 when Lucky Losers were drawn by lot (hence the name), but from 1977–2005, players with the highest ranking were substituted first, and so on. In 2006 and 2007, the top four highest ranked players were randomly drawn and thereafter followed the ranking. In 2008 all players were randomly drawn. From 2009 the four highest ranked players have been randomly drawn and thereafter follow the rankings, unless there are more than two vacancies, in which case the size of the random draw will be the number of vacancies plus two. Similar arrangements are made for the doubles events. Up to 1936 players withdrawing from The Championships, after the draw had been made, were not replaced.

Wheelchair Events

There are six wheelchair events played at The Championships. The Gentlemen's Singles and Doubles, Ladies' Singles and Doubles, and Quad Wheelchair Singles and Doubles. These events are staged in partnership with the ITF Wheelchair Tennis Tour and the AELTC is proud to welcome the world's best players to compete on grass for the chance to become a Wimbledon champion.

For full details of the various Wheelchair Tennis Champions at The Championships over the years, please see page 110.

Junior Championships

Originally in 1947 the Committee of Management invited 18 junior champions from 10 European countries to watch the second week's play during The Championships.

In the mornings Dan Maskell, the Club Professional, organised an American tournament for the boys and girls on the hard courts. The boys' event was won by 16-year-old Kurt Nielsen of Denmark. His prize was a small silver cup, donated by Maskell, which was presented by the newly crowned Wimbledon Champion, Jack Kramer. The girls' winner was Genevieve Domken of Belgium, who received a prize, donated by Dr. Colin Gregory.

The juniors were invited again in 1948 and, as in the previous year, competitions took place on the hard courts during the mornings. In 1949 the two events were held in public on the outside grass courts during the afternoons of the second week under normal knockout conditions. This practice has continued ever since, with both events raised to Championship status in 1975. Seeding began in 1977. For the first time in 1998 a Qualifying Competition for the Boys' and Girls' Singles, for up to 48 in each event, was held at the Bank of England Sports Club during the first week of The Championships.

In 2022, the Junior Championships expanded with the inclusion of a 14-and-under draw, providing promising players with a unique opportunity to play on grass early in their junior careers. 16 boys and 16 girls from across the world compete on the Championships courts at the All England Club during the second week of the tournament. The AELTC works with Regional Associations and Grand Slam nations to allocate the places to ensure representation from across the globe.

The 14-and-under draw is a round-robin singles event with four groups of four players, guaranteeing at least three matches per player. First place in each group progresses to knockout semi-finals and finals. Consolation matches are played for those not reaching the semi-finals. In addition, a grass court training camp is held in the days preceding the tournament.

Invitation Events

The Invitation Doubles represents a lighter side of The Championships, an opportunity for stars of yesteryear to entertain the crowds with their skills.

The events are divided into three categories: the Gentlemen's Invitation Doubles, the Ladies' Invitation Doubles and the Mixed Invitation Doubles. Each event consists of eight invited pairs divided into two groups, playing each other within their group on a round robin basis. The group winner is the pair with the most wins. In the case of a tie the winning pair may be determined by head to head results or a formula based on percentage of sets/games won to those played. The two group winners meet in the final.

The matches are played to the best of three sets. If a match should reach one set all a 10-point tie-break will replace the third set.

For full details of the winners of each Invitation Event over the years, please see page 134.

Management and Finances

COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT

The Lawn Tennis Championship Meeting is under the joint management of The All England Lawn Tennis & Croquet Club through its wholly owned subsidiary, The All England Lawn Tennis Club (Championships) Limited ('AELTC') and the Lawn Tennis Association through its wholly owned subsidiary, LTA Operations Limited.

A Committee of Management consisting of the AELTC Board (12 members) and seven nominees of LTA Operations Limited form sub-committees for all major aspects of the meeting, e.g. commercial, catering, finance, ground, tennis and tickets. The AELTC provides the staff back-up.

VARIOUS AGREEMENTS AND ARRANGEMENTS BETWEEN THE ALL ENGLAND LAWN TENNIS & CROQUET CLUB AND THE LAWN TENNIS ASSOCIATION

The Club gave effect to an LTA ruling and accepted, for the first time, two LTA delegates onto its Committee of Management of The Lawn Tennis Championships at Wimbledon.

1913

Following the inaugural meeting of The International Lawn Tennis Federation, where the LTA accepted the 'World's Championships on Grass Courts' on behalf of the British Isles, an arrangement was made with the Club to combine such Championships with the Club's three existing Championships and upgrade the Ladies' Doubles and Mixed Doubles events to Championship status.

1914

In a memorandum of understanding the two parties confirmed the arrangements for staging the five Championship events at the Club. LTA representation on the Committee was increased to four and the LTA was allocated a share in the profits for the first time, although for a period the LTA waived its share to allow for heavy expenditure on ground improvements.

1920

A company was formed (The All England Lawn Tennis Ground Ltd.) with the object of the Club purchasing and equipping a new ground at Wimbledon Park, (Church Road) and with a view to raising capital by the issue of debentures and entering into a formal Agreement which would lock together the interests of the Club and the LTA.

The parties formalised their arrangements by executing an Agreement for a term of 25 years; generally its provisions were preoccupied with the redemption of debentures and ensuring LTA use of the ground for competitions, matches and the training of players; a joint Committee was constituted (four members each) for the purpose of controlling extraordinary expenditure. Following an International Lawn Tennis Federation decision to abolish the title of the 'World's Championships on Grass Courts', a Supplementary Agreement in 1923 altered the title to 'Official Lawn Tennis Championships recognised by The International Lawn Tennis Federation'; a further Supplementary Agreement in 1928 contained minor financial changes.

A new Agreement between the Club and the LTA was negotiated to remain in force until at least 1972; it set up (inter alia) a Joint Committee of Management of The Championships for the purpose of controlling and managing The Championships (twelve Club and six LTA nominees), payment to the LTA of all the Surplus arising therefrom, the provision and maintenance of Special Reserve Funds and the transfer by the Club to the LTA of one half of its shareholding in the Ground Company. A Supplementary Agreement in 1950 dealt entirely with financial matters which arose in the course of previous arrangements. In 1966 the Principal Agreement was updated by the amendment of a few specific minor provisions to meet changing conditions; the number of the LTA's nominees to the Joint Committee of Management was increased to seven and the Agreement extended to at least 1999.

1993

The 1934 Agreement was varied by a Deed of Variation to give effect to changes appropriate to the circumstances in the 1990s and beyond: it expired on 31 July 2013. Generally the Deed of Variation regulates the relationship between the Club and the LTA, perpetuates the principle that the surplus derived from The Championships goes to British tennis and recognises the part played by the Club in staging The Championships.

2009

On 14 May 2009 the Club, the LTA and the Ground Company agreed arrangements for the continuation of their relationship in respect of The Championships for at least a further 40 years from 1 August 2013. Under a revised long-term agreement effective from that date the Club will receive 10 per cent and the LTA 90 per cent of the surplus generated by The Championships and the Ground Company will continue to receive a facility fee out of the income of The Championships before determination of the distributable surplus.

In 2011, formal reorganisations took place whereby (i) the Club was converted into a company limited by guarantee as The All England Lawn Tennis & Croquet Club Limited, (ii) The All England Lawn Tennis Club (Championships) Limited (AELTC) was formed as a wholly-owned subsidiary and acquired all assets and liabilities and rights and obligations of the Club relating to The Championships and (iii) the Lawn Tennis Association also incorporated and formed two new companies, Lawn Tennis Association Limited and LTA Operations Limited. The 2009 Agreement between the Club and the LTA was revised to reflect the new incorporated entities.

Consequent upon these reorganisations, The Championships have been controlled, managed and promoted by AELTC under the supervision of the Committee of Management, comprising 12 AELTC members and seven nominees of LTA Operations Limited.

On 1 August 2013, the Club became again the 100% owner of the Ground Company as a result of the Club and the Ground Company itself buying the LTA's shares in the Ground Company.

CHAMPIONSHIPS SURPLUS

From 1877 to 1912, The Championships were promoted and managed by The All England Lawn Tennis Club and all profits remained in their control.

In 1913, the Club amalgamated their three Championships with the five World Championships awarded by The Lawn Tennis Association and, in return, agreed to pay the LTA a percentage of the gate receipts. In practice, the LTA waived their right to this income for the years 1913 and 1914 to allow the Club to expand further the Worple Road Centre Court facilities. The LTA also took no money in 1919 but in 1920 and 1921 received a very small percentage of the gross receipts from admission and seats.

In 1920 a company was formed (The All England Lawn Tennis Ground Ltd.) with the object of the Club purchasing and equipping a new ground at Wimbledon (present site) and with a view to raising capital by the issue of debentures and entering into a formal Agreement which would lock together the interests of the Club and The Lawn Tennis Association. The interlocking of the finances of The Championships between the Club, The Lawn Tennis Association and the Ground Company stems from an Agreement made in 1922, whereby the surplus from The Championships was shared between the Club and the LTA after paying the running expenses of the Club and deducting a preferential sum towards the redemption of debentures.

A revised Agreement made in 1934 provided, inter alia, for joint arrangements for managing The Championships instituted by the Club, mutual obligations in the event of a Championships financial deficiency and/or insufficiency, the transfer by the Club to the LTA of one half of its shareholding in the Ground Company and the payment to the LTA of all the surplus arising from The Championships after meeting expenses incurred in running and administering the Club and the expenses of running The Championships (other than capital expenditure).

The 1934 Agreement was varied by a Deed of Variation in 1993 to give effect to changes appropriate to the circumstances in the 1990s and beyond: it expired on 31st July, 2013. The Deed of Variation perpetuated the financial principles set out in the earlier Agreement, recognises the part played by the Club in staging The Championships and incorporated The All England Lawn Tennis Club (Wimbledon) Limited as the fourth party to the Agreement – a company formed for the purpose of exploiting commercially any trademarks, trade names etc. for the financial benefit of The Championships.

Under a revised long term agreement from 1 August 2013 the AELTC receives 10 per cent and the LTA 90 per cent of the surplus generated by the Championships.

The funds generated by The Championships, less tax, are used by the LTA to develop tennis in Great Britain. The sum paid in 1981 exceeded the million pound mark, for the first time, and this figure has substantially increased over the years.

The LIST OF SUBSCRIPTIONS will open on the 30th June, 1920, and will close on or before the 31st July, 1920.

No part of this issue has been underwritten.

THE ALL ENGLAND LAWN TENNIS GROUND LIMITED.

(Incorporated under the Companies Acts 1908 to 1917.)

SHARE CAPITAL - - £10,000.

Divided into 10,000 Shares of £1 each, of which 8,500 will be issued credited as fully paid.

ISSUE for Subscription of £75,000 Debentures (part of a Series of £100,000 Debentures), of the Company at par.

The above-mentioned series of Debentures will be composed of "A" Debentures and "B" Debentures. The number and amount of each class to be issued to Subscribers for this issue will be determined, on the closing of the list, according to the applications received.

The "A" Debentures, which will be of £50 each, will bear interest at the rate of 7½ per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, will be redeemable (by yearly drawings at par as below mentioned) on or before the 1st August, 1947, and will confer upon the registered holder the right to purchase one seat in the Centre Court Stand for each of the Grass Court Championship Meetings held at the Company's ground below referred to, up to and including that held in the year 1947, at the prices current at such Meetings.

The "B" Debentures, which will be of £50 each, will carry no interest, but will confer upon the registered holder the right, without payment therefor, to one seat in the Centre Court Stand for each of the above-mentioned Meetings, and will be redeemable in like manner on or before the 1st August, 1947, at par.

Arrangements have been made with the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club whereby every Subscriber for a "B" Debenture whose Application Form therefor is received prior to the closing of the list will, in addition to the foregoing rights, be entitled (without payment and so long as he remains the registered holder) to one seat for each "B" Debenture held by him in the Centre Court Stand on the existing ground of the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club for each day on which play takes place at the Grass Court Championship Meeting in 1921, and in each subsequent year until the new ground is ready for holding the Grass Court Championship Meetings.

The Debentures now offered will be paid for by the following instalments:-

"A" DEBENTURES			(per Debenture)	£10.
- On Application	-	-	do.	£10.
- On Allotment	-	-	do.	£15.

- On 1st August, 1921	-	-	do.	£10.
				£50.
"B" DEBENTURES			(per Debenture)	£10.
- On Application	-	-	do.	£40.
- On Allotment	-	-	do.	£10.
				£50.

The half-yearly days for payment of interest on the "A" Debentures are the 1st February and the 1st August in each year, the first payment being made on the 1st February, 1921, calculated on the instalments as from the due date of payment.

Instalments in respect of "A" Debentures may be paid in full on allotment, and will carry interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from date of payment.

Interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum will be charged on instalments in arrear, and failure to pay any instalment on the due date will render all previous payments liable to forfeiture.

The "A" and "B" Debentures of the above-mentioned series from time to time issued will rank pari passu as a first charge upon the undertaking and property (both present and future) of the Company, including its uncalled capital (if any), without preference or priority one over another. Such charge will be a floating security, but the Company is not to be at liberty to create any mortgage or charge ranking in priority to or pari passu therewith.

The Company has the right to issue all or any part of the unissued Debentures of this series as "A" or "B" Debentures from time to time.

In view of the arrangement proposed in relation to the Company's ground as below mentioned, there will be no yearly drawings made of the Debentures until the year commencing 1st August, 1922, but in that year, and in every subsequent year down to and including that commencing on the 1st August, 1946, such a number of "A" and "B" Debentures from time to time issued and outstanding will be annually redeemed by drawings as will ensure that by the 1st August, 1947 (the date of maturity), the whole of the issued and outstanding Debentures will be redeemed or paid off.

An equal number of the Debentures of the present issue will be drawn in this manner in each of the years referred to, but the Company reserves to itself the right at any time, on six months' previous notice, to redeem all or any of the outstanding Debentures at par.

The Debentures will be transferable by Deed in common form.

DEBENTURES

Every five years, Centre Court Debentures are sold. It is from this source that The All England Lawn Tennis Ground plc (1), wholly owned from 1 August 2013 by The All England Lawn Tennis & Croquet Club Limited, derives most of its funds to meet capital expenditure.

The original Debentures were issued in 1920. During the years immediately prior to the First World War, the Club considerably expanded the facilities at the Worple Road ground to meet the growing demand of the public, by increasing the capacity of the Centre Court and purchasing adjacent houses and gardens. Even so, when the tournament resumed after the War, in 1919, the grounds still could not cope with the greater than ever crowds and, as further expansion was not possible, the Club sought new premises.

In June, 1920, the Club formed the 'Ground' Company primarily with the object of acquiring 13½ acres of freehold land at Wimbledon Park, Surrey (the present site of the Club), and to develop the Grounds for the purpose of staging The Lawn Tennis Championships and other competitions.

To fund the capital required, the 'Ground' Company raised £75,000 by the issue of 'A' and 'B' Debentures at £50 each. The 'A' Debentures carried an interest rate of 7.5 per cent per annum, redeemable in or before August 1947, and also conferred on the holder the right to purchase one seat in the Centre Court Stand for each day of The Championships up to and including 1947, at the prices current at such meetings. The 'B' Debentures carried no interest but conferred upon the holder the right, without payment, to one seat in the Centre Court Stand for a similar period. The Debenture issue was oversubscribed and increased to £100,000. Because of the Second World War, the Debentures were extended by six years until the end of The Championships 1953.

In 1948, existing holders were offered the opportunity of extending their rights until The Championships 1959 with a new issue of 2,100 Debentures at £50 each. Money was required to effect repairs to the Club's premises, including bomb damage, none having been carried out for nine years, and to improve the Centre Court and catering facilities.

So the process has continued and, apart from one year only, 1960, Debentures have been issued every five years. The three issues of 2,100 Debentures for 1986–1990, 1991–1995 and 1996–2000 realised approximately £10.5 million, £31.5 million and £30.7 million, respectively. Arising from the extension of the west side of the Centre Court, an additional 200 Debentures, making a total of 2,300, were offered for 2001–2005 and 2006–2010. Following the further increase in capacity, resulting from the completion of the Centre Court redevelopment in 2008, an additional 200 debentures, making a total of 2,500, were offered for 2011–2015 and 2016–2020. These realised £55 million and £100 million respectively. In March 2019, the Company announced the 2021–2025 series of 2,520 Centre Court Debentures which raised £163.8 million. The most recent issue of 2,520 debentures for 2026–2030 will raise £239.4 million.

Since the late 1970s, income from Debentures has funded many major works programmes to provide expanded and improved facilities for the players, spectators, officials and media, such as: 1979 – Raising of the Centre Court roof and the construction of a new Debenture Holders' Lounge on the north side of Centre Court, 1980 – Members' Enclosure made a permanent building, 1981 – No.1 Court Competitors' Complex rebuilt, 1985 – East Side Centre Court Building constructed, 1986 – new two-storey Pavilion in Aorangi Park, 1989 – three new covered courts, 1991 – Centre Court North Building extended to provide greater accommodation for Debenture Holders and offices, 1992 – Replacement of Centre Court roof, 2009 – development of Centre Court including a retractable roof and new No.2 Court, 2019 – redevelopment of No.1 Court including retractable roof, 2019 – new Indoor Tennis Centre, 2022 – construction of Media Pavilion.

In recent years, further funding has been provided by the issue of Debentures for the new No.1 Court. The issue of 1,000 Debentures for 1997–2001 realised £8 million, 834 Debentures for 2002–2006 realised £6.7 million, 850 Debentures for 2007–2011 realised £8.5 million, and 1,000 Debentures for 2012–2016 realised £11 million. In 2016 the issue of 1,000 Debentures for 2017–2021 realised £25 million. Most recently, in 2021, the issue of 1,250 Debentures for 2022–2026 raised £46.875 million.

Following the cancellation of The Championships 2020, debenture holders received a refund equal to one fifth of the premiums they paid at issue with those refunds being covered by cancellation insurance in place for The Championships.

Notes: (1) The status prior to 24 January 1996 was a private limited company.

THE FIELD CUP, 1877-1883

The original Gentlemen's Singles Trophy, won by the first Wimbledon Champion, Spencer Gore, in 1877, was the Field Cup. This was presented to The All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club, especially for the event, by The Field newspaper. J.H. Walsh, the Honorary Secretary of the Club and the editor of The Field, who persuaded his Proprietors to support the new venture by providing the 25 guineas Cup.

The Cup, which is made of sterling silver, stands 14½ inches high, with a base diameter of 6 inches and a rim diameter of 7½ inches. The hallmark, beneath the rim, indicates a date of 1877. The Cup has two handles and a raised foot. Decoration consists of two crossed tennis rackets and three tennis balls at the front, below which lies the following inscription:

The All England Lawn Tennis Challenge Cup Presented by the Proprietors of The Field For competition by Amateurs Wimbledon July 1877

The reverse of the Cup is engraved with the dates and names of the Champions from 1877 to 1883, the last being William Renshaw, who having won The Championships three times in succession was permitted under the regulations to keep it. The Field Cup is on display in Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum.

CHALLENGE CUP (AELTC), 1884-1886

After The Championships 1883, the All England Lawn Tennis Club purchased a new 50 guineas Challenge Cup to replace the trophy retired by William Renshaw. As with The Field Cup, regulations stated that the Cup would be held for one year but if won by the same player in three successive years would become their property.

Renshaw won this second Challenge Cup in three successive years, 1884-1886, and consequently retired the trophy. Details and whereabouts of the trophy are unknown.

CHALLENGE CUP (AELTC), 1887 TO DATE

The All England Lawn Tennis Club spent 100 guineas from the profits of The Championships 1886 to purchase a new trophy. The Club was not prepared to risk losing a third Cup to a future three-times Champion so the decision was taken that the new trophy would "never become the property of the winner".

The Cup, which is silver gilt, stands 18 inches high and has a diameter of 7½ inches. It weighs 3.5kg (6.2kg including its plinth). The hallmark indicates a date of 1883. The Cup has a classical style with two handles and a raised foot. The lid is formed with a pineapple on the top and there is a head wearing a winged helmet beneath each handle. There are two decorative borders with floral work and ovolo mouldings on the bowl of the Cup and on the handles.

The inscription on the Cup reads:

The All England Lawn Tennis Club Single Handed Championship of the World

Around the bowl are engraved the dates and names of the Champions. Although Herbert Lawford was the first Champion to win the Cup in 1887, the decision was taken to engrave all the Champions' names from 1877. In 2009, there being no space left to engrave further names of the Champions, a black plinth with an ornamented silver gilt band was designed to accompany the Cup.

Above: The Gentlemen's Singles Trophy that is presented today is the third edition of the All England Club's Challenge Cup and has been presented to the Champion of the event since 1887

From 1949 to 2006, all Champions received a miniature replica of the Cup (height 8½ inches). From 2007, all Champions have received a three-quarter size replica of the Cup bearing the names of all past Champions (height 13½ inches).

THE RENSHAW CUP, 1905–1989

The Renshaw Cup, a prize rather than a trophy, was won outright annually. This Cup was originally presented to The All England Lawn Tennis Club in 1905 by the surviving members of the family of Ernest and William Renshaw, who contributed so much to lawn tennis in the 1880s, as First Prize to the winner of the All Comers' Singles. However, from 1922, when the Challenge Round was abolished, until 1989, the Cup was presented to the Champion.

Originally the Cup stood 10 inches high with a base diameter of 4½ inches and the bowl diameter, rim to rim, of 7 inches. From 1953, the practice of presenting a 'full-size' Cup ceased and instead the Champion received a miniature replica (height 5 inches).

The Cup was originally manufactured by Messrs. Elkington and Co. Ltd. of Birmingham, in sterling silver, with a value of £20. The design consists of an octagonal base, supporting a round plinth on which stands a winged, mercurial figure with arms stretched upwards to support the bowl of the Cup. The first winner in 1905, was Norman Brookes of Australia. Examples of the Renshaw Cup can be seen on display in Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum.

THE PRESIDENT'S CUP, 1908–1994

The Championships 1907 was particularly memorable because The All England Lawn Tennis Club was honoured by the presence of Their Royal Highnesses The Prince and Princess of Wales. As a result of this visit, Prince George, later King George V, became President of the Club and expressed a wish to present a "perpetual Challenge Cup" to be competed for annually at The Championships. The Committee decided that the trophy should be held for the year by the winner of the All Comers' Singles.

The Cup stands 17 inches high and is 7½ inches in diameter. This silver trophy has a lid and a raised foot.

The inscription on the Cup reads:

Presented by George, Prince of Wales, to the All England Lawn Tennis Club to be held for the year by the Winner of the All Comers' Singles Championship of the World.

The wording of this inscription is rather ambiguous. From 1908 to 1921, the last year of the Challenge Round, the winner of the All Comers' Singles did not become Champion of the World – only if he defeated the defending Champion. When the Challenge Round was abolished in 1922 the defending Champion had to "play through" and there was no longer an All Comers' Singles. From then to 1994, the Champion became the holder of the President's Cup and the Challenge Cup (AELTC). After 1994, the President's Cup was retired.

The dates and names of the winners of the All Comers' Singles, from Arthur Gore in 1908 to 1921, and the dates and names of the Champions, 1922–1994 are engraved on the bowl of the Cup.

From 1949 to 1994, all Champions received a miniature replica of the Cup (height 9 inches).

GENTLEMEN'S PAIRS TROPHY, 1884 TO DATE

In 1884, The All England Lawn Tennis Club added a Gentlemen's Doubles Championship to the programme. Earlier in that year the Oxford University Lawn Tennis Club had decided, owing to lack of support, to discontinue their championship, which had been instituted in 1879, and offered to transfer the Challenge Cup to The All England Lawn Tennis Club. The Committee was pleased to accept the offer and agreed that the inscription on the trophy should be altered as little as possible.

The 60 guineas Challenge Cup, which is made of sterling silver, stands 9 inches high and has a diameter of 11 inches. The Cup has a wide open bowl and stands on a raised foot. There are two handles, decorated with acanthus leaves. The front bears the emblem of the Oxford University Lawn Tennis Club and the following inscription:

*All England Lawn Tennis Club Challenge Cup For Pairs Presented in 1884 To the A.E.L.T.C.
By the Oxford University Lawn Tennis Club. By Whom it was instituted as a Challenge Cup
Open to All England*

On either side of the inscription are crossed rackets. On the reverse of the bowl is a scene, executed in repousse work, showing a 'four-handed' match in progress, as it would have looked c.1884. The trophy stands upon a round black plinth, encircled by a silver band, on which are engraved the dates and names of all winners since 1879.

GENTLEMEN'S DOUBLES TROPHY, 1937 TO DATE

The Gentlemen's Doubles Trophy was introduced as a companion to the Gentlemen's Pairs Trophy in 1937. The All England Lawn Tennis Club presented the Cup to Sir Herbert Wilberforce upon his resignation from the Chairmanship of the Club and he in turn gave the Trophy back to the Club to be held as a pair to the Oxford University Cup.

The trophy, made of sterling silver by Messrs. Elkington and Co. Ltd. of Birmingham, 1936, is identical with the Pairs Trophy except for the motif and inscription on the front of the bowl.

Instead of the Oxford University Lawn Tennis Club emblem, the trophy bears the crossed rackets in a circle of the Club and the inscription reads:

The Gentlemen's Doubles Championship. This Challenge Cup was presented in 1937 by the Members of The All England Lawn Tennis Club To Sir Herbert Wilberforce on his resigning the Chairmanship of the Club and was given by him to the Club to be held as a companion of the Oxford University Cup.

Above: The Gentlemen's Doubles Trophy was introduced in 1937

The trophy stands upon a round black plinth, encircled by a silver band on which are engraved the dates and names of all winners since 1879. From 1949 to 2011, both Champions received a miniature replica of the trophy (height 4½ inches). From 2012 both Champions received a three-quarter size trophy.

LADIES' SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP

THE LADIES' SINGLES PLATE, 1886 TO DATE

The Ladies' Singles Trophy is a silver salver, sometimes referred to as the 'Rosewater Dish' or 'Venus Rosewater Dish', which was first won by the Champion when the Challenge Round was introduced in 1886.

The 50 guineas trophy was made in 1864 by Messrs. Elkington and Co. Ltd. of Birmingham and is a copy of an electrotype, obtained by Casper Enderlein, from a pewter original in the Louvre. The salver, which is made of sterling silver, partly gilded, is 18¾ inches in diameter. It weighs 2.3kg (4.5kg including its plinth). There is a central boss surrounded by four reserves, with eight on the spreading rim. The remainder of the surface is decorated with gilt renaissance strapwork and foliate motifs in relief against a rigid silver ground.

Above: The iconic Venus Rosewater Dish is one of the most recognisable trophies in sport and along with its plinth weighs in at an impressive 4.5kg

The theme of the decoration is mythological. The central boss has a figure of Temperance, seated on a chest with a lamp in her right hand and a jug in her left, with various attributes such as a sickle, fork and caduceus around her. The four reserves on the boss of the dish each contain a classical god, together with attribute, Venus, Jupiter, Mercury and Water Goddess, representing the four elements. The reserves around the rim show Minerva presiding over the seven Liberal Arts: Astrology, Geometry, Arithmetic, Music, Rhetoric, Dialectic and Grammar, each with relevant attribute. The rim of the salver has an ovolo moulding.

The trophy bears no inscription other than the engraving showing the dates and names of all the Champions. Although Blanche Bingley was the first Champion to win the trophy in 1886, the name of Maud Watson, the Champion of 1884 and 1885, has been added. Dates and names from 1884 to 1957 are to be found around the inside of the bowl and from 1958 to 2015 around the outside of the bowl.

In 2016, the outside of the bowl did not allow further engraving of the Champions' dates and names. A plinth consisting of an oval hardwood base, having a glass ebonised finish, was commissioned. A sterling silver inscription band is affixed which allows space for further engraving.

From 1949 to 2006, all Champions received a miniature replica of the trophy (diameter 8 inches). From 2007, all Champions have received a three-quarter size replica of the trophy, bearing the names of all past Champions (diameter 14 inches).

Over the years the Club has received many enquiries from people who possess salvers made to a design identical to that of the Ladies' Singles Plate. Some have been made in silver and others in copper or tin. Since these salvers are 'electrotypes' created by electric deposition of copper on a mould, it is reasonable to assume that Elkingtons made many. However, only one salver has been used since 1886 as the trophy for the Ladies' Singles Championship. There is no truth in the story that Queen Victoria donated the trophy to the Club.

LADIES' DOUBLES CHAMPIONSHIP

CHALLENGE TROPHIES (LTA), 1913-1939

Following the creation of the International Lawn Tennis Federation in 1913, the Lawn Tennis Association accepted, on behalf of the British Isles, the "World Championships on Grass". The All England Lawn Tennis Club agreed to merge these Championships with the three existing Championships and to extend the programme to include Ladies' Doubles and Mixed Doubles Championships.

The LTA decided to present two silver Challenge Trophies to the winners of each new event. With the outbreak of the Second World War in 1939 the LTA withdrew the trophies for safe keeping but in 1941 the trophies were lost when the building where they were kept was destroyed by enemy action. Details of the trophies are unknown.

The Cup, made of sterling silver by Wakely & Wheeler of London is identical in design and size to the companion, except for the engraving on the front and reverse sides which are inscribed as follows:

SILVER SALVERS

From 1987 the runners-up of the five Championship events have received a silver salver, on which is engraved a view of the Clubhouse and Centre Court building. The diameter of the salvers are: Singles, 1987–1997 – 10 inches, 1998 to date – 14 inches. Doubles, 1987 to date – 8 inches.

Originally the engraving showed one Clubhouse balcony, but from 2002 the design was changed to incorporate two new side balconies.

Since 2022, the Champions of the Invitation Doubles events have received a new, square-shaped salver.

ENGRAVING

Immediately the Champions and runners-up of the events at The Championships are known, the replica trophies and salvers are engraved, enabling the players to leave with them in their possession.

PRESENTATION

The practice of presenting the Trophy to the Singles Champions on the Centre Court originated in 1949, when on Friday 1 July, H.R.H. The Duchess of Kent, President of The All England Lawn Tennis Club, consented to go down onto the Centre Court for the ceremony and so “give the photographers a break”. Ted Schroeder of the United States was the recipient.

On the following day the Duchess of Kent presented the Ladies’ Singles trophy to Louise Brough in the Royal Box but later in the afternoon she went on Court to present the Ladies’ Doubles Trophy (which she had just donated to the Club) to Louise Brough and Margaret duPont. From 1946 to 1948 the trophies were presented in the Royal Box. Previously, the trophies were not presented in private or public, but occasionally the champions and runners-up were summoned to the Royal Box to receive the Royal congratulations.

From 1950 to 1953 there was no set pattern and the Gentlemen’s and Ladies’ Singles trophy was presented either in the Royal Box or on Court.

In 1954 both singles champions received their trophy on Court and this has been the practice ever since. Quite often in the fifties and early sixties the winners of the doubles events received their trophies on Court but until 2021, with the exception of 1973 (Gentlemen’s Doubles) and 2000 (Ladies’ Doubles), the ceremonies always took place in the Royal Box. Since 2021 all trophy presentations have taken place on Court. The change was initially in response to Covid-19 protocols.

Traditionally the presenter of the singles trophies has been escorted on to the Centre Court by the Chairman and Secretary/Chief Executive of the AELTC and the President of the LTA. There have been very few exceptions. From the mid-seventies until recent years, the custom was for both the Duke and Duchess of Kent to go on Court, irrespective of which one of them was making the presentation. Following the retirement of the Duke as AELTC President after The Championships 2021, H.R.H. The Princess of Wales, as the Club's Patron, presents the gentlemen's and ladies' singles trophies whenever available.

From 1946 to 1967 the Gentlemen's Singles Champion was presented with the President's Cup but from 1968 to date the AELTC Challenge Cup has been preferred, as the delicate gold colouring of the trophy shows to better advantage on colour television.

For details of on-court presentations made at The Championships after each event, refer to The Champions section on page 26.

MEDALS PRESENTED BY THE LAWN TENNIS ASSOCIATION

In 1913 the newly created International Lawn Tennis Federation awarded The Lawn Tennis Association, on behalf of the British Isles, the World's Championships on Grass, for services rendered to the game over the years.

The All England Lawn Tennis Club agreed to merge these Championships with the three existing Championships and extend the programme to include Ladies' Doubles and Mixed Doubles events.

The LTA decided to present a medal to players reaching the concluding rounds of the five events and after several months of obtaining suitable designs selected the work of Frank Ramson, a London sculptor. Initially the execution of the work was carried out by Messrs. Fattorini and Sons, medallists of Bradford and London, who produced the die and the finished medal, which is 1.5 inches diameter.

The obverse side of the medal is intended to be a symbolical interpretation of the World's Lawn Tennis Championships on Grass. The kneeling figure represents Merit, bearing a figure of Victory in the left hand, while the right hand is in the act of plucking a laurel wreath from the globe. Lawn Tennis is indicated by the net and the open air by the sun in the background. The oak leaves in the foreground stand for strength and endurance. Around the figure are the words WORLD'S LAWN TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS ON GRASS. On the reverse side is engraved the year, event and name/s of the recipient/s, around which is a foliate design.

The medal was presented in 1913, 1914 and from 1919 to 1923, after which the title World's Championship on Grass ceased to exist. From 1924 the design of the medal on the obverse side was altered by the deletion of the words 'WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIPS ON GRASS' and on the reverse side by the replacement of the foliate design with the words THE LAWN TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS.

From 1913 to 1921, gold, silver and bronze medals were presented, but from 1922, when the Challenge Round was abolished, gold medals were presented to the champions and silver medals to the runners-up. The whole practice ceased after 1939.

Scheduling

DATES OF MEETINGS AND FINALS

From 1877 to 1896 the starting date of The Championships was arbitrarily set by The All England Lawn Tennis Club. From 1897 the starting date has been sanctioned by The Lawn Tennis Association, until 1910 as the nearest Monday to the 22 June and from 1911 to 2014 as six weeks before the first Monday in August (known to 1964 as August Bank Holiday).

From 2015 the start of The Championships was a week later than previously. This extended the usual two week gap between the end of the French Open and The Championships to three weeks, allowing a longer grass court season for the build-up and preparation to The Championships.

From 1877 to 1914 the length of each meeting varied according to the numbers of entries and, for the period 1884–1891, whether the events were run concurrently. From 1919 to 1981 each meeting was scheduled to last two weeks, i.e. 12 days, Mondays to Saturdays. From 1982 the meeting has been scheduled to last 13 days, Monday to Saturday and Monday to Sunday.

The total number of days on which play has taken place from 1877 to 2024 is 1,581. In addition there have been 32 days completely lost due to rain and 29 days not scheduled for play during the course of meetings. Play occurred on the second Sunday in 1972 and 1973 and on the first Sunday in 1991, 1997, 2004 and 2016 to counter a backlog of matches due to rain.

Since 2022, The Championships has been a 14-day tournament with play scheduled for Middle Sunday.

CANCELLED CHAMPIONSHIPS

In the 144-year history of The Championships, there have been 11 years in which the tournament did not take place. The two world wars are responsible for the majority of these gaps, with the First World War resulting in the suspension of The Championships between 1915 and 1918, and the Second World War causing a six-year pause between 1940 and 1945. The most recent cancellation was, of course, a result of the global Covid-19 pandemic, which prevented the 134th Championships from being held in 2020.

When the First World War broke out in 1914, the sport of lawn tennis was reaching new heights of popularity, with The Championships becoming an increasingly international event. Norman Brookes of Australia had just defeated New Zealand's Anthony Wilding to deny his fellow Australasian his fifth consecutive gentlemen's singles title. The only problem on the horizon for the AELTC was that its Worple Road ground was clearly too small to cope with the huge crowds.

However, any plans to find a new ground were put on hold by the outbreak of war. For the next five years, it was only thanks to the generosity of its Members and the efforts of Club President Henry Wilson-Fox that the AELTC survived. Meanwhile, Wilding, one of the first great superstars of tennis, who had joined the Royal Marines on the outbreak of war, was killed at Neuve Chapelle on 9 May 1915. A plaque commemorating Wilding and other AELTC Members killed during the two world wars is situated on the ground floor of the Clubhouse.

It is slightly ironic that, when play resumed at Wimbledon in 1919, the world was also emerging from a global pandemic, with tens of millions of people having died from Spanish flu. Nevertheless, The Championships picked up where they left off and, led by new stars such as Suzanne Lenglen, continued to go from strength to strength.

Twenty years later, however, play was suspended once again, with the outbreak of the Second World War. Nevertheless, the Club, under a skeleton staff led by Acting Secretary Norah Cleather, remained open to Members. Cleather's autobiography, Wimbledon Story, contains perhaps the best written account of Wimbledon during wartime. It describes how the Club was used for a variety of civil defence and military purposes, such as fire and ambulance services and the Home Guard. There was even a small farmyard on the site of the old car parks.

Bomb Damage to the Centre Court

On the night of Friday, 11th October, 1940, a "stick" of five 500-pound bombs straddled the club grounds. The first bomb demolished the club tool house. The second bomb of the "stick" fell on the roof of the Centre Court. The third bomb fell in Church Road at the club N.E. entrance and the last two produced two bunkers in the Wimbledon Park Golf Club.

The damage to the Centre Court means a loss of approximately 1,200 seats.

were returning to normal, the Club hosted several inter-services tennis events involving Allied troops. When The Championships recommenced in 1946, service personnel were employed as stewards for the first time, a tradition which continues to this day.

The AELTC did not come through the war entirely unscathed. On 11 October 1940, the roof of Centre Court was hit by a 500-pound bomb. Due to the rationing of building supplies, it wasn't until 1949 that the damage could be fully repaired, resulting in the loss of around 1,200 seats for the first three post-war Championships.

The involvement of the AELTC in the war effort was, in many ways, echoed in the Club's reaction to the Covid-19 pandemic in 2020. Once it became clear that The Championships 2020 could not go ahead, attention immediately turned to how the Club could use its resources to help with the response to the crisis. Meals were donated to those in need in the local community and the famous Wimbledon strawberries were donated to local hospitals. Balls were donated to tennis clubs and schools and towels were donated to charities supporting the homeless.

One thing that is clear from all the cancellations of The Championships is that absence makes the heart grow fonder. It takes more than a world war or a global pandemic to dampen the public's enthusiasm for Wimbledon.

OPENING MATCHES OF MEETING

From 1934 the opening match of the Meeting has traditionally been played on the first Monday on the Centre Court by the Gentlemen's Singles Champion from the previous year or, in his absence, by the Runner-up.

Likewise, the Ladies' Singles Champion or Runner-up from the previous year has normally opened play on the Centre Court on the first Tuesday, which for many years was known as 'Ladies' Day'. In 1983 the Ladies' Singles draw was increased from 96 to 128 and for the first time ladies' matches were played on the opening day of the Meeting. However, the Champion or Runner-up from the previous year has continued to open the play on the first Tuesday.

Exceptions to the foregoing are noted in the following tables:

WORPLE ROAD

Detailed figures of daily totals and championship aggregates are not available. During the peak years, 1913–1921, the scene at the ground was described as “very congested” when 6,000 people were present. When the figure reached 7,500 the ground was said to be “packed to suffocation”.

Estimates for the total attendance at the meetings varied between 60,000 and 70,000.

Tickets

There has always been a considerable demand for tickets to The Championships, especially since the advent of large-scale air travel and, consequently, the increase in the number of overseas visitors to Wimbledon. The equitable distribution of tickets is inevitably a subject that causes much debate both within the All England Club and outside. However, only debenture holders, Members of the Club, and Council Members of the Lawn Tennis Association obtain them as a matter of right. Special allocations are made to the Lawn Tennis Association's Advantage members, formerly known as British Tennis Membership, and to other organisations with special claims. A set number of Show Court tickets are allocated to schools affiliated with the Lawn Tennis Association. A substantial proportion of the total number of tickets is retained for issue to the general public in advance via the Wimbledon Public Ballot, first introduced in 1924, and which launched online in the autumn of 2019.

Wimbledon remains one of the very few major sporting events where you can buy premium tickets on the day of play. Each day a large Queue forms to buy either one of the limited Show Court tickets available, or a Grounds Pass. Tickets are sold on a best available, one per person queuing basis and are non-transferable.

Five hundred tickets for Centre Court (excluding the last four days), No.1 Court, and No.2 Court are available for each day the courts are in play. Grounds Passes are also sold, enabling access to all courts including No.3 Court, Court 12 and Court 18, as well as The Hill, where the big screen shows action from Centre Court and No.1 Court. Entry continues until the Grounds reach capacity. This varies each day depending on the number of courts in play and the weather. Once capacity is reached, entry may only be possible as people leave the Grounds for the day.

Ticket Resale is available within the Grounds with guests often able to obtain a ticket for a reserved seat on Centre Court, No.1 Court or No.2 Court for the balance of the day's play. The tickets, subject to availability, are re-sold at a small charge with the proceeds going to the Wimbledon Foundation. Prices for 2025 remain at £15 for Centre Court and £10 for No.1 Court and No.2 Court. Resale tickets are not sold before 3pm, with the majority of tickets available after 5pm when guests begin to leave the Grounds. The Ticket Resale queue operated virtually for the first time at The Championships 2024, allowing guests to join remotely rather than having to stand in a physical queue for hours. Once registered, guests receive a text message, based on their position in the queue, when tickets start to become available.

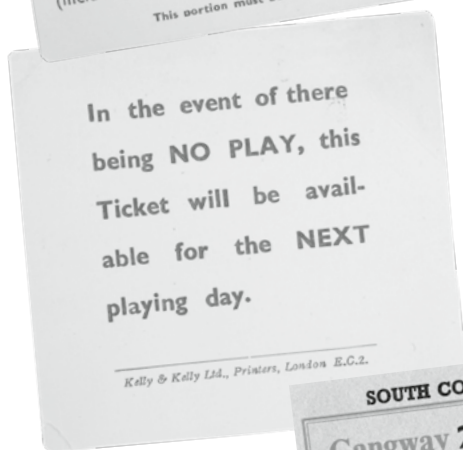

Ticket initiatives for recent Championships include a Community Scheme, which provides access to tickets across all 14 days for guests living locally to Wimbledon, and a Family Ballot, providing access to tickets to the final days of The Championships on No.1 Court, also for local families.

Tiered pricing has also been introduced, with three different ticket prices staggered across Centre Court and No.1 Court according to proximity to the playing surface. Mobile ticketing, which was accelerated for The Championships 2021 due to the Covid-19 pandemic, continues into its fifth year.

Ticket integrity remains of the highest importance to The All England Lawn Tennis Club and as such the Ticket Terms and Conditions must be adhered to when applying for and purchasing tickets. Full refunds are offered up to 24 hours before the day of play, should guests find themselves in the position of being unable to attend.

Tickets for The Championships from 1919 to 1968 – a far cry from the sophisticated tickets of the 21st century which incorporate the latest in anti-counterfeiting technology

RESALE OF TICKETS

Spectators leaving before the end of play are invited to return their tickets for resale at a nominal sum, with the proceeds going to charity.

Tickets have been resold within the Grounds, apart from 1990 when tickets were sold to those queuing outside the Grounds.

Tickets were not resold during The Championships 2021 as per the UK government's public health guidance as a result of the Covid-19 pandemic.

SEAT CUSHIONS

The facility for spectators to hire seat cushions was first provided by The Soft Seats Company in 1924. The following year The British Cushion Supply Company took over and they continued the service up to 2008, apart from 1936–1938, when The London Cushion Supply Company controlled the business. The provision of the new wider padded seats in the Centre Court and No.2 Court render the seat cushions virtually unnecessary. Souvenir cushions have been on sale since 1992.

Competitor Regulations

There are more than 650 competitors at The Championships across the five main events, juniors, wheelchair, invitational and Qualifying competitions. Competitors must enter The Championships by the designated entry deadline in order to be placed onto the Official Entry list and entered into the draw.

COMPETITORS' DRESS AND SHOES

Since 1963, Wimbledon Championship Entry Conditions laid down that competitors must be dressed predominantly in white throughout. In 1995 this Condition was clarified to mean 'almost entirely white'. In 2023 the rule was amended to allow female players to wear dark-coloured undershorts.

No shoes, other than those with rubber soles, without heels, ribs, studs or coverings, shall be worn by competitors except with the express permission of the Referee.

Any competitor who appears on court dressed in a manner deemed unsuitable by the Committee will be liable to be defaulted.

PLAYERS' WAITING ROOMS AND PRE-MATCH PROCEDURES

AELTC Head Tennis Coach Dan Bloxham and Club Tennis Manager Lizzie Bloxham lead a small team responsible for escorting players from the dressing rooms to Centre and No.1 Courts before each match. They also ensure that the players are wearing the correct clothing, as stated in the rules regarding both colour and advertising.

Over the entrance to Centre Court, through which the players pass, is the following inscription from Rudyard Kipling's poem If:

*"If you can meet with triumph and disaster
And treat those two impostors just the same."*

The original board bearing the inscription was presented to the Club by Lord Curzon and first placed in the autumn of 1923, but this was replaced by a new board and inscription, just prior to The Championships 1995. This second board was replaced when the Clubhouse was completely refurbished in 2002. The original is on display in The Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum.

There are waiting rooms inside Centre, No.1, No.2 and No.3 Court stadiums, which are used by players in the event of short delays in play (e.g. brief rain delays or the closing of the Centre Court roof).

Championships Operations

OFFICIATING

Officiating is a core component of professional tennis and there are approximately 190 officials at The Championships in 2025 working as Chair Umpires, Review Officials, management staff and the newly created role of Match Assistant, which provides off-court support to Chair Umpires following the decision to adopt live Electronic Line Calling at The Championships, with the system responsible for making all calls on court.

These officials cover over 650 matches played during the Fortnight as well as 224 matches during the Qualifying Competition at Roehampton. During the three weeks of The Championships (including Qualifying) there are approximately 124 British Officials, licensed by the LTA, and approximately 67 international officials from all over the world, including the team of eight ITF Grand Slam Chair Umpires who officiate at all four Grand Slams, and one full-time ATP Chair Umpire. Both Tours (ATP and WTA) have a significant number of their representatives working as on-court officials.

ON-COURT OFFICIALS

There are 46 officials at The Championships working as Chair Umpires who are graded Gold, Silver or Bronze. These officials comprise the best officials worldwide. Within that group, 17 are British. Chair Umpires normally umpire two matches a day, although not necessarily on the same court.

OFF-COURT OFFICIALS

There are approximately 80 Match Assistants, the majority of whom are British Officials. They perform a number of duties including ensuring that the rules are complied with when a player leaves the court for any reason. There are also 36 Review Officials who operate the technology which provides the accurate line calling (in the absence of Line Umpires). In addition, there are a small number of supervisory staff who support these off-court officials as well as a management team of five officials, led by Andrew Nicholas-Wynne, the Championships Chief Umpire.

Match Assistants and Review Officials work in separate teams with generally two teams being assigned to each court. The teams work on a timed rotation: three or four Match Assistants and two Review Officials are assigned to each of the 18 courts.

Chair Umpires use computers to score the match, each point scored being displayed automatically on scoreboards around the Grounds and on the Club's website and app. The responsibility for calling net cords now rests with the Chair Umpire. The live Electronic Line Calling system is used on all courts to make all calls, which cannot be challenged by the players.

Matthew Morrissey, the LTA Officiating Operations Manager, and Andrew Nicholas-Wynne, the Chief Umpire, are responsible for selecting the officials and all administrative arrangements of officials both before and during The Championships. The Chief Umpire is responsible for the overall management and assignment of Chair Umpires and Match Assistants during The Championships, using a custom-made computer system and assisted by a small management team.

The umpire of the first match at the Church Road Grounds on 26 June 1922 (Centre Court) was E. Timmis. The first woman to umpire a match at The Championships is believed to have been Blanche Williams in 1884. In 1889, a year before she won the ladies' singles title, Lena Rice acted as a line judge for the gentlemen's fourth round match between William Renshaw and Herbert Lawford.

The first woman selected as Chair Umpire for the ladies' singles final at The Championships was Georgina Clark in 1984. The first woman selected as Chair Umpire for the gentlemen's singles final at The Championships was Marija Cicak in 2021.

LINE-CALL LANDMARKS

1929 For the first time, linesmen raised their arm when making a call.

1949 Lineswomen officiated on the Centre Court for the first time.

1980 An electronic service line monitor, (Cyclops), using infra-red rays, was used for singles matches on Centre Court and No.1 Court.

1981 The use of electronic service line monitors, (Cyclops), was extended to No.2 and No.3 Courts. Catherine McTavish became the first woman to umpire a match on Centre Court.

1986 The use of an electronic line monitor on No.3 Court and a net cord device on Centre Court and No.1 Court was abandoned.

2006 On the first Thursday during the Rafael Nadal (Spain) versus Robert Kendrick (USA) match on Centre Court, a Line Umpire collapsed. During the fortnight the Club and the ITF conducted a series of trials using the 'Hawk-Eye' system on grass, before play commenced on certain days. The BBC continued to use the system as a graphics tool on Centre Court and No.1 Court.

2007 The Hawk-Eye electronic line-calling system was in full operation on Centre and No.1 Courts for the first time, allowing players to challenge line calls. Players had unlimited opportunity to challenge, but once three incorrect challenges were made in a set, they could not challenge again until the next set. If the set went to a tie break, players were given additional opportunities to challenge. In order for the players, officials and spectators to see the replays, large screen video boards were installed. As Centre Court had no roof, two screens (approx. 20 sq m) were located high above the rear seats on the east and west sides of the Court. The No.1 Court screens were positioned at ground level. Cyclops was used only on No.2 and No.18 Courts.

2008 The Hawk-Eye electronic system continued to be used on Centre and No.1 Courts. In order for the players, officials and spectators to clearly see the calls under review, two 4.48m x 2.68m screens were sited at ground level on both courts. These replaced the normal scoreboards, situated at each end of the court, and combined the match scores and the Hawk-Eye replays in one location. The new board also allowed videos and selected BBC TV output to be shown. The use of Cyclops was abandoned on all courts.

2009 The Hawk-Eye electronic line calling system was in operation on the new No.2 Court. The introduction of this court necessitated re-numbering of the southern courts, with No.2 to No.11 Courts becoming No.3 to No.12 Courts.

2011 The Hawk-Eye line calling system was introduced on the new No.3 Court.

2015 The Hawk-Eye electronic system was extended for use on No.12 and No.18 Courts.

2019 The Hawk-Eye electronic system was introduced to Courts 14-17. The scoreboards on these courts were doubled in height to display the Hawk-Eye replays.

2021 The Hawk-Eye electronic system was introduced to Courts 4-8. As in 2019, the scoreboards on these courts were doubled in height to display the Hawk-Eye replays. A woman – Croatia's Marija Cicak – umpired the gentlemen's singles final for the first time.

2025 Line calling was set to become exclusively electronic for the first time at The Championships, with the Hawk-Eye system to be used for every match, including the junior events. The new system included an indicator light on the Umpire's chair. To ensure officiating consistency, the Hawk-Eye system was to be introduced on all courts at the Qualifying Competition for the first time. As a result of the introduction of exclusively electronic line calling, players would no longer be able to challenge line calls.

Above: For The Championships 2025, line calling was set to become exclusively electronic with the Hawk-Eye system due to be employed for all matches, including the Qualifying Competition

REFEREE'S SYSTEMS

The Referee's Office systems support all aspects of the operation from the entry of competitors, the draws, the scheduling of matches, recording results and the payment of prize money.

The daily Order of Play was previously prepared using the 'Womble' board which allowed the Referee to plan matches on up to 20 courts, checking to ensure that there were no clashes for competitors in several events. In 2010, the Womble Board was replaced by a new panoramic HD video wall display in the Referee's Office, which allowed several of the Referee's team to schedule matches for different events simultaneously.

The Chair Umpire uses a scorepad system, introduced in 2001, which allows them to score a match directly from the chair, thus providing real-time scores to the rest of the systems. In 2014, a new, larger tablet-style PDA was used by umpires at Qualifying and at the main site. Linked to the Order of Play is an Umpire's system. This helps in the allocation of the officials for each court during The Championships. By using a wireless network, the Referee's Systems which are in use at the Qualifying competition were expanded, to feed live scores to the Club and the Wimbledon website.

In 2013, the wireless connections were replaced by ethernet cables which were felt to provide a more reliable feed of up-to-date scores from Qualifying. The Referee's systems have been largely rewritten in phases since 2014, moving to a modern technical architecture. The live draw software was completely rewritten in 2017, with a better graphical interface including up-to-date player images and brief biographical details for the media who attend the live event, which is usually scheduled on the Friday before The Championships. The Umpire's allocation software and the Referee's scheduling software were rewritten and used for the first time in 2021.

The Referee's Office systems were replaced again in 2024, using modern cloud integration technology to connect to other Championships systems. The introduction of full electronic line calling in 2025 fundamentally changes the requirements for the Umpire's allocation software and hence a new software package has been introduced to meet the needs of the Chief Umpire's team.

SPEED OF SERVICE

A radar gun measuring the ‘speed of service’ was first used on Centre Court in 1991 and later on the new No.1 Court in 1997. Both locations did not provide a visual indication. However, in 1999 spectators on both courts were able immediately to see the speed of players’ service when displayed in units installed at ground level at both ends of each court. This facility was extended to No.2 and No.18 Courts in 2001 and No.3 and No.12 Courts in 2003. From 2008 the displays on Centre and No.1 Courts were replaced with video boards and this was extended to the new No.2 Court in 2009 and the new No.3 Court in 2011. In 2025, service speeds are no longer measured by a radar gun. The Hawk-Eye ball tracking system measures the speed of every stroke, including the service. This measurement continues to be displayed for spectators on the six show courts.

OFFICIALS’ UNIFORMS

Today’s Wimbledon Officials take to the courts resplendent in their Ralph Lauren uniforms. But it wasn’t until 1976 that uniforms were introduced.

1976 The Umpires and Line Judges appeared for the first time wearing their new uniform of navy blue blazer and grey trousers or skirts.

1981 A special Wimbledon uniform for Umpires and Line Judges was introduced – dark green jackets and light green trousers or skirts.

1999 The Umpires and Line Judges wore a new uniform in two combinations: Gentlemen – green blazer, khaki trousers, shirt and tie or sweater, khaki trousers, shirt and tie. Ladies – green jacket, skirt and blouse, or khaki trousers, blouse and sweater.

2006 A new Chair and Line Umpire’s uniform was introduced, designed by Polo Ralph Lauren, featuring a navy blue retro blazer, piped in cream and a navy blue and white striped shirt with white collar. The men wore cream pleated ‘Oxford Bags’ with turn-ups, while the women chose similar trousers or a cream panelled skirt. The traditional colours of green and purple were used on the men’s striped tie and on the blazer badge of crossed rackets. Cream canvas shoes completed the outfit.

2016 A new uniform for the Chair and Line Umpires was introduced. The design, by Ralph Lauren, featured a navy blazer with pinstripes and a jumper with purple and green stripes around the v-neck. Sunglasses, featuring dark green nuances and a purple Polo Pony logo, were introduced to the uniform for the first time.

2022 A new Ralph Lauren Umpires’ uniform was introduced, featuring a belted back sports coat lined with a commemorative Ralph Lauren designed signature Wimbledon print and adorned with both Polo Ralph Lauren and Wimbledon emblems. This is paired with a wide Bengal stripe shirt that includes recycled material and stylish white trousers or white skirt with pearl button closure. Line umpire uniforms were refreshed with navy cardigans featuring a white and Wimbledon green striped cuff detail which includes recycled COOLMAX® fibres, providing superior comfort in warm environments with moisture management properties.

2025 The new Match Assistants will wear the same Polo Ralph Lauren uniform worn by Line Umpires in previous years.

UMPIRES' CHAIRS

Ever since the first Championships in 1877, Match Umpires at Wimbledon have sat in a raised chair overlooking the net. Over the years, however, numerous features have been incorporated to assist them in their duties.

1927 Public address equipment was used from the Centre Court Umpire's chair for the first time.

2002 After experimenting for several years at The Championships, Chair Umpires used an electronic scorepad, connected to a central computer, to score matches on all courts for the first time. On No.18 Court the scoreboard, being electronic, was updated directly from the Chair Umpire's scorepad. The scorepad replaced the traditional hand-written scorecard.

2006 A facility was added to allow Chair Umpires on the Centre and No.1 Court to immediately update the electronic scoreboards on court from the scorepad.

2022 A newly redesigned umpires' chair was introduced on Centre and No.1 Courts. The new chair was designed to accommodate all the technology and broadcast equipment in a considered and discreet manner whilst encompassing some of the construction details of traditional wooden tennis racquets. Great care was taken to accommodate the operational requirements of the chair, whilst maintaining the proportions required for good sightlines, improving comfort and making it quickly manoeuvrable should there be a rain delay.

The new design embraced both Wimbledon's heritage and the technological advances in equipment that modern tennis now demands, bringing up-to-date an essential piece of equipment that had changed very little since the earliest models in the 1920s.

2023 The new-style chairs on Centre and No.1 Courts were modified slightly following feedback from stakeholders. The old-style chairs on the remaining courts were refreshed and featured a solid side panel.

BALL BOYS AND GIRLS

In the 1920s and 1930s Ball Boys were provided by Shaftesbury Homes. From 1946 to 1966 they were provided by Dr Barnardo's Homes and in 1967 and 1968 by Shaftesbury Homes again. Since 1969 they have been provided by local schools. The number of Ball Boys/Girls has grown steadily over the years from the late 1930s, when 46 were employed. In 1995 the figure noticeably increased from 138 to 182 to allow a full allocation of six to a court and in 2007 the number reached 250. Ball Girls were first introduced in 1977, and mixed teams in 1980. In 1986 Ball Girls were used on Centre Court for the first time.

Currently, approximately 280 Ball Boys and Girls (BBGs) are selected from around 1,500 applicants, with 170 from Year 9 and 10 applicants and 110 from recall applications (i.e. BBGs who have been accepted at one of the last two Championships). The ratio of boys to girls is approximately 50:50. BBG training is directed by Sarah Goldson, who has held the role since 2012.

SELECTION

Participating schools make the initial nominations of the BBGs and are asked to send candidates who meet the following requirements:

Have completed the first eight modules of the online training programme and registered their details online; are in Year 9 or 10; have no exams during The Championships; can give priority to training between February and June and are available from 4pm; are physically fit; have a good knowledge of the rules of tennis; understand that absence for any reason (including illness and injury) lasting two weeks or longer may result in failure to qualify for further training; are sure that work experience or school trips will not result in missed sessions.

ENTRY INTO THE TRAINING PROGRAMME

To qualify for full training, students need to gain sufficient points across four areas of assessment at the January trials:

1. Fitness: complete the warm-up, consisting of jogging, running and dynamic exercises, followed by standing still for several minutes. Candidates are then assessed in a series of speed endurance tests.
2. Knowledge: assessed through a written test on the rules and scoring of tennis.
3. Court work: demonstrate a basic understanding of the game and the ability to perform the core skills, when adopting one of the key BBG positions, i.e. base or centre.
4. Skills: demonstrate competency in feeding, rolling and receiving over a variety of distances.

Competition for places is extremely high at selection and the margin between success and failure can be a matter of 1-2 points.

TRAINING

In a usual year, training begins in February at the AELTC Community Tennis Centre, Raynes Park, and each prospective BBG will train once a week. Weekly training sessions last between 2–2.5 hours, with 40-80 BBGs per session. There is no training during the school holidays.

Training sessions involve general fitness and movement exercises, circuits, core skills (rolling, feeding, receiving, working on knowledge of the game), scoring (e.g. knowing from the score at which end the balls should be), and set pieces (marching, start and end of match, tie-break, ball change, suspended play etc.) Throughout training, each candidate is constantly assessed by the instructor team and is also expected to analyse their own performance and record any key aspects to work on.

After May half-term, in the run up to The Championships, training moves to the AELTC's Indoor Tennis Centre, Somerset Road. Training on grass only happens towards the end of the programme and includes a grass court week on both the Championships courts and at Aorangi during the Wildcard Playoffs. In 2022, the BBGs took part in the Qualifying Competition for the first time, providing BBGs for between 10-12 courts across the four days. This is now a permanent part of the BBG calendar.

DURING THE CHAMPIONSHIPS

Six teams of six, selected by Sarah Goldson, are responsible for Centre & No.1 Courts and six teams of six rotate around the other Show Courts. The remainder, in teams of six, rotate around the rest of the courts.

BBGs usually arrive at 10am and leave as soon as possible after the last court is closed. The usual routine is one hour on, one hour off. The age range of BBGs now spans 14 to 19, with the older recalls covering late-night play on the Show Courts, where they have the required experience.

The local schools currently providing BBGs are:

In 2006 a new uniform was introduced, designed by Polo Ralph Lauren.

For The Championships 2011, a new uniform was introduced featuring the 125th Championships logo.

In 2016, the Ralph Lauren design was changed to feature a navy polo shirt with a green stripe down the side, alongside navy-blue shorts for the boys and a skort for the girls. An alternative cap was also introduced which is worn in warm weather as it has additional protection for the neck and ears.

In 2022, a new style of Polo Ralph Lauren BBG uniform was introduced, featuring a navy blue polo shirt with thin white hoops, along with navy blue shorts for the boys and a skort for the girls. The reimaged outfit uses innovative fabrics for optimal performance and style, including recycled materials and incorporating features such as stretch, moisture-wicking and UV protection.

TENNIS BALLS

Sixty-three thousand new tennis balls are ordered each year, the vast majority of which are used during The Championships. Any surplus is used during Ball Boy & Girl (BBG) training. New balls are supplied after seven games (to allow for the preliminary warm-up) and then after every nine games. Yellow balls were used for the first time in 1986. Subject to availability, used balls are sold daily and the proceeds donated to charitable causes by the Wimbledon Foundation.

FOOD AND DRINK

Wimbledon is the largest single annual sporting Food and Drink operation in Europe. The operation is delivered by Food & Drink at Wimbledon, which is operated by Compass Group UK under licence from the AELTC. Around 3,000 team members are required to produce the food and drink and operate the many outlets around the Grounds, including 290 chefs.

The quantities served during The Championships are enormous. Typical examples from 2023 include: 17,500 portions of fish & chips; 29,000 stonebaked pizzas; 137,000 sandwiches; 102,000 scones; 26,500 bottles of Champagne; 341,000 glasses of Pimm's; 165,000 pints of draught beer and lager; 257,500 cups of tea and coffee; 120,800 bottles of water, and 30,000 litres of milk. 2024 also saw 251,000 servings of the iconic Wimbledon strawberries served, along with 13,241 litres of dairy cream.

The famous Wimbledon strawberries and cream has changed little over the years, and the price of £2.50 has remained consistent since 2010. The introduction of plant-based cream in 2019, available alongside dairy cream, has made the great tradition even more accessible, with 1,769 litres of plant-based cream served in 2023.

Hugh Lowe Farms have been supplying strawberries to The Championships for over 25 years. Picked on the farm at sunrise on the day of serving, the strawberries are delivered to the Club by 9am each day to ensure they are enjoyed at their utmost freshness. Once the strawberries have arrived, they are inspected and hulled before being ready for visitors to enjoy throughout the day. Any strawberries not used are frozen before being used to make jam for Victoria sponges and to be served with scones throughout the year.

Catering at the Church Road ground: 1922–1935 Messrs. Ring and Brymer; 1936–1962 J. Lyons & Co. Ltd. 1963–1991 Town & County Catering Co. Ltd.; 1992–1998 Town & County Catering; 1999–2017 Facilities Management Catering; 2018–present Food & Drink at Wimbledon, Levy Restaurants UK, Compass Group.

An approximate list of officials and staff engaged during The Championships is as follows:

Ball Boys and Girls: 280	Match Statisticians: 53
Catering staff: 3,000	Medical Team: 60
Court attendants: 200	Service Stewards: 683
Court officials: 190	Transport Service Drivers: 450

STEWARDING

Stewarding duties during The Championships are shared between the Honorary Stewards and Service Stewards provided by the Military and London Fire Brigade.

The Association of Wimbledon Honorary Stewards acts as ‘hosts’ at the Championships, directing, advising and giving help and guidance to guests. Outside the Grounds they work with the security team to manage the operation of The Queue and visitor arrival at the Ticket Holder gates. Within the Grounds they assist with the seating of guests around the courts, working closely with the Service Stewards, who are also volunteers. Although the presence of Honorary Stewards at Wimbledon originated in 1927, it was not until June 1950 that the Association was formed. The present membership is approximately 195. The Chief Honorary Steward is James Mendelssohn. More information about the Association can be found at www.hswwimbledon.com.

The All England Club is proud of its longstanding relationship with the armed forces, which dates back to 1925 when the Inter-Services Championships were first held at the Club. Military personnel were based at the Club during WWII and have been deployed as Service Stewards at every Championships since 1946. A team of 498 military personnel, all of whom are on leave, will be on duty at The Championships 2025, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Lucy Smith AGC(SPS).

Since 1965, the ranks of the Service Stewards have been boosted by members of the London Fire Brigade. 185 will work at The Championships 2025, led by Philip Morton.

TECHNOLOGY AND SCOREBOARDS

SHOW COURTS

When the Centre Court at Church Road was opened in 1922 there were two manually operated scoreboards, one at each side of the court, in line with the net and at the front of the standing area behind the open seating. The scoreboards showed the names of the players, the server and the score in sets and games.

In 1924 when No.1 Court was brought into commission a large manually operated, V-shaped, double scoreboard was positioned in line with the net, high above the standing area on the west side of the court. By having two faces to the scoreboard all spectators were able to see the score, irrespective of their seating position. The scoreboards at the sides of Centre Court were abandoned in 1928 and new items installed in the north-west and south-east corners of the court (same position as present). As before, these scoreboards showed the names of the players, the server and the score in sets and games. However, these scoreboards were short-lived for, the following year, in 1929, they were replaced by two electric scoreboards, designed and manufactured by Automatic Totalisator Ltd. of Ealing which, in addition to recording sets and games, showed points. Also, a third scoreboard was fixed above the Referee's Office, to the left of the entrance to the South-West Hall, allowing those unable to gain admittance to Centre Court to follow the matches. The control board for the scoreboards was a desk-like structure, positioned behind the Umpire's chair, operated by a man who was seated throughout the match.

Spectators and players were so delighted with the scoreboards that the All England Club requested the manufacturer to install on the Centre Court not only enlarged scoreboards, which in addition recorded the full details of previous sets, but also to provide similar scoreboards on No.1 Court, one in the north-west corner, high above the spectators in the open stand, and the other on the wall of Centre Court, overlooking the court. A third, to pair with the Centre Court scoreboard over the Referee's Office, was also provided. By The Championships 1930, all the scoreboards were in position with suitable concrete boxes for the scoreboards built to house the apparatus. The necessity to have the operator on court was removed when a telephone line was connected from the umpire to the operator and his control board suitably positioned out of sight. In 1963 the scoreboard in the north-west corner of No.1 Court was repositioned at ground level. In 1979 the Centre Court and No.1 Court scoreboards were fitted with digital clocks, which also indicated the length of each match.

In 1950, a minor limitation of the scoreboards was seen when those on No.1 Court failed to register beyond 19 all in the 31–29 second set of the gentlemen's doubles match between Budge Patty and Tony Trabert (USA) and Ken McGregor and Frank Sedgman (AUS).

When the No.1 Court Complex was rebuilt for the Championships 1981, the scoreboards were replaced with electronic versions, allowing the players' names to be more readily changed. With the Referee's Office demolished, the scoreboards referring to Centre Court and No.1 Court, overlooking the main concourse, were replaced by electronic repeater scoreboards installed above the Members' balcony at the main entrance to the Clubhouse. These were renewed in 2001. Another pair of repeater scoreboards were erected on the wall near the Museum entrance, overlooking the Tea Lawn extension. In 1982 Centre Court was also fitted with electronic scoreboards, while a third was added to the south-west corner of No.1 Court for the convenience of the spectators in the north stand.

With the demise of the old No.1 Court in 1997, the electronic scoreboards were repositioned. The older boards (first used in 1981) replaced those on the Museum walls and the Museum boards were relocated to the new No.1 Court. One was positioned in the northwest corner of the court, the other in the south-east corner while a new board was installed at the entrance to the South-West Hall. In 2001, two further electronic repeater scoreboards for Centre Court and No.1 Court were installed on the wall of the Centre Court West Building. In 2002, the Centre Court scoreboards were renewed.

These electronic scoreboards were designed for high visibility in any ambient lighting conditions and for ease of use. The display modules used were 5 x 7 dot matrix modules, utilising electromagnetic 'flip-dot' technology for high reliability and low power consumption. The dots were coloured flat black on one side and fluorescent yellow on the other. To display characters a pattern of dots were 'flipped' over so that the character was displayed as a highly visible fluorescent yellow character on a flat black background. This gave maximum contrast and ensured visibility even in poor light. Each scoreboard was fitted with heaters and fans to ensure that internal condensation was prevented, thus helping to maintain the reliability of the electronic and display components. Total power consumption of each scoreboard was about 100 watts.

In 2006, the scoreboards were linked to the umpire's scorepad and updated automatically at the end of each rally. Scores from other courts were also displayed, at the change of ends. Prior to play, safety and information messages were displayed on the scoreboards. Player profiles were shown as each match started. Back-up computers were available in each control room and these were used to test the boards before play started each day. In case of a mains power failure a back-up supply ensured scoring would continue for at least 90 minutes.

In 2007, large video boards were installed on Centre and No.1 Courts to allow the player challenge replays, provided by the Hawk-Eye system, to be seen by the spectators. In 2008, the main scoreboards were replaced by new video boards, which displayed the scores and Hawk-Eye replays. These boards allowed the Club to show video and selected BBC TV output as appropriate.

From 2009, video boards were installed on the new No.2 Court. From 2010 all three courts continued to show the scoreboard, Hawk-Eye replays, BBC output and other video material as required and these facilities were extended to the new No.3 Court in 2011. In 2013, higher resolution video blocks were introduced on all four Show Courts for scoreboards and speed of serve indicators. When it rains and play continues on Centre Court, the match may be shown on the screens on the other courts.

In 2015, the scoreboards on Courts 12 and 18 were enlarged to match those on the other four Show Courts, so that Hawk-Eye line call graphics could be shown. In 2018, all scoreboards and speed of serve boards were again replaced with the latest video block technology, improving resolution.

In 2021, additional scoreboards were installed in Centre and No.1 Courts in the opposite corners to the main scoreboards. These scoreboards are smaller than the main scoreboards and will keep the score visible when Hawk-Eye replays, BBC output and other video material is being displayed on the main scoreboards.

Additionally in 2021, the scoreboard layout and colour scheme were changed, moving players' names to the left instead of the centre of the scoreboard. The new layout accommodated longer names and is consistent with the display of scores on wimbledon.com and other digital media. The scoreboards also incorporated the serve clock for the first time.

OUTSIDE COURTS

The first scoreboards were free-standing and were located on the grass at the east side of each court in line with the net. They showed sets and games, using number plates.

In 1928 a scoreboard was installed on No.2 Court above the seating on the east side of the court. However, this was abandoned in 1934 when a new double-sided V-shaped scoreboard for use on No.2 and No.3 Courts was mounted high at the south end of the newly built combined stand between the two courts. On this site in 1955 was erected a small concrete building, to which was fitted a new scoreboard for the No.2 and No.3 Courts. There was access to behind the scoreboard and also, via an iron spiral staircase, to a balcony overlooking No.11 Court.

New scoreboards were provided for other outside Courts in 1931. Either side of the player's name were reels, containing large figures, which were revolved by hand. Sets were shown on the left and games on the right. In 1955 these scoreboards were renewed and the opportunity was taken to modify the layout to have players' names at the top. Much larger manual scoreboards were provided over the seasons 1988 and 1989. Together with the modified scoreboard for No.2 and No.3 Courts, these showed points for the first time. When No.18 and No.19 Courts were brought into use in 1997, the former was provided with electronic scoreboards and the latter manual scoreboards similar to other courts.

In 2010, Courts 14-17 trialled the use of video scoreboards. These were smaller than on Centre Court as they did not need to show Hawk-Eye replays. Following the success of the trial, the use of electronic scoreboards was extended across the other outside courts in 2011. In 2013, electronic scoreboards were used on all courts at the Qualifying tournament. In 2018, new electronic scoreboards were used on all courts at the Qualifying tournament and all outside courts at The Championships. These scoreboards used the same video block technology as the Show Court scoreboards. Larger scoreboards were installed on Courts 14-17 in 2019 to accommodate the display of Hawk-Eye player challenge graphics. These scoreboards were twice the height of the other outside court scoreboards, but still significantly smaller than the show court scoreboards. These larger scoreboards were installed on Courts 4-8 in 2021, and the new scoreboard layout and colour scheme was adopted on all outside court scoreboards, incorporating the serve clock.

SCOREBOARD OPERATORS AND DATA COLLECTORS

From 1994, two teams operated the scoreboards, one covering the Show Courts (Centre Court and Nos. 1, 2, 3, 13 and 14 Courts) and the other the remainder of the courts. For the first time ladies were allocated to operate the electronic scoreboards on Centre Court and No.1 Court. Previously three teams had been responsible, one exclusively for Centre Court and No.1 Court (traditionally manned by male members of the Oxford and Cambridge University tennis teams), one for Nos. 2, 3, 13 and 14 Courts and one for the other courts.

Prior to 1989, all the manual scoreboards (those other than Centre Court and No.1 Court) were operated by the Ball Boys/Girls as part of their duties. From 1989 to 1995 a scoreboard operator was allocated to each of these courts to carry out that function and in addition to operate an "electronic box" which conveyed the score, point by point, to the central computer. From 1996 to 1998 the data collection function on each court was performed by a dedicated team of students.

From 1999 the manual scoreboards were operated by the Court Attendants who were responsible for the dressing of the court and the court covering under the supervision of the Head Groundsman. Data collection remained the responsibility of a dedicated team of students. From 2006 the scoreboards on Centre and No.1 Courts were linked to the Chair Umpire's electronic scorecard which automatically updated the score. From 2009 the boards on the new No.2 Court were updated in a similar manner, as were the scoreboards on the new No.3 Court in 2011. This has expanded to all courts in line with the introduction of electronic scoreboards.

ORDER OF PLAY AND RESULTS BOARDS

The first Order of Play board at the Church Road Ground was erected in 1923, above the entrance to the tunnel between No.2 and No.3 Courts. Access to the players' names was via an iron ladder fixed to the wall of No.3 Court.

In 1948 Results Boards were installed on the walls either side of the tunnel, but in 1964 a huge, combined Order of Play and Results board, stretching above the entrance to the tunnel, replaced the previous structures. This was in turn demolished in 1990 to make way for a new building to house the Control Room. A Matches on Court board attached to the wall of No.2 Court was made available but this was removed in 2001.

When Aorangi Park was commissioned in 1982, a structure in the middle of the Grounds displayed the order of play, the score of each match, game by game, and the final result of each match. After 1985 this structure was rebuilt as the Octagon to provide public services. However, in 1985 a large manually operated scoreboard was established on the Debentures Holders' wall facing No.15 to No.17 Courts, showing the full draw of each of the five Championship events, which were updated as soon as the matches completed. An Order of Play board was added in 1987.

In 1994 an electronic scoreboard was installed overlooking the southern concourse, opposite the Members' Enclosure (now Centenary Garden), which displayed in turn current scores of matches on court.

In 1997 two similar electronic scoreboards were installed at the entrance to the North-East and South-East Halls of the new No.1 Court Stadium and in 2001 a further electronic scoreboard was installed on the north wall of the Press Centre.

In 1997 a large manually operated scoreboard was installed in the new Championship Entrance area, showing the full draw of each of the five Championship events, which were updated as soon as the matches were completed, and the order of play for all courts.

A Match Information Display was positioned on the north wall of No.2 Court in 2001 and 2002 but moved to the south-west wall of Centre Court in 2003. This electronic display showed the latest point by point scores for the matches on all 18 courts. Before play started, the full order of play was shown.

In 2003 an Electronic Match board, displaying point by point information, using flip dot technology, was installed between the southern ends of Courts 11 and 13.

In 2007, both the Match Information and Electronic Match Boards were replaced by full colour video boards showing the same information.

In 2008 there was no room to locate the board in the southern part of the Grounds so this was positioned above the bandstand on the Tea Lawn. From 2009, the Match Information Boards were repositioned on the northern wall of the Cafe Pergola (now Centenary Garden), facing the Tea Lawn and at the south-west corner of Centre Court. They showed the order of play, point by point scores and player profiles, depending on the time of day.

In 2010, a third Electronic Match Information Display was located at the north-east area of the Grounds, facing out from No.1 Court towards Aorangi Pavilion. This provided the same information as the two boards at the southern end of the Grounds.

In 2014, nine electronic Tournament Information Display Boards were installed to provide messages, order of play and score information to the public. Six boards are attached to Centre Court, one to the Millennium Building and two to No.1 Court. These electronic display boards are in exactly the same places as the old 'flip dot' ones, which were installed in 1981.

In 2018, a fourth Match Information Display was incorporated into the south-west corner of No.1 Court, facing out towards the Walled Garden. A Match Information Display was also provided at Qualifying.

In 2021, the graphics on all the electronic displays were updated to be consistent with the new layout and colour scheme adopted for the scoreboards.

HOSPITALITY

Hospitality facilities are provided across the road from the Club in The Lawn and The Treehouse; at the southern end of the Grounds in the Rosewater Pavilion, and in the Skyview Suites in Centre Court. All these facilities are managed by Keith Prowse, Wimbledon's official exclusive hospitality partner. There are also several private suites in both Centre and No.1 Courts, which are managed internally. The No.1 Court suite entrances are themed by the four flowers of Wimbledon: Agapanthus, Rose, Hydrangea and Petunia. This theme runs up through each entrance to the corridors of the suites.

RETAIL

The Wimbledon Merchandise programme was started by The All England Lawn Tennis Club in 1979 and has three objectives: to increase awareness of Wimbledon throughout the world; to enhance further the image of The Championships and to provide additional funds for the development of lawn tennis. Wimbledon merchandise is designed and developed in-house, working directly with manufacturers and suppliers to produce individual collections each year. Outside of The Championships, merchandise is also offered at The Museum Shop, located on the Grounds and open year-round in conjunction with The Museum and Tour experience. The All England Lawn Tennis Club also has several licensees worldwide, offering footwear, tennis rackets and bags, towels and tennis balls. Wimbledon merchandise is available online at www.wimbledon.com/shop.

Retail facilities within the Grounds consist of three main shops, based in Centre Court, No.1 Court and The Museum. In addition, there are several Express Shops situated around the Grounds for spectators to purchase event merchandise.

In addition to The Wimbledon Shops, a standalone Ralph Lauren Boutique is also located at the Grounds, within the Southern Village area. This store is home to the co-branded collections of The Championships' Official Outfitter, which includes Ball Boys and Girls and Umpire uniforms, which are sold alongside a seasonal apparel collection.

OFFICIAL PARTNERS

The Club has always sought to retain the unique image and character of The Championships and has successfully achieved this over many years by developing long-term mutually beneficial Official Partner agreements with a range of blue-chip brands, as well as specifically not commercialising the Grounds overtly.

The income from the Official Partners is an important part of The Championships' surplus which goes back into the development of the game of tennis through the Lawn Tennis Association. Official Partners provide goods and services, which are both essential for the staging of The Championships, and which meet the Club's objective of improving the quality of the service provided to the players, spectators, the media and the staff involved in organising and running the event.

CHAMPIONS' DINNER AND LTA BALL

The Champions' Dinner has been held annually at the Savoy Hotel (1977–2007), the Hotel Intercontinental, Park Lane (2008–2013), Royal Opera House, Covent Garden (2014) and Guildhall, London (2015–2019) on the final evening of The Championships, ever since the function replaced the traditional staging of the LTA Ball. At the Dinner, which is hosted by the Committee of Management, the gathering of many international players and officials and others prominent in the game toasts the newly crowned singles champions. The Champions' Dinner in 1986 commemorated the 100th Championships.

Due to the Covid-19 pandemic, the dinner was not held in 2020 and 2021. In 2022 and 2023 it was held in The Lawn, a Championships hospitality venue on the grounds of The Wimbledon Club, across the road from the AELTC main site. In 2024 the Champions' Dinner returned to Central London, being held at Raffles London at the Old War Office, in Whitehall. It will be held there again in 2025.

In 1977 the LTA Ball moved to the first Saturday in order to stage The Championships Centenary Ball, which was held at the Hilton Hotel. The function has remained fixed to that evening ever since, initially taking place at the Hilton Hotel, before being held at the Grosvenor House, 1987–2003, the Lancaster Gate Hotel, 2004–2005, the Hurlingham Club, 2006–2012, the Boiler House, Battersea Power Station, 2013 and the Hurlingham Club from 2014 to 2024, excluding 2020 and 2021 when it was not held. Between 2016 and 2018 it was known as the British Tennis Ball.

The history of the LTA Ball stretches back to 1935, at the Dorchester Hotel. This function superseded the annual Banquet or Dinner held for many years at the close of The Championships, at various hotels, including the Savoy and Piccadilly. The LTA felt that the new venture was in keeping with changing times and that guests preferred an evening of dancing (with supper) rather than the formal dignity of a banquet. The following year the venue was changed to the Grosvenor House and this was maintained up to 1976 (during the austerity years, 1946–1950, the functions were styled Buffet Dances).

LAST 8 CLUB

The Last 8 Club, inaugurated in 1986 as part of the 100th Championship celebrations, recognises the contribution made to lawn tennis by players who have reached the quarter-finals of the singles, the semi-finals of the gentlemen's and ladies' doubles or the final of the mixed doubles of The Championships. (Prior to 2001 the qualification for the mixed doubles was semi-finalist.)

A hospitality facility for Last 8 Club members is situated in a private suite adjacent to Gate 5. A total of 699 players are eligible for membership of the Last 8 Club. In 2024, 218 attended The Championships.

ROYALTY

British royalty has been associated with The Championships since 1907 when the Prince of Wales, accompanied by Princess Mary, visited the Worple Road Ground on Saturday 29 June. Arriving by car at around 3.15p.m., they were met by the Committee at the entrance to the Ground and escorted to the Committee Box, which had temporarily been fitted out as a Royal Box. They stayed until a thunderstorm put an end to the day's play, having watched the last of Wilberforce Eaves v Leonard Escombe, May Sutton v Agatha Morton and part of a doubles contest. Before leaving the Ground, the Prince accepted an offer of the Presidency of the Club and declared his intention to donate to the Club a challenge trophy. The Prince remained President until his accession to the throne as King George V in 1910. He then became Patron of the Club, a position subsequently maintained by succeeding monarchs.

Queen Elizabeth II served as Patron from 1952 until the end of 2016, when she stood down and was succeeded by the Duchess of Cambridge (now Princess of Wales). King George V and Queen Mary were avid spectators at The Championships, being present each year from 1919 to 1934, with the exception of 1927 and 1929. Queen Mary continued this association and from 1935 to 1951 missed only the meeting of 1936.

When in 1922 King George V, accompanied by Queen Mary, opened the Church Road ground, the Prince of Wales (later King Edward VIII and Duke of Windsor) and Prince Albert (later Duke of York and King George VI) were present. In 1926, on the occasion of The Jubilee Championships, the latter competed in the Gentlemen's Doubles event in partnership with L. Greig (later Sir Louis Greig, Chairman of The All England Lawn Tennis Club), but they were well beaten in the first round by Roper Barrett and Arthur Gore. In 1947 King George VI and Queen Elizabeth were present to watch the gentlemen's singles final.

Queen Elizabeth II visited The Championships on Saturday 6 July 1957, Friday 6 July 1962 and, during her Silver Jubilee year, on Friday 1 July 1977, also the occasion of The Championship's Centenary. Her Majesty's final visit was on Thursday 24 June 2010. Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, attended in 1949, 1953, 1954, 1957, 1960 and 1977. King Charles III (as Prince of Wales) was present in 1960, 1970 and 2012. Queen Camilla (as Duchess of Cornwall) has been a regular visitor to The Championships, including with her husband in 2012.

In 1929, Prince George became President of the Club and so began the long association with the Kent family. When he died in 1942 his widow, the Duchess of Kent (later Princess Marina) succeeded in the post and, up to her death in 1968, attended 23 successive years, many of them most days. The tradition continued with the present Duke of Kent, who succeeded his mother in 1969. He attended frequently each year and presented the trophies until his retirement after The Championships 2021.

The very first Royal visits to The Championships were by Austrian Royalty. Prince Batthyany Strattman, husband of Crown Princess Stephanie, attended on several days of The Championships 1895. The Prince and Crown Princess together attended the Gentlemen's Doubles Challenge round on Monday 15 July.

The first Royal competitor at The Championships is believed to be Prince Friedrich Karl of Prussia, a nephew of Kaiser Wilhelm II of Germany. Playing under the name 'F. Karl', he lost in the first round to Reginald Gamble of Great Britain.

DIGITAL AND SOCIAL MEDIA

Since 1995, information about the AELTC and The Championships has been available to users on the internet, originally at wimbledon.org, now wimbledon.com. The website contains a wealth of information including current point-by-point scores, statistics, news, photos and videos, as well as history of the All England Club and The Championships. The site also broadcasts the Wimbledon Radio Channel and includes the online Wimbledon Shop.

Wimbledon's digital offering has developed rapidly over the years, and the AELTC has strived to operate at the forefront of the industry. Among the major innovations, at the time, was enabling Wimbledon fans to receive match results for their favourite players and news during The Championships. In 2009, a new wimbledon.org site provided an optimised experience for fans browsing the internet from their mobile phone. IBM also developed the first Grand Slam iPhone app including point-by-point scores, video, news, schedules and results.

Having changed the domain to wimbledon.com in 2011, in 2012 the website re-launched with a redesign aimed at bringing Wimbledon to life for the online user with photography from The Championships under the banner of being the 'next best thing to being here'.

A Wimbledon iPad app was launched in 2013, and in 2014 the AELTC re-launched mobile personalised apps for iPhone and Android. The apps allowed the user to tailor the scores, draws and results according to their favourite player, country and/or event.

Wimbledon.com underwent a second redesign and rebuild in 2015, including live video in the homepage, a responsive design, and additional content. The mobile apps were further enhanced to include greater personalisation. For The Championships 2016, Wimbledon launched new, responsive apps for iOS, Android and Apple TV, including a bespoke experience for the visitor, and made further improvements to the website, video and social content offering.

By 2018, Wimbledon's social media audience had grown to more than 10 million, while the digital audience during The Championships reached 21 million. In 2019, developments included the launch of my*WIMBLEDON*, a guest communications platform, new statistics offerings, a video-first content approach, and an expansion of the Wimbledon Archive, now including key statistics from the Wimbledon Compendium. The Wimbledon Apps were further expanded with the use of Augmented Reality technology, and social media continued to play a crucial role, with Wimbledon present across all major platforms: Facebook, Twitter (now known as X), Instagram, Snapchat, YouTube, Pinterest, Weibo, Wechat, TikTok and Giphy.

For 2020, the AELTC was set to host the Wimbledon Public Ballot online for the first time, with prospective applicants asked to register for the Ballot via my*WIMBLEDON*. However, the cancellation of The Championships saw wimbledon.com fill the fortnight period by providing an interactive, day-by-day retelling of the greatest matches in the event's history.

In 2022, mobile ticketing was enhanced across wimbledon.com and the apps, and new match insights providing fans with the likelihood of the outcome. Wimbledon also became the first tennis event to launch an experience in Roblox, along with the Wimbledon Kids series for YouTube, to attract the younger generation of fans.

2023 saw Wimbledon enter Fortnite with the Race to Wimbledon mini game. The utilisation of Artificial Intelligence across Wimbledon's digital platforms continued, in the form of AI commentary on highlights packages and AI analysis of the Championships Draws. Further AI enhancements in 2024 included the use of Generative AI to produce match previews and reviews for every singles match. In addition, in 2024 the AELTC held its first-ever esports tournament, alongside being featured in the video game TopSpin 2k25.

During The Championships 2024, Wimbledon saw record levels of online engagement, including 3 billion impressions and 115 million engagements on social media.

The Official Information Technology Supplier, IBM, develops and provides IT services for the All England Club and The Championships. Designed to offer a comprehensive source of data on every aspect of The Championships, the multimedia Wimbledon Interactive service (WIS), a web browser-based Intranet, provides access to live scores and statistics, order of play and results, player biographies with Grand Slam and Tour results as well as other tour information. WIS is updated in real time and is used to provide up-to-date and accurate information to broadcasters and the press. WIS is also available to players, public and officials.

The information is collected from a variety of IT systems and databases. One of the most important is the court-side statistics entry system, operated on all courts by tennis experts using a laptop computer, which records details of each point scored during the tournament. As well as being used for WIS, this data is used to produce the score and statistical TV graphics for the Wimbledon Broadcast Services which are seen on the BBC and around the world, and also to update live scores on the website and apps.

As well as up-to-date information on the current Championships, WIS gives access to comprehensive statistical information on The Championships since 1992 and historical results dating back to the first Championships in 1877.

PROGRAMMES

The programme at the first Championship in 1877 was printed on thin card, folded into two, to give a page size of 6 x 4 inches. On the front page appeared the words "All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club", followed by the date, "List of Players" and "Price Sixpence". The rear page was devoted to showing the layout of the 12 courts, relative to the Pavilion. Inside appeared the full draw of the “Lawn Tennis Championship” (gentlemen’s singles only), together with a list of prizes and a statement that “The official score will be posted on the Notice Board in the pavilion after each tie”. The programme was kept up to date, with the name of the winner of each match being printed overnight, a practice which has continued to the present time.

The programme had a similar appearance until the early 1890s, when very thin cards, 4 x 3 inches, were provided. Printed on both sides were the draws of one, two or three events. These cards, easy to slip into the pocket, cost threepence and gave much information, such as a plan of the Grounds, a timetable for trains between Wimbledon and Waterloo, a list of the Committee of Management members, times of play and the match scores.

As the number of events and competitors increased the programme was enlarged accordingly. From 1899 to 1904 the card was folded into two, to give a page size of 8 x 5 inches. The court layout and times of play were not detailed and from 1902 the train times were deleted. The more commercial aspects of the production were apparent when the first advertisement was shown in 1903, offering a book for sale. From 1905 the card was folded into three and by 1914 the page size had risen to 13 x 5 inches. The 1909 edition re-introduced the layout of the courts and the day’s schedule of matches.

After the First World War in 1919, the programme was expanded again to consist of eight pages of paper, 12.5 x 10 inches, folded into two. The manner of presentation of the draws and other information laid the foundation of the present day programme. In 1924 the programme was produced in a stapled book form to include a cover. The size of this page remained around 12 x 10 inches and for the first time a list of previous winners of the events was included.

During the Twenties and Thirties the programme remained substantially unchanged. There was a rotation of colour used for the front cover board and as the advertisements grew so did the number of pages. The 1946 programme had a touch of austerity but a year later the first photographs appeared with an aerial view of the Centre Court on the front cover, which was printed green throughout the fortnight, with a page inside showing various pictures from the previous year’s Championships. In 1948 the front cover was printed in a different colour each day of the week and these were repeated during the second week. A photograph of a player appeared daily as an integral part of the front cover. Inside each day was a different article written by Brigadier J.G. Smyth, V.C., M.C., together with a selection of photographic illustrations. Also evident for the first time were full page four-colour advertisements. In 1949 an alphabetical ‘List of Competitors’ was given. For the next 20 years or so the programme’s format changed little, although occasionally in the late Fifties and Sixties a colour photograph appeared on the front cover of the final programme. New ground was broken in 1977 when the Centenary programme provided player biographies, accompanied by colour photographs. Since that date the programme has expanded to provide more information. In 1985 the Qualifying singles results and the previous year’s Championship singles draws were included for the first time.

In 2002, there was a break with tradition when for the first time the competitors’ forenames, instead of initials, were shown in the opening round of the gentlemen’s and ladies’ singles events. Thereafter, in these two draws, initials were retained, together with the ladies’ titles, Mrs. or Miss. However, in 2009 all five Championship draws showed forenames throughout, while the ladies’ titles were dropped.

From 2010 the pages of the Programme were perfect bound and in 2015 advertising in the Programme was limited to official suppliers only.

‘THIS IS WIMBLEDON’ AND OTHER BOOKLETS

The ‘This is Wimbledon’ booklet, the official guide to The Championships, had its roots reaching back to 1954 when the Club published for the first time a 12-page booklet containing facts and figures on the Club and The Championships entitled ‘Can You Help Me?’ This gave a list of 70 questions and answers on a variety of subjects which were basically compiled to assist journalists reporting at Wimbledon. Surprisingly the introduction stated that the production was “intended as only a rough guide and no guarantee was given to its accuracy”.

In the Sixties the booklet cover was green and showed an aerial photograph of the Club. This was on sale to the public, priced 1s 0d.

By the Seventies the size was slightly larger and the title changed to ‘Know Your Wimbledon’, while the question and answer format was dropped in favour of different sections dealing with a variety of aspects of the organisation.

The last issue of ‘Know Your Wimbledon’ was in 1980, priced 50p, and thereafter ‘This is Wimbledon’, with the inclusion of photographs, colour from 1990, was updated and available each year. It was published for the final time in 2017. Other booklets published annually by the Club, mainly for internal use, are: Media Guide – 1976–2018, Competitors’ Guide – 1982 to date, Junior Competitors’ Guide – 1984 to date, Broadcast Centre Guide – 1997–1999, Wheelchair Competitors’ Guide – 2016 to date, Qualifying Competition Guide – 2017 to date.

FILMS ON WIMBLEDON

As The Championships’ international reputation has grown over the years it has become an occasionally favoured spot for supporting roles in some major feature film productions.

The lawns of SW19 were first seen in their moving glory in 1937 when the BBC’s two cameras recorded the action between Bunny Austin and George Lyttleton-Rogers, even if it would be another 30 years before the stadia were seen on the silver screen.

1967’s Nobody Runs Forever was a spy thriller starring Rod Taylor, Christopher Plummer and Lili Palmer, based on the novel by Jon Cleary, and the first motion picture to capture Centre Court in full flow.

The next celluloid appearance came in 1978 when Centre Court was used for the filming of The Players, a love story set against a backdrop of an up-and-coming tennis star, playing in The Championships at Wimbledon, who falls in love with an older woman. The film starred Dean Paul Martin, Ali McGraw and the 'real-life' Argentinian star Guillermo Vilas. The action was filmed just before the ladies' singles final on the second Friday and featured impressive shots of the grounds from the air as well as convincing court action, with Dan Maskell in the commentary box.

The following year Centre Court was once again seen in widescreen when part of the comedy heist movie, Rough Cut, starring Burt Reynolds, Lesley-Ann Down and David Niven was filmed there in July, with over 600 extras employed. Connors and Borg are shown in action, along with some shots outside the stadium and in the crowd.

Twenty-five years would pass before cinephiles caught another glimpse of the hallowed lawns, when the Club teamed up with Working Title films and the Grounds played its own significant role in the romantic comedy Wimbledon. The film starred Kirsten Dunst and Paul Bettany, with scenes being filmed during The Championships, and throughout July and August, all over the Grounds and on Centre Court. The film told the fictional story of Peter Colt, a former star English player in the twilight of his career, who is having a last tilt at Wimbledon. As Serena Williams drily observed at the time, "It must be a comedy if a British player is winning at Wimbledon."

Whilst not actually filmed in SW19, the 2016 film Borg vs McEnroe, starring Sverrir Gudnason as Borg and Shia LaBeouf as McEnroe, depicted the 1981 gentlemen's singles final between the two on Centre Court, whilst actually using the Stvanice tennis arena in Prague. The bonus features section of the DVD includes Gudnason's filmed visit to Centre Court and a tour around the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum.

In 2021, Warner Bros released a film, King Richard, which stars Will Smith as the eponymous Richard Williams and depicts the early life of Venus and Serena Williams. The Club hosted the media launch for the film in the UK.

MEDIA

Around 550 writers and international radio reporters attend The Championships, drawn from over 50 countries. Of these, approximately 105 have full, automatic access to the Centre Court media seating and a further 80 or so have automatic access for the first 10 days. The remainder have a full Championships or individual day Rover pass which gives them access to Centre and No.1 Courts when there is space available, and to use the reserved media seating on the remaining Show Courts. All media can access a variety of facilities, including the 24-hour Media Restaurant situated under Court 14.

On any given day, the average number of press attending is 450 to 500. The British press corps totals approximately 250 but the figure is dependent on other major sporting events taking place at the same time as The Championships (often FIFA World Cup or European Championships football).

National newspapers and press agencies may have up to 12 journalists attending – sport, features and news – and journalists from regional publications attend, particularly if following a British player who is local to them.

In 2024, the country with the next largest representation was Italy, with 33 correspondents, followed by the United States, Spain, Germany, France, Japan and Poland, all with between 11-27 representatives amongst the written press. The number of press attending The Championships from overseas is often reflected by the number of players from that particular country competing, so will fluctuate year to year.

In 2000 the press and photographers were provided with purpose-built facilities in the Millennium Building. The international written press and radio reporters were housed on three floors with the Press Interview Rooms on the ground floor and the Media Cafe on the top floor. Photographers were relocated to a new, state-of-the-art facility under Court 14 in 2015 and the press joined broadcasters in a new and improved Media Restaurant.

In 2023 the media interview facilities moved from their traditional home in the Millennium Building to a purpose-built space on top of the Broadcast Centre called the Media Pavilion. The Media Pavilion features a new Media Theatre, containing state-of-the-art technology, and a further seven interview rooms, an outdoor broadcast mixed zone, and two levels of bookable stand-up and presentation positions for rights-holders. Interviews taking place in the Media Theatre and Interview Room 2 are relayed live to the writing rooms and followed by transcripts for those who are unable to attend the interview in person – a facility which is particularly helpful when deadlines are approaching.

There are three main press writing rooms, one on each floor, with enough desks for 360 journalists. Each desk is fully equipped with an interactive screen incorporating 33 channels as well as all Championships information and latest results from each court as they become available. IBM provides statistical information and a dedicated team can generate specific statistics if requested. Those members of the press who do not have a desk assigned to them are able to follow the event in a TV monitor room close to the writing rooms or use a hot desk. The press and photographers are looked after by a Media team employed by the AELTC specifically for that purpose. Work on accreditation and administration of the press and photography facilities begins in January each year. Support for the player interview and match information functions during The Championships is provided by staff from the LTA, ATP and WTA Tours, and the ITF.

TELEVISION

Play was televised for the first time in 1937, when matches were transmitted by the BBC from Centre Court for up to half an hour each day of The Championships. Two cameras were used, one at the south-east corner of the court, giving close-up views and the other in a fixed position at the other end of the court, providing a general view of the scene.

The cameras were connected by cable to a unit in the car park which transmitted by radio to Alexandra Palace. On the opening day, viewers saw 25 minutes of the match between Bunny Austin and George Lyttleton Rogers. The commentator was F.H. Grisewood, who during the Fortnight was assisted by Capt. H.B.T. Wakelam and Col. R.H. Brand. Soon after The Championships, the BBC returned to Wimbledon to televise the Davis Cup Inter-Zone Final and Challenge Round, again for a short period each day.

In 1938 and 1939, a third camera was added to television coverage of The Championships. After the Second World War in 1946, television covered the annual Wightman Cup tie in mid-June and then The Championships, but not before the first Saturday. An interview took place for the first time on the final Saturday, when the new champions, Yvon Petra and Pauline Betz, were interviewed by Alice Marble, the 1939 champion. Eurovision first covered The Championships in 1954 and in 1956 Independent Television started to compete with the BBC. However, it withdrew after 1968, realising that double coverage was not commercially viable.

The very first colour television transmission in the UK took place on the first Saturday in 1967 when BBC2 showed a four-and-a-half-hour programme from Centre Court, commencing at 2pm. The first match was Cliff Drysdale (RSA) versus Roger Taylor (GBR). Transmissions in colour were also made each afternoon of the following week, plus a 30-minute highlights programme each evening. In August that year a professional tournament, produced by the BBC to mark the introduction of colour television, was held on Centre Court. The pattern was set for all future Championships.

2017 marked 90 years of BBC Radio and 80 years for BBC TV at The Championships. In 2018 the AELTC took control of the host coverage under 'Wimbledon Broadcast Services' (WBS) but a new rights agreement guaranteed that the relationship with the BBC would continue as the domestic broadcaster until at least 2027. More than 1,500 hours of match coverage is produced and made available to broadcasters around the world.

Because of the growing overlap of terrestrial, cable, satellite and internet streaming transmissions, it is difficult to calculate exact figures of the number of people who follow Wimbledon each year; but it is safe to say that it is seen by more people throughout the world than any other tennis tournament. This audience continues to grow because of the All England Club's agreements with a wide range of media partners, transmitted to over 200 countries.

In the United Kingdom the BBC transmits over 150 hours of coverage across BBC1 and BBC2 including a daily highlights programme in the evening, and many more hours on their iPlayer service, and online.

Owing to the various time differences around the world, it is inevitable that somewhere, a Wimbledon programme, either live or recorded, is being broadcast every moment throughout the Fortnight. Consequently, the Broadcast Centre is one of the busiest locations on the Grounds, becoming a 24-hour operation during The Championships.

The Championships 2025 will be delivered in a minimum picture quality of 1080pHDR for all live feeds, Centre & No1 Court is produced in native UHD HDR. WBS also offers a unique behind-the-scenes feed 'Access All England' which follows the players from the moment they arrive on site until they step on to court, giving broadcast partners bespoke content to integrate into their programmes.

WIMBLEDON BROADCAST SERVICES

2018 saw the launch of 'Wimbledon Broadcast Services' (WBS) as the AELTC took control of the host broadcast of The Championships. For the first time, there was multicamera coverage from all 18 courts, produced now by over 120 host cameras across the site. A combination of manned and robotic camera solutions is utilised, with the number of cameras ranging from five on some outside courts to 29 on Centre Court. Each individual court feed features dedicated replay and graphics facilities, a director with full audio and visual support, as well as world feed commentary from up to 11 courts at any one time. 2019 saw WBS introduce a 600m point-to-point wire-camera on the former Wimbledon Park golf course which gave stunning pictures of the Grounds, affording viewers a unique, not previously seen, perspective of the site.

At The Championships 2022, for the first time, every match during the Fortnight was televised, and for 2023 UHD/HDR coverage was extended from Centre Court to include No.1 Court; The Championships 2025 will see all live feeds available in a minimum picture quality of 1080pHDR. WBS produces a unique look behind-the-scenes on the 'Access All England' channel that covers players from the moment they arrive on site via 15 cameras across Aorangi and the Millennium Building, following their pre-match preparations.

WIMBLEDON RADIO CHANNEL

In 1992, a special station known as 'Radio Wimbledon' began broadcasting, providing visitors and the local community with up to 14 hours of live programming each day during The Championships. The service included match reports and results, local information on weather, travel and traffic, the daily order of play, features on players, information for visitors about facilities in the Grounds and interviews with players.

Now called The Wimbledon Radio Channel, the service is available worldwide on wimbledon.com and the Official Wimbledon Apps, and for the local community within a radius of four miles of the Club Grounds, on three FM services. The main service is on 87.7FM while ball-by-ball commentary of the matches on Centre and No.1 Courts is available on 96.3FM and 97.8FM respectively, to enable spectators with a visual or hearing disability to follow play more easily. The first BBC radio broadcast from The Championships took place in 1927.

POSTERS

From the early 1920s, posters were issued by London Transport to advertise The Championships (also Davis Cup and Wightman Cup ties) on stations in London. The later posters were colourful and contained much information, such as directions and ticket prices. In the early 1980s the All England Lawn Tennis Club undertook the design of the posters with London Transport arranging the distribution.

However, in 1995, use of the poster on the London Underground was discontinued as the advent of websites and local radio providing relevant information dispensed with the need for this form of advertising.

As the posters had become very popular with the public, the Club decided to produce annually, for sale, a similar poster, but with reduced information. Since 1986, a poster has been on sale to the public in the Wimbledon Shops.

The Official Poster for The Championships 2025 is titled 'Tennis in an English Garden', created by British graphic designer Sarah Madden, and appears in full colour on the back cover of this book, as well as in black and white on page 20. Inspired by the unique floral surroundings of The Championships, the artwork captures the contrast between world-class tennis and the serene, botanical beauty of SW19. An excited crowd blends seamlessly into a pristine flowerbed of hydrangeas, petunias, butterflies and bees – highlighting Wimbledon's distinctive blend of sport and nature.

Madden commented: "Wimbledon is more than a tennis tournament – it's a celebration of tradition, the English summer in full bloom, and a sporting experience unlike others. The atmosphere strikes a beautiful balance between the excitement of the crowd, the beauty of the setting, and the timeless prestige of The Championships. I wanted the poster to capture that balance and unmistakably convey the essence of Wimbledon, showcasing the intensity of the sport, the thrill of the crowds, and the calm, natural beauty of its surroundings. Wimbledon has a magic of its own, and I hope this artwork reflects that."

OTHER EVENTS

While the All England Club is synonymous with The Championships, Wimbledon has also played host to a number of other iconic competitions, not least the Davis Cup and – on two occasions – the Olympics Games, which in 2012 saw Great Britain's Andy Murray memorably win the first of his Olympic gold medals by beating Switzerland's Roger Federer on Centre Court. Additionally, The Championships has over the course of its long life seen a number of events come and go, with the exact format of the world-famous Fortnight continuing to evolve and develop in order to reflect and further the latest developments within the sport.

PRE-QUALIFYING COMPETITION (1983-2003)

From 1983 to 2003 The Lawn Tennis Association held Wimbledon Pre-Qualifying singles events two weeks before The Championships with entries restricted to British players: ie those qualified to represent Great Britain under rule 35 of the 'Rules of the L.T.A.'.

In the early years the number of players accepted in the competition varied from year to year. From 1993 to 1998 the entry was restricted to 48 gentlemen and 32 ladies. In 2004 the events were discontinued and amalgamated with the LTA Wild Card Play-off competitions.

The matches were played outside The All England Lawn Tennis Club.

THE ALL ENGLAND CLUB

The day-to-day operations of The Championships are led and conducted by The AELTC. The Club was founded on 23 July 1868 as The All England Croquet Club. Its name was changed in 1877 to The All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club and in 1899 to The All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club. On 1 August 2011 the Club was converted into a company limited by guarantee under the name The All England Lawn Tennis & Croquet Club Limited. The activities of the Club, as a private members' club, are conducted separately from The Championships.

The AELTC

THE COMPANIES

In 2011, the All England Club incorporated into a group of companies in order to best manage the differing aspects of the Club's activities. The Club company manages the operations of the All England Club and its Membership, the Championships company manages the operations of The Championships and the Ground company manages the operations of the Grounds and the Estate.

MEMBERSHIP

Membership of the Club consists of five categories: (a) Full Members, (b) Life Members, (c) Honorary Members, (d) Temporary Members, (e) Junior Temporary Members. Members under headings (a), (b) and (c) are limited to 500 (excluding Royalty) in number. Honorary Members include past singles champions, other eminent lawn tennis players, benefactors of the Club or Championships, and other persons who have rendered special service to lawn tennis. Temporary Members are elected from year to year and generally are active players who make regular use of the Club and play in Club matches during the period of their membership.

TITLE

The Club was founded on 23 July 1868 as 'The All England Croquet Club'. The Club title has been changed as follows:- 14 April 1877 – 'The All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club'; 4 December 1882 – 'The All England Lawn Tennis Club'; 2 December 1899 – 'The All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club'. On 1 August 2011 the Club converted into a company limited by guarantee under the name of 'The All England Lawn Tennis & Croquet Club Limited'.

IN REMEMBRANCE

In the ground floor corridor of the Clubhouse is a plaque commemorating Club Members who were killed serving in the two world wars. 1914–1918: Major I.D. Bloggs, D.S.O, Royal Engineers; 2nd Lieutenant F.W. Goldberg, Queen's Royal West Surrey; Lance Corporal I.L. Hampton, London Rifle Brigade, Captain A.M. Hendriks, Royal Fusiliers; 2nd Lieutenant H.S. Kenion, Lancashire Fusiliers; Private K. Powell, HAC Infantry; Lieutenant R.B. Powell, Canadian Pioneer Battalion; Major A.J. Ross, D.S.O. Royal Flying Corp; Captain A.F. Wilding, Royal Marines; Private F.J. Woods, Royal Fusiliers; 1939–1945: Air Commodore H.R.H Duke of Kent K.G. Royal Air Force (President of the Club); Major V.A. Cazalet, M.C., M.P., Royal Artillery; Captain W.R. Findlay, Royal East Kent Regt., K.C. Gandar Dower, War Correspondent.

COLOURS

The present Club Colours, dark green and purple, were introduced in 1909, following the discovery that the previous colours of the Club were almost identical to those of the Royal Marines, which were blue, yellow, red and green. The decision as to why dark green and purple were chosen is not stated in the Club's records, although several theories have been put forward. One is that the choice was based on a line from the poem Milton by William Blake, which references "Wimbledon's green and impurpled Hills". Another is that the colours are based on those of the suffragettes. However, there is no evidence for or against either of these theories.

GROUNDS

The Club Grounds consist of 18 grass courts (including Centre Court and No.1 Court), four American clay courts and four acrylic courts. In Aorangi Park & Southlands, there are 20 grass courts for practice before and during The Championships. The Indoor Tennis Centre on Somerset Road contains six indoor acrylic courts and six outdoor clay courts. The total area, including the Club's car parks but excluding the former Wimbledon Park Golf Course, covers more than 42 acres.

‘POP-UP’ GRASS COURT EXPERIMENT

In the interests of research into pre-grown grass courts, a ‘pop-up’ grass court was laid in the Grounds during September 2023 and 2024. This enabled grass court play for several weeks after the traditional end of the grass court season. The court, which was grown in Lincolnshire, was harvested, transported and laid at the AELTC within the space of one week. In 2023 it was laid on top of clay court 7 and in 2024 it was on clay court 12.

USE OF COURTS

Apart from the grass courts, the courts are used all year round by the Club Members and LTA sponsored players. The grass courts are in play from May to September (except the Centre Court and other Show Courts which are used only for The Championships). The courts are lent to a number of clubs and organisations, mainly of a national character, for the staging of various events.

INDOOR TENNIS CENTRE

The AELTC Indoor Tennis Centre opened its doors in May 2022 and is a brand-new facility for the AELTC and its Members, replacing the old covered courts complex located on the same site on Somerset Road.

The new Indoor Tennis Centre comprises six indoor acrylic courts and six external clay courts with Members' recreational facilities, including a viewing gallery and Members' bar, family room, working room and dressing rooms. A new underground car park has space for circa 330 vehicles (including electric charging points, motorcycle and bike parking). In addition, there is a tunnel link to the Millennium Building under Somerset Road.

The building was designed by Hopkins Architects and has a dual purpose. Year round it provides Members with both indoor and outdoor tennis facilities, while during The Championships it facilitates the players' drop off and accreditation, as well as transport/courtesy car operations.

The project was designed to be the most sustainable building in the AELTC portfolio and includes heat pumps, PV cells on the roof, as well as a naturally ventilated tennis hall. The new facility also acts as an Energy Centre, which serves the wider estate, and includes the provision of cooling for Centre Court when the roof is closed.

CROQUET

The All England Croquet Club was founded in July 1868 but being without a ground the first Club Croquet Championships were held at Crystal Palace in 1869. Late that year the Worple Road ground was secured and formally opened in 1870 with the staging of the second Championships.

In 1875 lawn tennis was first played at the Club and when in 1877 the inaugural Lawn Tennis Championship was held the title of the Club was amended to the 'All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club'. Gradually interest in croquet declined and by the end of 1882 participation had ceased and 'Croquet' was removed from the Club's title.

During 1896 the croquet players were invited to return. In 1899 the Club Championship was reinstated and 'Croquet' was restored to the Club's title. However, the upsurge in interest did not last long and after the 1904 Championship the game faded again, but the Club retained the title of 'All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club'.

Croquet was not provided for when the Club moved to the present Church Road ground, and was first played on 7 September 1953 when exhibition matches were staged by the Croquet Association to mark the Coronation Year.

From 1 June 1957 to 2 September 2007 the croquet lawn was situated at the southern end of the grounds, alongside the Church Road boundary fence. This was not full size and competitive play was restricted to Club tournaments. The Club Croquet Championship was reintroduced together with a handicap singles event in 1960 and in recent years a golf croquet event was started. In the autumn of 2007 the Club's Long Term Plan necessitated other use for the area and new lawns were created in the Southlands College ground which was opened on 19 April 2008 by Professor Bernard Neal, President of the Croquet Association.

The Captain of the Croquet section is Julie Willson.

WIMBLEDON LAWN TENNIS MUSEUM

Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum was opened by H.R.H. The Duke of Kent on 19 May 1977 as part of the Centenary celebrations. The construction of the Centre Court East Side Building in 1984/85 led to the design of a completely new Museum, in which more of the expanding collection could be seen.

In 1993 H.R.H. The Duke of Kent consented to become Patron and during 1994 visited the Museum. The announcement in 2002 of the Club's plans for a roof on Centre Court and the redevelopment of the East Side necessitated the removal of the Museum and all its associated activities. The old Museum closed in October 2005 and a new Museum, housed in the new Museum Building, was opened on 12 April 2006 by H.R.H. The Duke of Kent.

As well as being home to the iconic Championships trophies, the Museum contains historic galleries, themed galleries devoted to tennis equipment and tennis fashions, as well as zones focussing on wheelchair tennis and 'A Day at The Championships'. A new gallery, celebrating the Open Era of tennis, opened in 2022. The Museum employs new technology with a variety of interactive displays, touchscreens and a multimedia guide. Visitors to the Museum have the option of a short, guided visit to Centre Court.

The Museum's current temporary exhibition 'Grassroots to Global Game' explores the remarkable evolution of tennis from a Victorian pastime to a worldwide sport enjoyed by millions. This exhibition delves into the sport's rich history, from the spread of tennis across the British Empire, before becoming a chic activity on the French Riviera during the roaring Twenties, and its rise to global prominence through international tournaments. Featuring star objects such as Sir Andy Murray's 2012 Olympic gold medal and Emma Raducanu's 2021 US Open Trophy, Grassroots to Global Game offers an engaging and interactive journey through tennis' transformation into the international phenomenon it is today. The exhibition opened on 2 November 2024 and runs until 12 October 2025. The curator of the exhibition is Dr Clio O'Sullivan.

Opening in autumn 2025, the next temporary exhibition 'A Slice of History: Food and Drink at Wimbledon' will explore the history and evolution of food and drink at The Championships, particularly highlighting Wimbledon's beloved delicacies that are often quintessentially British and internationally synonymous with the tournament. The curator of the exhibition is Dr Anna Boonstra.

The Museum is open free of charge to ticket holders during The Championships.

COMMUNITY & LEARNING PROGRAMME

As part of the All England Club's commitment to being a Force for Good, it puts great importance on being a good neighbour and ensuring that it has a positive impact on its local community and beyond. As part of that, the Club has an extensive and varied community events programme that aims to ensure that locals feel connected to and part of Wimbledon year-round.

The AELTC's annual Community Open Weekend sees over 1,200 people coming to enjoy everything Wimbledon has to offer on the Club's main Grounds, and across the year it hosts seasonally themed Nature Weekends to connect people to nature and bring to life how it looks after the nature on all the Club's sites. Alongside that, it supports local events and takes Wimbledon out into the local community, a good example being two big screens in Merton showing The Championships.

Finally, the Community team hosts regular guided tours of the former Wimbledon Park Golf Course for people to learn more about the Club's expansion plans and to experience the 24-acre southern parkland. Since the community engagement programme began in 2021, the team has engaged with over 10,000 people and looks forward to welcoming many more in future years.

Another integral part of engaging people with Wimbledon is the Club's Learning Programme, which together with the community engagement strand sits under the guidance of Ulrika Hogberg, Head of Community Strategy. Established in 2001, the Learning team's workshops have inspired over 100,000 guests through a variety of learning experiences. The Learning Programme aims to:

- Engage learners of all ages, backgrounds and abilities with the history of lawn tennis, The Championships and the Museum collection.

- Offer a diverse range of tailored learning packages including curriculum-led workshops, lectures, tours and sensory sessions.
- Expand the reach and impact of the Museum to those within the community who would not otherwise engage with the heritage and resources of the AELTC. This is achieved by offering opportunities to access our Grounds, providing new learning opportunities and inviting locals to take part in projects that help to develop skills and encourage self-expression.

The team is proud to deliver an engaging Learning Activation at the Wimbledon Qualifying Competition every year. In 2024, over 500 pupils from seven local schools were invited to experience Qualifying. Ahead of the day, all students enjoyed a curriculum-led, interactive workshop from the comfort of their own classroom. Then, on the day of their visit, students received a tennis coaching session either from AELTC Coaches or at the National Tennis Centre as part of the LTA's Youth Schools Programme. Following this, all students had the opportunity to watch the professional tennis action. This engagement will be repeated at Qualifying 2025, alongside visits to local primary and secondary schools during The Championships to bring this global event to life for local pupils, through engaging assemblies.

In 2023 the Learning team received a community investment from Official Partner Barclays, which has enabled the team, led by Ella Ottaway and Maggie Weiss, to expand its library of bespoke workshops and create a larger team to deliver a full-scale five-days-a-week programme for school groups from Key Stage 1 through to postgraduates.

The programme was granted the prestigious Sandford Award for Heritage Education in September 2024 in recognition of its 'inspiring education programme with clear curriculum links.' Across the 2024-2025 academic year, more than 3,000 pupils took part in one of the six workshops on offer and, in addition, the team hosted more than 500 guests from community groups.

March 2025 marked the second anniversary of Early Years at Wimbledon, Wimbledon's first-ever regular programme for local families. The programme offers a unique opportunity for local families with children under the age of five to discover Wimbledon through storytelling, movement, and music, as well as a suite of specially designed content to support the development of their motor, coordination, and speech and language skills.

In the last two years, over 1,500 guests have experienced the magic of Wimbledon through this exciting initiative. To broaden the impact of the Programme, the team now runs monthly events at the Community Tennis Centre in Raynes Park, also working with local children's centres to better support local families in need.

Finally, in a bid to increase access to The Championships for children, young people and families, the team has collaborated with other areas of the business to deliver various initiatives, including bringing the stars of the Wimbledon Kids series Blade and Bounce to life around the Grounds during both the Wimbledon Qualifying Competition and The Championships. In addition, the Family Ballot is now a regular feature with more tickets allocated for The Championships 2025, providing more local families from 30 neighbouring schools with the chance to enjoy the world-famous event that takes place on their doorstep.

KENNETH RITCHIE WIMBLEDON LIBRARY

The Kenneth Ritchie Wimbledon Library, which is part of Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum, contains the world's most outstanding collection of tennis books, annuals, periodicals, programmes, newspaper cuttings and archive material. The Library holds a total of more than 15,000 items, originating from 90 different countries. The Library is named in memory of John Kenneth Ritchie, Third Baron Ritchie of Dundee (1902–1975), a long-serving AELTC Committee Member, who was also Chairman of the London Stock Exchange between 1959 and 1965. On Lord Ritchie's death, the Stock Exchange made a significant donation to the Club, which was put towards the construction of the Library.

The Library was founded in 1976 by Alan Little (1928–2017), who ran it, in his capacity of Honorary Librarian, until 2016.

The Library collection is catalogued using a variation of the Dewey Decimal System, introduced in 2023. The catalogue is in the process of being put online and can be searched via wimbledon.com.

The Library is situated in the Museum Building, with the entrance at the north end, at level -1. It is open, by appointment, to anyone wishing to research any aspect of tennis history.

Opening hours are Monday to Friday, 10am to 12am and 1pm to 4pm. During The Championships, the Library operates extended opening hours and is available to anyone who has access to the Grounds via a ticket or accreditation. It is closed to non-ticket holders during this period.

WIMBLEDON FOUNDATION

Since it was established in 2014, the Wimbledon Foundation has invested more than £24 million on charitable activities locally, nationally and internationally helping to make a positive difference to the lives of more than nine million people.

During the financial year 2023/24, the Wimbledon Foundation awarded more than £4.08 million in grants and donations to local, national and international causes in line with its four goals: strengthening our local community, promoting healthy and active lives, inspiring the next generation and responding in times of need.

Locally, grants and donations totalling £1.59m were awarded to projects in Merton and Wandsworth, helping to tackle a wide range of issues including homelessness, food poverty, youth employability and community cohesion. The Wimbledon Junior Tennis Initiative (WJTI) continues to work with state primary schools in Merton and Wandsworth, introducing children to tennis as well as the life skills and values sport brings, such as teamwork, discipline and fairness.

Nationally, the Foundation's flagship programme, Set for Success, in partnership with Barclays and delivered by Youth Sport Trust, supports young people in under-served communities, who may be at risk of not achieving their full potential for a variety of factors. Using the power of sport and through sessions delivered by inspirational athlete mentors and teachers, Set for Success helps participants to increase their engagement at school, improve their life and leadership skills, and develop their confidence, aspirations and self-esteem.

Internationally, a grant of £2.2 million awarded over four years is enabling WaterAid to transform healthcare facilities with water, sanitation and hygiene facilities, helping to improve the health and livelihoods of people in communities around the world.

The British Red Cross, the Foundation's emergency response fund partner, receives an annual donation of £100,000 towards its Disaster Fund, which provides rapid relief to those affected by emergencies around the world.

The Wimbledon Foundation also helped to donate more than 15,000 items over the last year, including towels, clothing and plants, to local charities and community groups, whilst its Work at Wimbledon initiative helps local people facing barriers to employment to access jobs at The Championships and gain valuable work experience.

More details on the Wimbledon Foundation can be found on foundation.wimbledon.com.

THE WIMBLEDON JUNIOR TENNIS INITIATIVE (WJTI)

The Wimbledon Junior Tennis Initiative was launched in 2001. WJTI, as it has become known over the years, is the Club's flagship tennis programme, introducing tennis to new players around Merton and Wandsworth as well as developing young players to be the best player that they can be.

WJTI was the brainchild of Dan Bloxham, who set up the initiative with the support of AELTC Committee member Julian Tatum. Bloxham subsequently joined the AELTC on a full-time basis as the Club's Head Coach and continued to run the WJTI until 2023. The initiative is now overseen by the AELTC's Community head coach, Chris Daw.

The first weekend of coaching at the AELTC Grounds attracted more than 700 children and the programme has gone from strength to strength ever since. In 2005 the WJTI squad performed a demonstration of their abilities before the start of play on Court 14 on the final day of The Championships. This became an annual tradition, with famous names taking part including Roger Federer, the Williams sisters, John McEnroe and Martina Hingis, as well as Tim Henman and other leading British players. In 2010, Queen Elizabeth II attended the session, as part of her final visit to The Championships, an event which subsequently featured in that year's Queen's Christmas Broadcast.

Since 2001, WJTI coaches have made over 2,000 visits to state schools in Merton and Wandsworth. These visits have offered over 250,000 children a constructive experience of tennis, and the teachers have received many lessons and ideas which they can replicate. This year the WJTI visits schools with the highest pupil premium six consecutive times to ensure tennis is reaching children who have never played before and do not currently have access to the sport. In the third school term, coaches also visit a different school weekly, allowing more students across Merton and Wandsworth to experience tennis.

Up to four children from each school visit can be selected to join the WJTI and attend the weekend coaching sessions which are now held at the AELTC Community Tennis Centre in Raynes Park. Over 2,000 children have joined the WJTI in the last two decades and received free coaching throughout their junior career.

Around 320 children play tennis with WJTI every weekend at the Community Tennis Centre. As part of the WJTI, children also learn about the Club, the Members, players, The Championships and the types of careers that it is possible to explore within tennis.

WJTI players and parents also enjoy an array of events and opportunities at the Club, such as tours, tournaments, and community days. Before The Championships, our newly selected players are welcomed to the Club to receive a tour from the Learning Team and see their favourite players practice before the main event.

Since its introduction, WJTI has transformed the lives of many children, giving them the confidence to succeed in tennis and life in general. Several have even qualified as tennis coaches and thus have been able to pass on their experience to the next generations of participants.

PLAY YOUR WAY TO WIMBLEDON (FORMERLY ROAD TO WIMBLEDON)

Play Your Way to Wimbledon is Britain's largest individual mass participation tennis competition and provides recreational players with the opportunity to compete on Wimbledon's world-famous courts.

Thousands of players take part in the initial stages at venues across the country from March, with Area and County Finals taking place in June and July. From there, the winners progress to play in the National Finals on Wimbledon's Aorangi practise courts in August. These finals provide a once in a lifetime opportunity for players to immerse themselves in the Wimbledon experience, from utilising courts and facilities usually reserved for players competing in The Championships, to personalised tours of the historic Grounds and Museum.

Formerly known as Road to Wimbledon, the event was championed by the late Paul Hutchins MBE, former British Davis Cup Captain. It was first held in the UK in 2002, with the addition of qualifying tournaments in several Asian nations introduced between 2014-2019. Having paused the event due to the Covid-19 pandemic and, given the introduction of a 14&U Championships for international juniors hosted during The Championships from 2022, the AELTC and LTA took the opportunity to reimagine the mass participation competition with a sole focus on UK participants and the introduction of 18&U Doubles alongside 14&U Singles.

In 2023 the competition expanded further with Adult Doubles, Wheelchair Singles, Learning Disability and Visually Impaired categories added, with a dedicated Junior Wheelchair category added for 2024. 13,039 players competed in the 2024 competition with over 900 venues hosting the initial stages. Over 340 players made it to the National Finals held at the AELTC from 11-17 August. Exhibitions in para standing and deaf tennis were also staged during the National Finals.

AELTC COMMUNITY TENNIS CENTRE, RAYNES PARK

The AELTC's local community facility in Raynes Park opened in 2017 and was originally known as the AELTC Community Sports Ground. In 2021, the site was renamed the All England Community Tennis Centre, to reflect the predominantly tennis activity taking place. The facility comprises 16 grass courts and nine acrylic courts (six indoor and three outdoor).

Membership of the Community Tennis Centre now stands at over 20,000 members, with programming at full capacity. The nine acrylic courts are open seven days a week for coaching and casual bookings.

Over 700 juniors, both Community Members and WJTI players, attend weekly coaching sessions and holiday camps at the CTC. Tournaments are held regularly throughout the year and teams compete in the Surrey League, with some players aiming to compete in the County Championships which will be hosted at the Community Tennis Centre for the second consecutive year. In addition, this year the CTC will host an LTA Grade 1 U12 National event, Tennis Europe U14 event as well as Group 3 of the LTA Summer County Cup and the Surrey County Championships.

Over 200 adults attend weekly coaching sessions, and the coaching team delivers over 200 individual lessons each month to adult and junior players of all levels.

The 16 grass courts are available for professional player use in the build-up to The Championships and was also used for Surbiton Trophy practice and by the ITF Juniors. Community members can book courts to play on the grass courts from mid-July following the completion of The Championships.

The Centre is the home of the WJTI programme, with over 350 children receiving free tennis coaching each week and participating in tournaments and team matches throughout the year.

Over 120 children from local state schools receive free coaching at the Community Tennis Centre each week, and the venue hosts a number of events throughout the year organised by Merton Schools Sports Partnership, including inter-schools' tennis tournaments and inclusive sports days.

Around 180 Ball Boys & Girls train on the indoor courts each week from January to June in preparation for The Championships. As well as on-court work, they use the facility for theory tests and video analysis.

Spring 2024 saw the opening of the new two-storey clubhouse, housing a café, changing rooms and a multi-function studio space. Ancillary buildings with bleachers adjacent to the outdoor courts were also added, along with a junior play area complete with mini tennis courts and a hitting wall.

In the Autumn term Pilates and yoga classes launched, and Spring 2025 saw the activation of the junior football pitches with a number of local clubs using them for training and fixtures. In April a new table tennis programme was released with adult and junior coaching and family pay and play sessions.

WIMBLEDON QUALIFYING AND COMMUNITY SPORTS CENTRE, ROEHAMPTON

On 28 June 2021, the All England Lawn Tennis Club signed a 15-year lease at the former Bank of England Sports Ground in Roehampton, the historic home of the Wimbledon Qualifying event since 1949. The lease was part of a long-term vision to secure and enhance the Wimbledon Qualifying Tournament while also opening the site to benefit the local community.

In September 2021, the newly named Wimbledon Qualifying and Community Sports Centre officially opened for bookings. It welcomed both returning user groups and new visitors, offering access to upgraded facilities and supporting local sports and recreation.

Community Sport at Roehampton is available from September to May each year. Facilities in regular use include grass pitches, a synthetic turf pitch, a sports hall, a studio, and multiple tennis courts.

In the past year, there has been a marked increase in Pickleball participation, leading to the introduction of multiple weekly pay-and-play sessions. Tennis has also seen strong growth, with over 1,000 court bookings on both grass and hard courts during the 2023–2024 season. To meet rising demand, new adult tennis coaching sessions have been added through the Community Tennis Centre in Raynes Park.

In 2023, a series of significant upgrades were completed to enhance the Qualifying Event experience. A new 777-seat Show Court was built in a more central location, and the pavilion, reception, and changing rooms underwent major renovations. Grass practice courts were relocated in front of the Grange Building to improve layout and accessibility. Infrastructure was also modernized with a comprehensive power and cabling upgrade, eliminating the need for power generators and supporting sustainability goals. A temporary marquee was replaced with a permanent, improved structure, and 2025 will mark the first year of fully electronic line calling during the Qualifying event.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD

In 2013 the Club introduced a Distinguished Service Award for people who have given outstanding service to The Championships.

The Distinguished Service Award is an honour given in recognition of the recipient's outstanding service to The Championships. Criteria for the Award are: (i) a major and exceptional contribution to the organisation, conduct, advancement or quality of The Championships (ii) which have been sustained over a long period (generally not less than 10 years) and (iii) which has upheld the highest standards of excellence and care associated with Wimbledon. Service may be in a voluntary capacity or as a paid employee or consultant and may be full-time or part-time. A member of the Club may be eligible as a candidate although service as a member of the Club Committee or the Committee of Management, or as a player, is not relevant for this purpose. The Committee may amend these criteria or take into account such other factors as the Committee thinks fit. The Committee's decision is final.

It will be rare, over time, for the Award to be made to more than one person in any particular year. This is an honour for truly exceptional service and there may be years when no award is given. An Award will generally not be made until after the individual's retirement or ceasing to occupy the relevant position of service.

The Award comprises of a prize suitably engraved and presented on an occasion during The Championships. Also, certain privileges will be granted to each holder during the tournament.

HOLDERS OF THE AWARD

The Courts & the Stories they tell

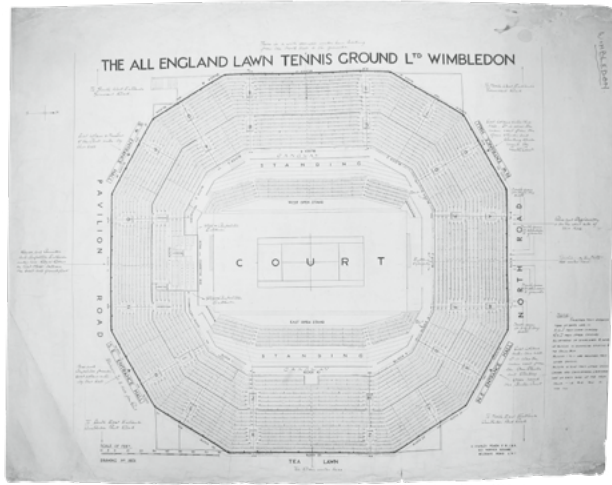

BY BEN CHATFIELD & ROBERT McNICOL

Whether it's the light, the shadows, the buildings nearby or our own personal memories of the physical space, different moods pervade in different parts of the Grounds at SW19. It follows that each court area has its own personality, its own atmosphere and its own aura. Whilst the groundstaff pride themselves on the uniformity and the consistency of the playing surfaces, what lies beneath the actual ground may also differ drastically from what we see, with different histories, bedrocks and even drying times. The incredible achievement is to get each of them playing at both their own peak and exactly the same as the other courts – for one month-long window at the end of June and the start of July each year. Head of Courts and Horticulture, Neil Stubbley, explains that this goal of consistency, spanning all the way from a northern practice court to Centre Court and beyond – across a 42-acre site with numerous microclimates and influences – takes some doing. This is a brief history of how a set of grass rectangles, a net and some chalk make up the very history of The Championships at Wimbledon.

CENTRE COURT: THE ROYAL COURT

This much-loved stadium was named after its predecessor at the original All England Club on Nursery Lane, down the road near Wimbledon train station. The on-court drama and controversy is largely covered in the Year-by-Year section, and the 'invasions' in another, but here we take a brief look back at those moments when the action was not just of the sporting variety.

Above: The original seating/standing layout of Centre Court

- Designed by Captain Stanley Peach, the court opened in 1922 as the brand-new main 'Show Court' for the Grounds. At the Nursery Lane site the 'Centre Court' had been so named as it sat in the centre of nine surrounding courts, but here it was at the northern end of the Grounds' layout. Despite the fact that it should probably have been called 'North Central Court' it happily retained its name and would one day reclaim its central position.
- The first man to play on Centre Court wearing shorts was seen in 1933 when Britain's Bunny Austin took on Keith Gledhill in front of the Queen.
- Centre Court was struck by a 500-pound bomb in October 1940, with the Grounds also being hit by a further four. Damage to the arena took out 1,200 seats and would not be fully repaired until 1949.
- The first-ever colour television transmission in the country took place in 1967, when BBC2 showed a four-and-a-half-hour programme from the stadium.
- The conclusion of the 1987 gentlemen's singles final went down in history as the newly crowned Australian Champion Pat Cash clambered over the lower buildings in the stands to reach the players' box and greet his near and dear. It would become a path well-trodden with the following players repeating the trick over the years: Martina Navratilova (1990), Steffi Graf (1993, 1995), Jana Novotna (1998), Venus Williams (2000), Pete Sampras (2000), Goran Ivanisevic (2001), Lleyton Hewitt (2002), Maria Sharapova (2004), Amelie Mauresmo (2006), Rafael Nadal (2008), Marion Bartoli (2013), Andy Murray (2013), Novak Djokovic (2014) and Petra Kvitova (2014). A gate was fitted in 2014, allowing for direct access and less clambering.
- Centre Court was cleared due to a bomb scare on the first Saturday evening in 1990.
- The court has seen its fair share of tears over the years, but none matched the emotional impact of Jana Novotna's in 1993. Having grabbed defeat from the jaws of imminent victory in the ladies' singles final the popular Czech player was overcome with it all, letting her tears flow on the shoulder of a compassionate Duchess of Kent. The tears would be less bitter when she returned to win five years later.

- The 1996 match between Richard Krajicek and Pete Sampras had been hampered by rain, leading to an impromptu singalong concert from Royal Box guest, and famous tennis fan, Cliff Richard. He sang a medley of his 60s hits Summer Holiday, Bachelor Boy and Congratulations, with Martina Navratilova leading an all-star female clapping chorus.
- The London stage of the Athens Olympic Torch Relay was launched on court in 2004.
- The first known (and attempted but failed) courtside mobile phone usage took place in 2004 when Maria Sharapova tried to phone her Mum to celebrate her win in 2004.
- 2006 saw the first non-finals day on-court interview, after Rafael Nadal had defeated Andre Agassi. The defeated popular former Champion was saying a final goodbye to Wimbledon, where he had claimed his first Grand Slam title win in 1992.
- 2007 was the year that Centre Court appeared to go back in time as the roof was completely removed for The Championships. Work was being carried out on the new retractable version.
- The 2009 'Centre Court Celebration' in May was staged in order to test the new roof and showcase the arena. Andre Agassi and his wife Steffi Graff took on Tim Henman and Kim Clijsters as the main event.
- The fastest recorded service at Wimbledon thundered down here at 148 mph in 2010, courtesy of America's Taylor Dent in his defeat to Novak Djokovic.
- 2012 saw tears on a national scale as Andy Murray broke down during an interview with Sue Barker live on the BBC as he thanked the whole nation for its emphatic support in his narrowly failed attempt to capture the elusive gentlemen's singles crown. The tears turned to joy a year later when Murray defeated Novak Djokovic in the final to become the first British man to win the title since 1936.
- 2024 saw emotional scenes of a different kind for Murray as he said goodbye to The Championships. Not fit enough to play in the singles, Andy entered the doubles with his brother Jamie and their match against Rinky Hijikata and John Peers became the first opening round gentlemen's doubles match since 1995 to be scheduled on Centre Court. Following a straight sets win for the Australians, Murray was interviewed by Barker (brought out of retirement for the occasion) for one last time and there wasn't a dry eye in the house as he walked off Centre Court for the final time.

Initial court capacity: 13,589 / Current court capacity: 14,974

NO.1 COURT (1997): THE THOROUGHLY MODERN ARENA

- Debuted in June 1997, The Championships' first truly modern construct unofficially kicked off before The Championships with an edition of BBC TV's religious Sunday singalong programme, Songs of Praise.

- The court was then officially opened on Monday 23 June with a ceremony, as Ball Boys and Ball Girls paraded the flags of the 58 nations competing at the event.
- Much like Centre Court it was four storeys high but was sunk into the hillside, ensuring the roofline was no higher than the older court and underlining its status as the 'younger sibling'.
- In 1999 the court made history, being the only time that two singles semi-finals were played on No.1 Court. Unusually, the matches featured future married couple Steffi Graf and Andre Agassi.
- In 2005, 17-year-old Andy Murray, making his main draw debut in a Grand Slam, had a breakthrough win on No.1 Court, beating No.14 seed Radek Stepanek in straight sets in the second round.
- One of the stadium's most memorable contests took place in the fourth round in 2017 when Spain's Rafael Nadal lost to Luxembourg's Gilles Muller. Nadal had come from two sets down only to lose 15-13 in a nail-biting final set. The match is also famous for the fact that Nadal banged his head quite emphatically in a doorway when about to arrive on court. The Spanish champion had misjudged the frame height when jumping to warm up, but cameras caught the moment and the fact that both players seemed to find it highly amusing!
- The new No.1 Court roof project was more complex in both size and scale than the Centre Court one, but working to the same three-year build timeframe. The works plan included a new retractable roof; wider and more comfortable spectator seating in addition to two more rows of approximately 900 seats and larger big screen for The Hill.
- By 2018, No.1 Court had a completed fixed roof and a spectator capacity of 11,393. On an average day, there were 750 people working on the No.1 Court roof and more than 4,000 people have been involved in the project overall. The capacity increased again in 2019.
- On Sunday 19 May 2019, the All England Club hosted 'A No.1 Court Celebration' in support of the Wimbledon Foundation, a special exhibition of live tennis in front of a capacity crowd and designed to test the new roof and air management system. The proceeds of the event were donated to the Wimbledon Foundation, the official charity of the Club and The Championships.
- In 2019 The Championships unveiled the first 'living walls' on the side of No.1 Court, horizontally flanking the main viewing screen for The Hill. Head Gardener Martyn Falconer oversaw the project which involved 15 different plants and which took its inspiration from physics imagery, as a wave pattern represents the relationship between momentum and speed. Working with Chichester-based company Biotecture for 14 months, the 250 square metres of wall were designed to fit with The Championships' English garden party feel.
- At The Championships 2019, 15-year-old qualifier Coco Gauff announced herself as a future star when she defeated five-time ladies' singles champion Venus Williams in their first round match on No.1 Court.
- In 2021, the Ladies' Wheelchair Singles final between Diede de Groot and Kgothatso Montjane became the first wheelchair tennis match to be played on No.1 Court.

NO.1 COURT (1924 ORIGINAL): THE ODDITY

- This much-loved Wimbledon Show Court opened in 1924, as a largely three-sided add-on to Centre Court's classic structure, with very much its own sense of drama and personality.
- Due to the sizeable job of getting Centre Court ready for the new Ground's opening in 1922, this – the second largest stadium court – did not open until two years later, with a capacity of 3,250.
- A little-known fact about No.1 Court is that it was initially intended to be a hard court, to be used for the new British Hardcourt Championships. However, when it was instead decided that Torquay would host that tournament, No.1 Court became a grass court after all.
- With the eastern side bordering Centre Court – there were just five rows of bench seating running alongside a gangway – it was essentially a three-sided architectural oddity, with one very large 'slab' of a stand on the west side – completely exposed to the notorious SW19 elements.
- A standing area was added in 1933, further increasing its capacity.
- After the Second World War, in the summer of 1945, No.1 Court was used as the venue for various tournaments involving servicemen.
- 1958 saw the tradition of only playing the gentlemen's singles semi-finals on Centre Court broken as bad weather necessitated the use of No.1 Court for the first time, hosting the battle between Neale Fraser and Kurt Nielsen.
- Both Chris Evert (against Val Ziegenfuss in 1972) and Martina Navratilova (against Christine Janes (Truman) in 1973) made their debuts on No.1 Court.
- Nineteen-year-old double champion Boris Becker's first defeat (he had retired in 1984 through injury) in SW19 came against an inspired Peter Doohan on this court in 1987. The 26-year-old Australian outplayed Becker over four sets leading to the champion's famously humble and candid press conference in which he praised his vanquisher and gave some sporting perspective in observing that: "Nobody died. I lost a tennis match."
- The gentlemen's doubles final was held on the court in 1992, when it ran over to the third Monday. The marathon match, played in front of a large and vocal crowd, saw John McEnroe, in his last professional match at Wimbledon, win 19-17 in the fifth set with his partner Michael Stich.
- The strange old court stayed in place until 1996, when the demolition process started, as its position was taken by the new media centre.
- No.1 Court never did get its fourth side, as the new No.1 would be a thoroughly modern elliptical bowl.

NO.2 COURT (2009): SUNKEN TREASURE

- This unique, modern, almost sunken, arena was built on the previous site of Court 13 – which never (at the time of writing) reappeared. Neil Stubley explains that the court layouts on the northern side of Centre Court “always start with Court 14” and so the absence of a Court 13 is due to that and – somewhat disappointingly! – not due to a superstitious decision...
- The south-eastern end of the Grounds is steeped in Wimbledon history, with its tightly packed walkways and bristling tension. Down where the old ivy-clad water tower sat was where this sunken stadium was placed – far from its elder Show Court siblings but full of its own character and ambience.
- The Duke of Kent, accompanied by Club Chairman Tim Phillips formally opened the new No.2 Court on the first Monday in 2009.
- The court garnered a reputation for lengthy five-set men’s matches in 2014 when it hosted two such battles in succession. First up was the Australian wild card Nick Kyrgios, who saved an incredible nine match points in his defeat of the French No.13 seed Richard Gasquet. Kyrgios would raise the bar even higher days later when he knocked out the No.2 seed, Rafael Nadal, on Centre Court. After the Kyrgios nail-biter another marathon followed as France’s Jo-Wilfried Tsonga eventually outlasted America’s Sam Querrey, winning 14-12 in the final set.
- There was drama in 2017 when the German top seed Angelique Kerber, struggling for form on reaching No.1 in the world, lost another lengthy battle, against Spain’s Garbiñe Muguruza, who went on to lift the trophy.
- No.2 Court proved unlucky for Kerber again in 2019. Having won the title the previous year, her defence was ended in the second round by American lucky loser, Lauren Davis, who became just the sixth woman to reach the third round after losing in Qualifying.

NO.2 COURT (1923-2008): THE GRAVEYARD OF CHAMPIONS

- The new Grounds opened with only one ‘Show Court’, Centre Court, and a year later, in 1923, the back-to-back Courts No.2 and No.3 were added.
- Alan Little, the former Honorary Librarian of the Kenneth Ritchie Wimbledon Library, observed: “The court size was obviously the same, but the imposing stands made it feel hemmed in.”
- With limited end space it was almost entirely focused on the two large side stands, creating a truly unique ambience that was built for drama. Fans would make a beeline for its free seating and standing, knowing full well that most days would see a reluctant ‘top tenner’ or two dragged out for action as its reputation grew and grew as the ‘Graveyard of Champions’.

- ‘Gorgeous Gussie’ Moran shocked fans and delighted the media when she played at Wimbledon in 1949 wearing a shorter skirt over frilly, lace-trimmed knickers. There was no apparent athletic benefit as the American went down in the third round on No.2 Court to Great Britain’s Gem Hoahing who, at 4ft 9.5in, is the shortest player ever to compete at The Championships.

- A young Billie Jean Moffitt was first seen in SW19 on this court in 1961, when she was beaten in the second round by Yola Ramirez.

- The first big upset of modern times came in 1973 when Sandy Mayer knocked out No.1 seed Ilie Nastase in the fourth round. No.7 seed, and former champion, Arthur Ashe fell to little known Chris Kachel in 1979, the same year that John McEnroe, the No.2 seed, was dumped out in three comfortable sets by the late Tim Gullikson. He had defeated Gullikson’s brother, Tom, in the previous round.

- In 1984 the qualifier Ricardo Acunda took down sixth seed Pat Cash as the graveyard really started to fill up. Cash was one of the court’s more tortured victims as the former champion would also go down 12-10 in the fifth to Thierry Champion in the second round in 1991.

- American Anne White proved that it wasn’t all doom and gloom on the graveyard when, in 1985, she played in a stunning all-white ‘unitard’ in the first round against Pam Shriver. The skin-tight bodysuit was conjured up by the legendary tennis fashion designer Ted Tinling and has gone down in Wimbledon folklore.

The remarkable run of drama continued in the 1990s when second seed Michael Stich crashed out in straight sets in the first round to Bryan Shelton while veteran Guy Forget took down fifth-seeded Jim Courier in a five-set thriller.

- 1996 saw one of the court’s most unforgiving acts of cruelty, third-seeded Andre Agassi being dispatched in the first round by qualifier and world No.281 Doug Flach, prompting Agassi’s career free-fall for the next 18 months.

- Yevgeny Kafelnikov, ranked No.3, and Marcelo Rios, ranked No.2, both tumbled early here in 1997 and 1998.

- Serena Williams, who would go on to lift the Venus Rosewater Dish on seven occasions made her Wimbledon debut on the court in 1998, when she beat Italy’s Laura Golarsa on her way to reaching the third round.

- In 2002 Pete Sampras was drawn to play George Bastl in the second round in the claustrophobic arena. Although seeded only sixth for that year’s Wimbledon, Sampras came into the event as a bona fide legend, boasting 13 Grand Slam singles titles and hungry to add a final Wimbledon title. The tumultuous match saw Sampras lose in five tortured sets, terminating his Wimbledon career.

- Martina Navratilova caused a stir when she was given a wild card for the singles in 2004. The 47-year-old needed just 47 minutes, and lost only one game, in winning her first round match, before being beaten by Gisela Dulko in the next round.

- The court was also the occasional home to finals, hosting the ladies’ doubles showpiece events in both 1998 and 2004.

- Future champion Andy Murray made his first appearance at The Championships here in 2005 when he beat No.2 Court legend George Bastl.

- As the end of its theatrical life neared, the old court staged the then-longest match ever played at The Championships as a 2006 quarter-final of the gentlemen's doubles ran to over six hours. Mark Knowles (BAH) and Daniel Nestor (CAN) beat Simon Aspelin (SWE) and Todd Perry (AUS) 5-7 6-3 6-7 (5-7) 6-3 23-21, running over two days.

- In 2009 it became No.3 Court.

NO.3 COURT (1923-2008): THE LITTLE SISTER

- The graveyard's little sister was also opened in 1923 and was built from the same wood – all driven up from the former grounds near the railway tracks. It was renamed in 2009 but always had its own aura and ambience, with fans peering over from the top of the stadium next door.

- A first round match in 1964 between South Africa's Abe Segal and American Clark Graebner has gone down in Wimbledon legend. The combination of hot weather, the annual umpires and line judges Championships' cocktail party and a sleepy official is reported in the Year-by-Year accounts.

- In 1982 the court was used for a Championship final as the mixed doubles title went to Kevin Curren and Anne Smith, defeating John Lloyd and Wendy Turnbull.

- 1995 was a strange year in that, after 118 years of it not happening, three players were defaulted from The Championships. Joining Tim Henman and Jeff Tarango was America's Murphy Jensen, as No.3 Court took its own chapter in the story. Jensen failed to show up for a mixed doubles match with his partner Brenda Schultz-McCarthy, who was left waiting by the side of the court with their opponents Kelly Jones and Katrina Adams. The chair umpire Roland Herfel waited the required 15 minutes and then ruled the match a default. Jensen later surfaced, explained that he had been on a fishing trip and apologised for his indiscretion.

NO.3 (2009): NEW, BUT OLD

- The new No.3 Court was opened in 2011, on the site of the old No.2 Court, accommodating nearly 2,000 spectators.

- The Championships 2012 saw Yaroslava Shvedova zip through 24 consecutive points, winning a 'golden set' 6-0 against Sara Errani in the first round.

- In one of Wimbledon's more incredible moments, Nicolas Mahut and John Isner were thrown together again in 2011 for a second successive first round encounter, following on from their 2010 epic. Despite calls from some players to put the match on Centre Court, in recognition of the match from the previous year, it was played on No.3. The news was announced just as the pair were about to unveil a courtside plaque to celebrate the previous year's historic events. Isner would once again go through, this time in straight sets and requiring nine hours, or 149 games less, court time.

- 2019 saw a major upset on No.3 Court, when qualifier Beatriz Haddad Maia defeated 2017 champion Garbiñe Muguruza in the first round of the ladies' singles.

- Everyone remembers the remarkable 2019 gentlemen's singles final in which Novak Djokovic defeated Roger Federer in the first-ever deciding tie-break in a singles match at The Championships. But the only other singles match to reach a 12-12 deciding set tie-break before the rules were changed in 2022 was the 2021 first round match, played on No.3 Court, in which Oscar Otte beat Arthur Rinderknech 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-7 (5-7), 13-12 (7-2).

THE OCTUPLE: COURTS 4-11

- Stability has always been the main influence when it comes to the Wimbledon lawns, but it is especially true of Courts 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11. This 'octuple' of courts is almost 100 years old and serves as a veritable model of stability to the modern arenas that have been laid around them. Neil Stubley explains that these are essentially the original courts, from the first Championships on this site in 1922. They were built from a base of ash, from the spent energy of coal mines, rather than the concrete base we see now. These older courts are stable and more predictable in their behaviour, unlike the newer courts, which can be harder to forecast. Their history reflects that of The Championships themselves, dating back to the original move from Nursery Lane.

- Court 4, to the south-west of Centre, was the only one of the eight which was built as a 'pallet court', created in one-metre square frames off-site, where they are matured and brought up to speed with the rest of the playing surfaces. The new Court 7 used to be Court 5 and that's why we're calling it The Rocket Launcher, in recognition of it launching the career of one of the sport's most popular and enduring figures. To have won the fabled Grand Slam in singles once is an achievement – only three women and two men have done it – but to do it twice puts you at the very top of the tree. This is what was achieved by the Australian Rod 'Rocket' Laver in 1962 and again in 1969. It was here in the reasonably unheralded surroundings of Court 5 that a 17-year-old Laver first strode out on to Wimbledon's lawns in 1956, as he was defeated by the Italian Orlando Sirola. It would be a further five years (and two lost finals) before Laver finally lifted the trophy.

- The number 6 is seen to represent a completeness and it fits that Court 6's positioning to the south of Centre Court, as originally laid out in 1922, has remained the same ever since: third in the line of four that stretches west to east in front of the Clubhouse facade. In 1957 Brazil's Maria de Amorim was beaten here by the Dutch player Berna Thung in the second round of the ladies' singles. Her defeat came after she had served 17 consecutive double faults. Trey Waltke of the United States arrived on this very court in vintage attire – sporting long white flannels (trousers), with a necktie used as a belt and a white button-down long-sleeved shirt. This was notable as it occurred in 1983! It worked wonders as he beat former champion Stan Smith in that match, but he couldn't repeat the trick against Ivan Lendl in the next round. A little-known fact is that both Roger Federer (first round, 1999 v Jiri Novak) and Rafael Nadal (first round, 2003 v Mario Ancic) made their main draw debuts on the court at the age of 17.

- Court 7, then known as Court 5, could be seen as 'Nature's Court', after its role in the story of 2007. That year the event was often interrupted by rain, but the drizzle also brought a famous incident writ large in Wimbledon's history. The rain breaks brought the repeat arrival of a family of four ducks, who were eventually encouraged to leave by a Club official. No doubt alarmed by the intervention, the mother flew off, leaving her bemused ducklings behind. The female mallard eventually returned and was reunited with her little ones on their natural habitat, the golf course opposite.

- Court 8 was where the 18-year-old John McEnroe took his SW19 bow against Egypt's Ismail El Shafei in 1977. In sartorial firsts, Court 10 court saw Britain's Brame Hillyard become the first man to play wearing shorts.

- When the Olympics returned to London in 2012, after a 64-year absence, tennis had been returned to the schedule. Court 11 had the most high-profile week in its history when it hosted a number of important matches, as famed players including Grigor Dimitrov, Simona Halep, Richard Gasquet, David Ferrer and Feliciano Lopez all competed here.

COURT 12: THE COURT THAT CAME BACK

- Like Court 4, this is another pallet court, setting it aside from the others in the area. After an eight-year absence (from 2001) the court number came back to The Championships in 2009. It took its familiar old spot in the south of the Grounds, taking its place as a favourite semi-hidden corner for many fans.

- In 2019, Jo-Wilfried Tsonga's first round win over Bernard Tomic attracted interest, not for the one-sided scoreline of 6-2, 6-1, 6-4, but for the fact that the match was completed in just 58 minutes.

- The first final set tie-break ever seen at The Championships took place on Court 12 on 9 July 2019 in a gentlemen's doubles third round match. Henri Kontinen and John Peers defeated Rajeev Ram and Joe Salisbury 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 3-6, 4-6, 13-12 (7-2).

- 2019 also saw the introduction of Quad Wheelchair events, with Dylan Alcott defeating Andy Lapthorne in the inaugural singles final on Court 12.

COURT 13: THE HOT-BLOODED ARENA

• It would only be fitting that the 13th court should have experienced one of The Championships' most fiery incidents. 1995 was the year of the default at Wimbledon and Court 13 hosted the most hot-blooded of them all. American Jeff Tarango, who had been playing in the doubles match in which Tim Henman had been defaulted four days previously, was playing a third round singles tie against Alexander Mronz and he was none too happy with the umpire, nor the crowd. After telling the vociferous fans his innermost thoughts he then excoriated the umpire Bruno Rebeuh after numerous overrules against him and he finally stormed off court, stating, "I'm not playing anymore!", thereby forfeiting the match. The unlucky court was replaced in 2007 by the new No.2 Court and has not been seen since.

COURT 14: THE NORTHERN QUARTER

• 1980 saw a sizable change at Wimbledon as four new courts were brought into action to the north of Centre Court. They were numbered 14 to 17 and effectively returned the Centre Court to, if not the centre, certainly the most central position it had enjoyed since the move from Nursery Lane in 1922.

• The court had its own part in the incredible Boris Becker story of 1985 when it hosted the dramatic fourth round clash between the young German star and No.16 seed 'Gentleman Tim' Mayotte. The athletic, almost gymnastic Becker had been forced to retire the year before and the crowd held their breath when he took a mighty fall in the fourth set. He thankfully recovered and the rest, as they say, is history.

• In 1995, the year of the repeated default, Tim Henman became the first player to be disqualified from Wimbledon when playing in a doubles match with Jeremy Bates against America's Jeff Tarango and Sweden's Henrik Holm. Leading two sets to one, Henman whacked a ball in anger, accidentally hitting 16-year-old Ball Girl Caroline Hall in the head. The Championships Referee Alan Mills was called and Henman became the first-ever player to be defaulted out of Wimbledon.

• An early demonstration of wheelchair tennis was given on Court 14 by four of Britain's leading players in 2001. This was followed by the first Wheelchair Gentlemen's Doubles event, for four pairs, held on Courts 14 and 15 over the last Saturday and Sunday in 2005.

• Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II immediately became the arena's most famed spectator when she watched a junior tennis showcase here in 2010.

• If the introduction of final set tie-breaks was intended to bring an end to excessively long matches, it didn't entirely work in the case of the 2023 ladies' singles third round match between Lesia Tsurenko and Ana Bogdan. It was won by the latter, 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (20-18) in three hours and 40 minutes, making it the fourth longest ladies' match in Wimbledon history and just five minutes short of the longest. The 38-point deciding tie-break was the longest ever played in a women's match at The Championships.

COURT 15: PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT

• Eager star-spotters have been known to stay close to Court 15 later in the tournament – it was a favourite practice court for both Roger Federer and Rafael Nadal. The arena also found itself under the spotlight in 2006 when serial sartorial trailblazer Bethanie Mattek-Sands first revealed her signature look of knee-length white football socks. The timing was not coincidental as Mattek-Sands claimed the choice was a tribute to the 2006 World Cup – an event England were busy getting knocked out of.

• For Barbora Krejčíková, The Championships 2024 ended with her triumphantly holding the Rosewater Dish on Centre Court. However, 10 days earlier she had very nearly fallen at the very first hurdle, scraping a 7-6, 6-7, 7-5 victory over Veronika Kudermetova on the less heralded surroundings of Court 15.

• The previous year, another Czech, Marketa Vondroušová, also played Kudermetova on the same court, this time in the second round. Vondroušová also went on to win the title.

Initial court capacity: 318 / Current court capacity: 318

COURT 16: THE LONG & THE SHORT

• A 16-year-old Boris Becker made his first appearance at Wimbledon in 1984 as he comfortably defeated America's Blaine Willenborg.

• 1995 saw the longest-ever ladies' singles match as America's Chanda Rubin outlasted Canada's Patricia Hy-Boulais over three hours and 45 minutes. The second round encounter finished 17-15 in the deciding set.

• In the second round of the gentlemen's doubles in 2007, Marcelo Melo and Andre Sa of Brazil beat Paul Hanley, of Australia, and Kevin Ullyett, of Zimbabwe, eventually winning 28-26 in the (then) longest-ever fifth set played at The Championships. It was the highest number of games ever played in the event at 102, as the rain-affected match was played over four days and lasted five hours and 58 minutes.

• As well as the longest ladies' match the lawns also hosted the shortest encounter, in 2012. Italy's Sara Errani was leading Coco Vandeweghe of the United States 6-1, 5-3 with an advantage point on Vandeweghe's serve when play was stopped due to bad light. After warming up the next day Vandeweghe stepped up and hit a double fault, ending the action in under two minutes.

COURT 17: THE COURT WITH CACHET

- Its situation at the closest point to the main entrance has always given this popular little arena a certain appeal all of its own, as has its groundbreaking place in the history of grass court wheelchair tennis.
- A heatwave hit in 2015, causing a Ball Boy to collapse on this court, requiring medical attention, as St John Ambulance also treated 170 spectators for heat-related conditions.
- An interesting local story developed in 2016 when British qualifier Marcus Willis defied his world ranking of No.772, as he dragged himself through pre-Qualifying, then actual Qualifying and all the way to the main draw. He beat Ricardas Berankis, a Lithuanian player ranked more than 700 places above him, to riotous scenes on Court 17. The draw also relished the excitement, pitching him into a second round match against Roger Federer under the roof on Centre Court. Willis won a respectable seven games and hit an audacious lob over the serial champion, which was voted shot of the tournament on the BBC.
- In 2016 Gordon Reid played here in the first-ever Wheelchair Singles event, watched from the balcony above by the Duchess of Cambridge (now the Princess of Wales). It was obviously an encouraging start as days later Reid became the first Wimbledon Gentlemen's Wheelchair Singles Champion on the same court.
- In 2023, Court 17 witnessed the first ladies' singles match at The Championships to feature a tie-break in all three sets. Ekaterina Alexandrova defeated Madison Brengle 6-7 (4-7), 7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (9-7).

Initial court capacity: 180 / Current court capacity: 312

COURT 18: THE EPIC ARENA

- Some call it Wimbledon's best-kept secret, hidden away in a north-west corner, with its largely two-sided structure and uniquely rambunctious atmosphere.
- It was opened in 1997 with a ladies' singles match between Irina Spirlea and Henrieta Nagyova, taking its place as another Show Court.
- The Broadcast Centre roof sits above the stand to the south, meaning numerous television interviews and features are filmed here – fans looking for a celebrity appearance above the court are rarely disappointed.
- In 2003 the American Robby Ginepri proudly became the first man to wear a sleeveless shirt in SW19 when he played Arnaud Clement in a lengthy five-setter in the first round.
- Home to the most memorable match of the tournament – possibly any tennis tournament in history – when the giant American John Isner stepped out to play the French doubles specialist Nicolas Mahut in the first round in 2010. The marathon gentlemen's singles first round encounter played out over three days (from Tuesday to Thursday), produced a total of 183 games and lasted for 11 hours, and five minutes, eventually being won by Isner. The fifth set alone – 70–68 – took eight hours and 10 minutes, and was longer than the previous longest entire match. In terms of length of time and the number of games, it was the all-time record for the game of lawn tennis.

- In 2021, Court 18 hosted a seemingly unremarkable first round ladies' singles match between British wild card Emma Raducanu and qualifier Vitalia Diatchenko. By the following week, Raducanu would be a household name, having reached the fourth round. Two months after that she would win the US Open, becoming the first qualifier to win a Grand Slam title.

Initial court capacity: 788 / Current court capacity: 782

COURT 19: THE COURT THAT WASN'T

- A former rugby field back in Wimbledon's past, this was the arena that was, then wasn't.
- The first match played was not even in the main draw, when a delayed qualifying match in the gentlemen's doubles was played here.
- On Friday 8 July 2016 this interesting 'mini arena' was used as a court for the last time. It was entirely reborn in 2018 as the Walled Garden Food Market, serving classic British allotment salads as well as 'grill and world food' options.
- The design is noteworthy from a horticultural point of view, with mature plants brought in for The Championships.

HOW IT WORKS

The roof is a type of folding fabric concertina, which allows it to be folded into a very compressed area when not in use.

The fabric used (Tenara) is a special waterproof structural material that is very strong, highly flexible and, at 40 percent translucent, is not transparent for players/spectators but will let in natural light. Around 5,200 square metres of fabric was used. A key element of the design allows natural light to reach the grass – brought about by re-contouring the fixed roof.

An airflow system removes condensation from within the bowl to provide good court surface conditions conducive to the playing of tennis when the roof is closed.

The roof is divided into two sections, with a total of nine bays of tensioned fabric – four bays in one section and five in the other. Each of the nine bays of tensioned fabric is clamped on either side to prismatic steel trusses. There are 10 trusses spanning approximately 77 metres across the court. Ends of each truss are supported by a set of bogies that move along parallel tracks positioned at either side within the new ‘fixed’ roof.

In preparation for closing the roof, one section is parked in its folded state at the north end of the court while the other is parked at the south end. The coordinated electro mechanical movement moves the trusses apart and, at the same time, unfolds and stretches out the fabric between the trusses over the court until the two sections meet in an overlapping seam above the middle of the court.

The arch shape to the tops of the trusses helps the structure to withstand their own dead weight and loading from elements such as snow and wind when the roof is stretched and closed over the court. The roof has been designed to close in a maximum of 10 minutes. If the roof is being closed for rain, court covers will protect the grass in the usual way while closure is in progress. After the roof has been closed, play can resume after a period of around 30 minutes, depending on climatic conditions.

ROOF AWARD

In July 2009 the Centre Court roof won an Award at the Annual Structural Steel Design Awards, which celebrate high standards of structural and architectural design attainable in the use of steel. The judges commented: “The 1,000 tonne retractable roof uses structural steel to its full advantages, with skilful marriage of heavy precision engineering and state-of-the-art technology, to achieve the all-weather operations so long desired.”

“Please Keep Off The Grass”: The Memorable Invasions of Centre Court

From bumblebees to pied wagtails (repeat offenders), schoolgirls to fake Presidents, the vintage-clad to the barely covered, the famous arena has seen its fair share of non-tennis incident over the last hundred or so years. Here are some of the more memorable moments...

1. In 1949 the match between Hans van Swol (Netherlands) and Bobby Abdessalam (France) was held up for a short period when a squirrel appeared on the court. The Ball Boys jumped into action and chased the little imposter away.
2. During the 1957 gentlemen's doubles final, Helen Jarvis invaded the court, shouting and waving a banner in support of her campaign for a new world banking system, called the 'Life, Love, and Sex Appeal Party'. The message on the banner began with the words 'God Save Our Queen' and the rather polite intruder also wore a white hat and flat white shoes so as not to damage the grass. Her Majesty The Queen watched from the Royal Box as the referee and a policeman escorted her off.
3. Britain's Roger Taylor and Sweden's Bjorn Borg were both popular with the female fans, a point proved at the conclusion of their 1973 encounter when schoolgirls ran on to the court and asked Borg for his autograph. After the police cleared the court, the groundstaff straightened out the turf and made sure there were no heel marks. In a similar vein, 70s crowd favourite Ilie Nastase of Romania obligingly supplied a young girl with an autograph when she ran on to court during his 1974 match against the Czechoslovakian Jiri Hrebec.
4. The 1976 match between Americans Jimmy Connors and Stan Smith was interrupted by promoters pushing a pop concert, with Connors being handed a single rose.
5. A 1981 ladies' doubles match became heated when play was halted at 9.35 p.m. due to bad light, with the score poised at 5-5 in the final set. The contest was between Sue Barker (GB) and her partner Ann Kiyomura (USA) and JoAnne Russell (USA) and Virginia Ruzici (Romania). Boos and jeers rained down, swiftly followed by cushions, programmes and other objects.

6. As Americans Pam Shriver and Kathy Rinaldi battled it out in 1982, a swarm of bees descended on the grass. Shriver, renowned for her volleying skills, swatted them with her racket but Rinaldi was stung on the arm. The sting was subsequently removed by her considerate opponent.

7. The flying interlopers went up a grade in 1989 when, during the gentlemen's singles semi-final between Sweden's Stefan Edberg and the United States' John McEnroe, two sparrows disturbed the play.

8. A year later and another species of bird marked what would become recurrent visits to The Championships 1990 with a first appearance during the match between Germany's Boris Becker and Brad Gilbert of the USA. The pied wagtail clearly enjoyed its time in the legendary arena, returning for some semi-final action with Steffi Graf v Zina Garrison and then Ivan Lendl v Stefan Edberg.

9. 1991 boasted one of the most unusual interruptions when, at the start of the second set of the final between the German rivals Boris Becker and Michael Stich, a protester claiming to be the American President and brandishing a picture of his daughter briefly disturbed play. He was not George H.W. Bush and he was quickly removed.

10. 1996 had been a sodden Championships and the crowd were in need of levity. Immediately before the gentlemen's singles final between Richard Krajicek (Netherlands) and MaliVai Washington (USA) this was provided by a female streaker – and sometime member of the catering corps – who dashed across the lawn in just her pinny. The Club later joined in the fun when it issued a statement regarding the incident: "Whilst we do not wish to condone the practice, it did at least provide some light amusement for our loyal and patient supporters, who have had a trying time during the recent bad weather."

11. A mouse interrupted play in a 1998 match between Russia's Yevgeny Kafelnikov and Mark Philippoussis of Australia.

12. The avian threat returned, in fuller force, in 1999 when a group of pigeons twice interrupted play during the singles match between Boris Becker and his compatriot Nicolas Pietrangeli. The rowdy flock disturbed both Becker's service and his opponent's concentration.

13. Later that same year a single pigeon gatecrashed the gentlemen's singles semi-final match between the United States' Pete Sampras and Britain's Tim Henman, causing the latter to lose his concentration while serving. It is not known if he was part of the previous squadron.

14. Henman was once again the victim of disturbance in 2002 when, just prior to his match against the Australian Scott Draper, two pranksters, dressed in whites and carrying rackets, climbed over the barrier and began knocking a ball to and fro over the net. A security guard intervention forced the pair off court via the nearest exit.

15. After the female trailblazer in 1996, a male streaker took his turn at naked invasion when he danced onto the lawn during the 2002 gentlemen's singles final between Australia's Lleyton Hewitt and David Nalbandian from Argentina.

16. The pigeons returned in 2006, interrupting a singles match between France's Julien Benneteau and Britain's Andy Murray.

17. The streaking reached epidemic levels in 2006 when, during the second set of the match between the Russian pair of Elena Dementieva and Maria Sharapova, a male streaker once again invaded the court.

18. In the same year the match between Croatia's Mario Ancic and Switzerland's Roger Federer was used as a protest platform by the 'Real Fathers for Justice' group. Carrying tennis rackets they managed to hit a ball over the net before being escorted away.

19. The flying ant storms of 2017 have gone down in Wimbledon folklore, as Wednesday 5 July was endlessly interrupted by the eusocial insects, on court and in the stands.

No.1 Court Retractable Roof

Commencing in 2016, the No.1 Court Project was a highly complex three-year build which completed in May 2019. In addition to a new fixed and retractable roof, it delivered an increased capacity of 12,345; the replacement of all seats inside the stadium for improved spectator comfort; 15 refurbished hospitality suites and various back-of-house areas; a two-level Walled Garden public plaza; and a living wall either side of the Big Screen facing Aorangi Terrace.

A central consideration of the No.1 Court redesign was to ensure that the right shape of roof opening was created to maximise the natural light levels on the court to support the growth of the grass, while also trying to give a curved feel to the stadium to reflect the historic circular design of the No.1 Court.

The No.1 Court roof has 11 steel trusses, each weighing 100 tonnes; two more moving trusses than Centre Court due to the larger aperture. Moving each of them onto the No.1 Court required a 600-tonne crawler crane with 300 tonnes of counterweight.

In total, the retractable roof requires 164 drives and motors to move it. There are 200,000 bolts holding the steel structure together and a further 4,500 anchors tying the steel structure to the existing concrete structure. 7500m² of fabric was procured for the roof assembly – enough to cover 38 tennis courts – and the entire project required an average of 80,000 man hours per month to complete.

Court Capacity

WORPLE ROAD

Figures showing the capacity of the Centre Court in the early days are not available. The first three permanent covered stands (A, B and C) were erected in 1884 and 1885 and these were considerably enlarged in 1906. In 1909 a new Stand B was constructed, giving an extra 600 seats, followed in 1913 by the provision of a new Stand C. In 1914 a major undertaking replaced Stand A and this increased the seating capacity of the court from 2,300 to 3,500, a figure unchanged when the ground was abandoned in 1921. The uncovered Stand D held approximately 600 spectators. Details of standing accommodation around the Centre Court over the years are not available. In 1919 an open stand was erected along one side of Court 4.

CHURCH ROAD

When the Centre Court was built in 1922 there were 9,989 seats and standing accommodation for 3,600. The number of seats remained fairly constant until 1979 when the roof was raised by one metre to provide an additional 1,088 seats, bringing the capacity up to 11,739. In 1985 the extension of the East Side Building added a further 800 seats to make the total 12,433. The replacement of the standing area by seating in 1990 gave the all-seater stadium a capacity of 13,107. The new roof provided in 1992 allowed the capacity to rise to 13,118. In 1999 the West Stand extension added over 728 seats. While in 2008 the further extension of the East-Side Building and six rows at the top of the stadium raised the capacity to 15,000. The original standing figure of 3,600 had gradually diminished by 1989 to 2,000.

When the old No.1 Court was opened in 1924 there were 2,500 seats and room for approximately 750 standing. Mainly due to major improvement schemes, which added 700 seats in 1929, 450 in 1939, 900 in 1955 and 1,250 in 1981, the seating capacity of the court increased to 6,508 when finally used in 1996. The present No.1 Court has a seating capacity of 12,345.

The original No.3 Court was opened in 1922 and No.2 Court a year later, when permanent stands held 1,000 and 1,900 seats respectively. In 1971 a permanent stand was constructed between the original Courts 6 and 7 and in 1997 a permanent stand was constructed beside Court 18. In 2009 the new No.2 Court provided a capacity of over 4,000 and No.2–11 Courts were renumbered No.3–12. In 2011 a new No.3 Court was opened, accommodating 1980 spectators. There was also a new Court 4, situated east of No.3 Court, which seated 170 people on the west side.

Around the Grounds

AORANGI PARK

The area north of the Centre Court became known as Aorangi Park after the Club purchased the 11 acres from John Barker Ltd. of Kensington in 1967 and subsequently granted a lease to the New Zealand Sports and Social Club. (Aorangi, meaning 'Cloud in the Sky', is the Maori name for Mount Cook.)

Each year during The Championships a small part of the land was set aside for car parking. In 1977 the Tea Lawn was extended into Aorangi Park and a year later the boundary of the original ground (North Road) was also extended northwards to line up with the Tea Lawn, so as to allow the construction of the new Debenture Holders' Lounge and four grass courts. These courts were commissioned in 1980 and numbered 14–17. Two years later Aorangi Park was repossessed and brought within the perimeter of the Grounds.

Sport was first played on the ground by the Argyle Athletic Association in 1906. The ground was used by John Barker Ltd when the Club took adjacent residence in 1922.

BROADCAST AND MEDIA AREAS

This is the 28th year for the world's leading broadcasters to use the purpose-built, 5,000 sq. metre Broadcast Centre, which was opened in 1997. The Championships 2025 will see 'Wimbledon Broadcast Services' utilise its state-of-the-art hub for content creation, transmission and distribution to produce the host broadcast, as well as host stunning presentation positions for broadcast partners to showcase the Grounds after the completion of the Media Pavilion Project in 2024.

There will be multi-camera coverage from all 18 Courts, produced from over 120 host cameras across the site. A combination of manned and robotic camera solutions will be utilised, with numbers of court-side cameras ranging from five on some outside courts to 29 on Centre Court. Each operation has dedicated replay and graphics facilities, a director with full audio and visual support, as well as world feed commentary from up to 11 courts at any one time. The robotic courts, world feed and media rooms have been upgraded this year to 1080pHDR which means Wimbledon will be the first Grand Slam to deliver all output in this format resolution.

DESIGN

The top floor of the Broadcast Centre, overlooking Courts 14–18, houses 15 permanent Broadcast Studios. The proximity of the presentation positions offers television a more intimate atmosphere and a feeling of being more closely involved with play. With the completion of the Media Pavilion, there are now three different roof levels, offering up to 26 'stand-up' presentation bays, from which rights holders can broadcast.

PRODUCTION AREAS

The two lower floors are dedicated to technical, production and editing rooms, much of the building digging deep into the hillside that used to overlook Aorangi Park.

MCR

At the heart of the Broadcast Centre sits the enlarged Master Control Room (MCR), which receives the vision and audio signals from the 18 televised courts, together with over 22 beauty camera feeds, and distributes them to all broadcasters both on and off site.

TELEVISION DISTRIBUTION

All 18 mixed court feeds, together with several unilateral feeds, are distributed to offsite broadcasters via dual/diverse fibre optic circuits. Satellite connectivity is also used to augment the fibre optic circuits.

CATERING

Feeding the broadcasters throughout the day and much of the night is an essential requirement and the restaurant is sited at the lowest level of the Broadcast Centre, taking up an extended underground area adjacent to Court 14.

PROJECT TEAM

The Broadcast Centre was designed by Building Design Partnership in consultation with the All England Club and the broadcasters and built by Try Construction Ltd. The refurbishment was managed by the AELTC's in-house Estates team, and the project undertaken by Overbury. The completed Media Development Project features a state-of-the-art Media Theatre and replaces the existing Press Interview Room located within the Millennium Building, which is also now under major refurbishment as part of a four-year project.

CAR PARKING

There are six official car parks currently used at The Championships, numbered 1, 4, 5, 6, 8 and 10. Car Parks 2, 3, 7 and 9 no longer exist. In 2022, The Championships' official transport service returned to the Somerset Road site, using the basement car parking space, alongside All England Club Members. Car Park 1 is to the west, with entrances on Somerset Road and Marryat Road, mainly for the Park and Ride and Wimbledon Station Shuttle services, as well as coach parking.

Car Park 4 is situated to the north, with an entrance on Somerset Road. Car Parks 5 (The Wimbledon Club), 6 and 8 (Wimbledon Parkland) are to the east, with entrances on Church Road and Home Park Road (Car Park 6), and Wimbledon Park Road (Car Park 8). Car Park 10 (Wimbledon Park) is to the north-east, with an entrance on Wimbledon Park Road. Car Parks 1, 5 and 8 are predominantly reserved parking. No.5 is primarily reserved for debenture and suite holders, while No.8 hosts staff. Car Parks 6 and 10 are largely pre-booked public car parks. Car Park 6 also has Blue Badge parking.

There is a Park and Ride service in operation at Morden Park, where car parking is £20 per car or minibus and £10 for fully electric vehicles, with no charge for the bus ride.

GARDENS

Each year the gardeners strive to bring the landscaping of the AELTC to an ever higher standard. The Club has an in-house gardening team which delivers and seeks ever more imaginative ways to enhance and complement the tennis site with thoughtful landscaping designs, flowering plants and planting schemes. The gardening team selects and plants a wide variety of shrubs, perennials and colourful annuals into many individual planting displays throughout the site. Traditional colour schemes cascade from window boxes and hanging baskets. The ivy that softens Centre Court, hedges and topiary are clipped with precision and a sea of purples, whites, blues and greens welcomes each and every visitor. The Club sources wherever possible from local and British growers and suppliers to create the Wimbledon look of 'Tennis in an English garden'.

GOLDEN POST BOX

In the aftermath of the London 2012 Olympics, Royal Mail painted more than 100 of its iconic and much-loved red post boxes gold to celebrate every Team GB and Paralympics GB gold medal won during the Games. Andy Murray triumphed in the tennis event staged at The All England Club, defeating Roger Federer to win gold, and to celebrate his achievement, the post box on Church Road at the southern end of the Grounds was painted gold, alongside the post box in his hometown of Dunblane. These post boxes will remain permanently gold to mark the achievements of the athletes and the historic Games.

INTERNATIONAL BOX

The International Box, situated in the North Open Stand of Centre Court, has some 85 seats reserved for representatives of international lawn tennis associations.

There is an International Box on both Centre Court and No.1 Court, with 85 and 22 seats respectively reserved for representatives of international lawn tennis associations, for each day of The Championships.

LANDMARKS

From 1931 until early in 2006 the wrought-iron Doherty Memorial Gates were situated at the main Church Road entrance to the ground. These were presented by the Rev. William Doherty in memory of his two younger brothers Laurie and Reggie, who dominated the game at the turn of the 20th century. The gates were moved to the southern end of the ground to allow new wider gates to be erected at the main entrance.

The steel roller, situated opposite the Museum building, played a significant part in Wimbledon's history for over 80 years. Bought from Cottis and Sons of Epping in 1899, it was first used at the Club's Worple Road ground, where it was pulled by a horse. In 1922, when the Club moved to the ground at Church Road, the roller came too and for two years did service on the Centre Court before moving to No.1 Court. The roller was taken out of service in 1986.

In 2007, the Water Tower, which had stood since 1922, was demolished as part of the Long Term Plan south of the Centre Court. Originally the Tower was connected by pipeline to the Wimbledon Park lake, east of the ground, but was seldom used due to technical difficulties.

The Fred Perry statue was unveiled in 1984 to commemorate the 50th Anniversary of the first of his three victories in the Gentlemen's Singles Championship. The sculptor was David Wynne. Until March 2005 the statue was situated at the south concourse entrance to the Tea Lawn, when it was relocated near to the entrance to Café Pergola to allow future modernization work to be carried out in the east side of the Centre Court. With works completed in March 2010, the statue was relocated to the north-east corner of Centre Court. The gates at the Somerset Road entrance to the ground were dedicated to Fred Perry in 1984.

The weather-vane, situated on the roof of the Café Pergola, was presented to the Club by Sir Brian Burnett to mark his retirement as Chairman, 1974–1983.

Five head and shoulder sculptures of the British Ladies' Singles Champions who won their titles at Church Road, Kathleen McKane/Godfree, Dorothy Round, Angela Mortimer, Ann Jones and Virginia Wade, are positioned at the entrance to the Clubhouse. They were unveiled by the players/relatives in April 2004. The sculptor was Ian Rank-Broadley.

The two cottages, No.133 and No.135 Somerset Road, located at the southern end of the Grounds next to the west boundary wall, were the only existing structures from when the Club purchased the land for the present ground in 1921 and, were the oldest landmarks. Built before the First World War as farm cottages, the buildings were used by the Club over the years to accommodate various staff but were demolished in 2009. A new building was constructed on the site to accommodate facilities for the groundstaff.

On 27 June 2016, a water sculpture called 'Alchemilla', by renowned sculptor William Pye, was unveiled by H.R.H. The Duke of Kent. The sculpture is located within the planted bank above Court 18. Alchemilla is made of green patinated bronze and is designed to enhance the Grounds and celebrate The Championships, as well as contribute to the 'tennis in an English garden' atmosphere at the AELTC. The sculpture holds about 280 litres of water, delivering one litre every second from each spout. The surrounding landscape contains three types of English stone – a Purbeck stone wall, York stone for the paving and green tiles under the piece from Broughton Moor, Cumbria.

In April 2023, The Serving Ace Meeting Tree, a 1.64 tonne sculpture by artist Mark Reed, was installed on the corner of No.1 Court, close to Gate 1. The artist's vision for the sculpture was born out of his study of players serving at The Championships – this movement can be seen within the body of the tree.

ROYAL BOX

There has been a Royal Box at the south end of the Centre Court since the opening of the Grounds in 1922. In 2002 the Royal Box was rebuilt as part of the work carried out on the Clubhouse and south end of Centre Court. At the old Ground at Worple Road a Royal Box did not exist but when royalty attended the Committee Box was converted for the occasion.

The Royal Box, which normally seats around 80 people, is used for the entertainment of guests from the Royal Family, the tennis world, including supporters of British tennis, individuals of distinction and others who in various ways contribute to the betterment of our lives and society. Invitations come from the Chair of the Club and the Committee of Management. Guests are invited to lunch as well as tea and drinks at the end of the day, which take place within the Clubhouse. Dress is smart with lounge suit/blazer and tie for gentlemen and afternoon dress or elegant trouser suit for ladies.

H.R.H. The Princess of Wales is the Club's Patron.

TELEVISION SCREEN

In 2018, the Large Screen TV overlooking Aorangi Terrace almost doubled in size to 18m x 6m, utilising higher resolution video blocks, which were also used on scoreboards and Match Information Boards around the Grounds. There are seats for 255 people in addition to the informal terrace viewing area. In 2019, the Large Screen was framed by a 'Living Wall' incorporated into the refurbished No.1 Court.

In 2023, a second, smaller Large Screen TV was introduced as part of the Southern Village facilities south of Court 12, with deckchair seating for 75 people.

WHEELCHAIR SPACES

On Centre Court there are 20 wheelchair spaces in the Upper Level, 10 spaces in the North East Corner at Courtside, and three spaces at the southern end of the court, with a total of 33 seats for accompanying Guests. There are 40 wheelchair spaces on Level 2 of No.1 Court, together with 40 seats for accompanying Guests. On No.2 Court, 20 wheelchair spaces, together with 20 seats for accompanying Guests, are available at the southern end of the court, and on No.3 Court, there are 10 wheelchair spaces, together with 10 seats for accompanying Guests available. There are also unreserved areas for a small number of wheelchairs by the side of all outside courts and a designated area on Aorangi Terrace. WIMBLEDON LAWN TENNIS MUSEUM

Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum is located underneath the Wimbledon Shop next to Gate 4 and also houses the Kenneth Ritchie Wimbledon Library. The Museum is open most days throughout the year from 10am–5pm (October to March), 10am – 5:30pm (April to September) and during The Championships (for ticket holders only) from 10am to 10pm.

The Museum is open free of charge to ticket holders during The Championships.

For more information on the Museum and Library, please see their respective entries in Section VIII – The All England Club.

TOURS OF THE GROUNDS

Tours were first introduced for private groups in the spring of 2000 and immediately proved very popular. They became available to the general public in late summer 2001 and the following year the tours were awarded a Gold Award as Best New Tourist Attraction from Visit London. In the early years, tours only ran in the summer, but demand was such that in 2006, they were offered year-round, except for the period during and around The Championships. Under normal circumstances, there are three public tours a day in the winter, rising to twelve tours a day in the summer. In 2024, the Tour received a Gold accolade from Visit England.

In 2022 a new Museum and Tours Manager, Briony Lammas, joined the Heritage team to re-open the operation after the closure during the Covid-19 pandemic. Tours successfully resumed in April 2022, Thursday to Sunday, increasing to seven days a week after The Championships 2022.

The tours are led by professionally qualified London Blue Badge Guides, guaranteeing a consistently high-quality experience for the more than 80,000 visitors who take the tours each year. The linguistic skills of the guides also mean that the tours can be provided for prebooked groups in 14 languages. Tours include key landmarks around the Grounds, such as Centre Court, The Hill and Court 18.

Guests visiting the Museum or attending a tour can also visit the Wimbledon Shop, which sells a wide range of Wimbledon leisurewear, gifts, souvenirs and books. The Wingfield Cafe is available to visitors for refreshments throughout the year, excluding The Championships and the fortnight prior to the tournament.

In late June 2023, special VIP tours ran in the build-up to The Championships for the first time. After continued success in 2024, the initiative will run again in 2025 during practice week. These unique tours last for up to two hours and are also led by professional Blue Badge Guides along with a member of the Museum and Tours team. The Grounds are closed to the general public during this time and these small group tours allow pre-booked guests the chance to see the All England Club preparing to look its very best for The Championships.

During the Championships, the Museum is open from 10am to 10pm and is free of charge to all Championships ticket holders. Throughout the rest of the year the Museum is open every day from 10am to 5:30pm (April to September) and 10am to 5pm (October to March) with the exception of the following days: closed the Saturday and Sunday immediately prior to The Championships, Monday to Friday of the week immediately after The Championships (unless there is play), Christmas Eve, Christmas Day, Boxing Day and New Year's Day.

Further details of opening times and tour bookings are obtainable on 020 8946 6131, museum@aeltc.com or www.wimbledon.com/museum.

Estate Development

LONG TERM PLAN, 1993–2011

In March 1993 The Committee of Management of The Championships unveiled its Long Term Plan to take Wimbledon into the 21st century, the most ambitious facility improvement programme undertaken since the AELTC's move to Church Road in 1922. The objective was to upgrade all facilities to maintain The Championships' position as the world's premier tennis tournament and to achieve this within the existing Grounds, without acquiring additional land or moving location.

Untangling the existing maze of routes was achieved by driving two broad pathways north and south, linked by concourses into a ladder pattern. A new No.1 Court, seating 11,000 spectators, was sited to the northern edge of the layout and a new No.2 Court was planned at the extreme south. Spectator seats would then be evenly spread over the Grounds rather than concentrated in the middle.

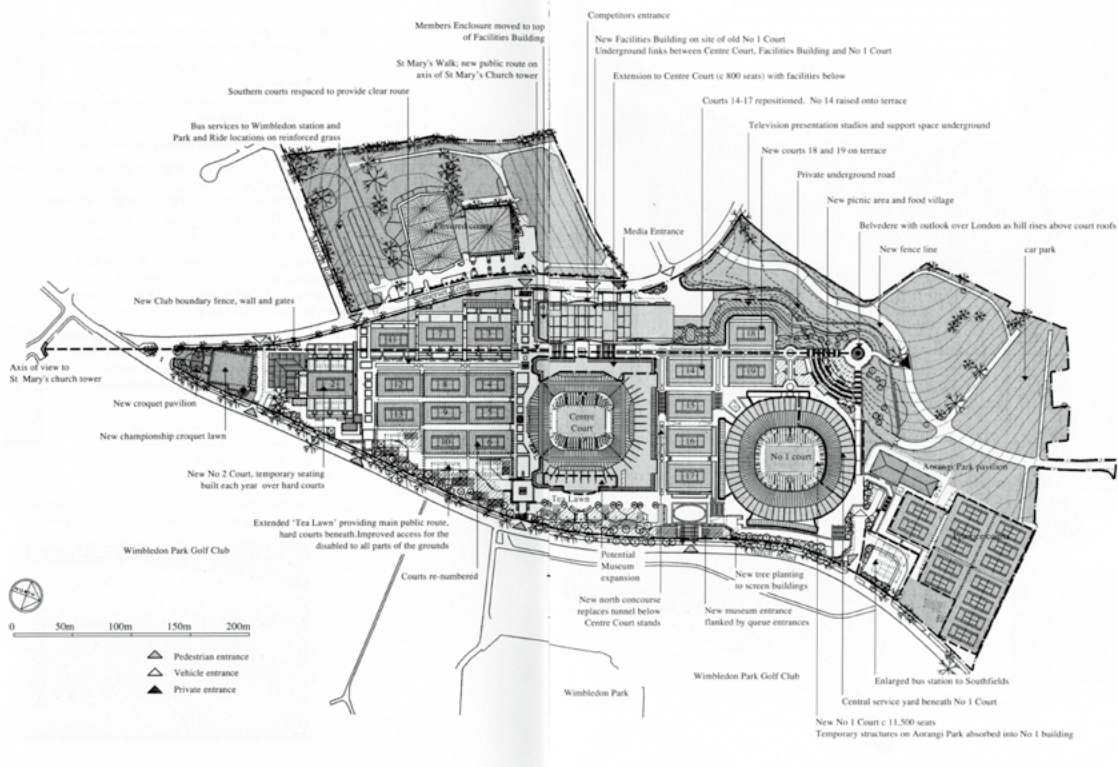

Secondly, the site was arranged to work like a theatre with a 'front and back of house'. The re-developed Wimbledon would concentrate visitor access on the east side, and 'backstage' access to the west. The character of Wimbledon was conserved and enhanced by re-establishing Centre Court as the focal point; a 'country house' in its garden and parkland setting. The considerable amount of new buildings were blended into the landscape as 'outbuildings'.

The new No.1 Court was an updating of the proven design of Centre Court, circular in plan and providing good sightlines, lighting, ventilation and acoustics for players and spectators alike. To maintain its status as the 'younger brother' to Centre Court, the new stadium is countersunk into the hillside and surrounded by terraces of restaurants, hospitality, retail and service spaces.

TIMING

STAGE 1

The initial development comprised construction of the new No.1 Court, offering a multitude of facilities; a new, largely underground Broadcast Centre; a road tunnel linking Somerset Road with Church Road; two new Courts 18 and 19, cut into the hillside to give flexibility

Above: A map showcasing the Club's 1993 Long Term Plan, which included the proposed construction of a new No.1 Court for other courts to be moved; and a new Championships Entrance Building in Church Road. Work commenced on 25 July 1994 and was completed just prior to The Championships 1997.

STAGE 2

This stage of the development comprised the construction of a new Facilities Building, on the site of the old No.1 Court, to provide dining and rest areas for competitors Members, press and photographers, officials, stewards and Ball Boys/Girls, together with press writing and interview rooms; the extension of the West Stand of the Centre Court to provide 750 additional spectator seats, commentary boxes, competitors' changing facilities and public toilets; the re-siting of Courts 14-17 to improve crowd circulation during The Championships; landscaping to include competitors' and Members' lawns, a new access road from Somerset Road serving competitors and press entrances and a brick/railing boundary along Somerset Road. Preliminary work commenced after The Championships 1996. The main construction began in the spring of 1997 and was completed by The Championships 2000.

STAGE 2C

This stage of the development, which comprised the construction of a new Museum Building, housing office accommodation for Club staff, the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum and Library, Barclays Bank, Ticket Office and incorporating the Turnstile Entrance to the ground at Gate 3, commenced immediately after The Championships 2003. This was fitted out and occupied by the end of 2005, and the new Museum opened in April 2006. This left the Centre Court east side empty and facilitated the development plans of the future, including raising the capacity from 13,800 to 15,000, better facilities for the public and Debenture Holders, and a retractable roof over the court. The programme was completed for The Championships 2009.

STAGE 3

The next phase of the programme focused on the southern end of the Grounds. This consisted of the construction of a new 2,000-seat No.3 Court (old No.2), a new Court 4 (old No.3), the provision of a single-storey facilities building, a two-storey office and workplace accommodation for groundstaff and a single-storey maintenance workshop linked to a new lavatory block. Also, three new HAR TRU courts were laid down and the Somerset Road boundary wall completed. This secured a five-metre plus walkway between the two new grass courts.

The programme commenced in July 2009 and was completed in May 2011. In the first year, the foundations and the build of the basic structures took place. The two new grass courts were constructed, and soil put down. The three hard courts were ready for play just after The Championships 2010. During the second year of construction the fitting out of the buildings was completed and the new No.3 Court and Court 4 came into play for The Championships 2011. In addition to the above works, in the second year the Club commissioned the design and construction of two new balcony terraces at the south-west and south-east corners of No.1 Court for Debenture Holders, which were delivered in time for The Championships 2011.

CONSTRUCTION

Excavations for the new No.1 Court saw more than 100,000 cubic metres of clay removed from site. The concrete frame structure for the new No.1 Court was commenced early in 1995.

1995-1996

The playing area of the new No.1 Court was turfed in the Autumn of 1995 and the substructure to the two new outside courts, 18 and 19, put in place prior to The Championships 1996. The reinforced concrete structure to the new No.1 Court and tunnel was completed at the beginning of the year and that to the Broadcast Centre was completed up to existing adjacent ground level for The Championships 1996.

The third year of the project concluded Stage 1 of the Plan, whereby the No.1 Court Stadium and Broadcast Centre were fully functional and all areas in use for The Championships 1997. The tunnel linking Somerset Road with Church Road was completed and the hillside landscaped. In addition to the No.1 Court, Courts 18 and 19 were available for use.

Also completed were the underground Players' set-down area at the Aorangi Park Pavilion entrance, the main Championships Entrance Building adjacent to Gate 3 and the new boundary brick/railing wall along part of Church Road.

Stage 2 of the project, on the new Facilities Building and Centre Court extension, was commenced following The Championships 1996. The North Stand and part of the West

Stand of the old No.1 Court were demolished, leaving the facilities within the remaining Stands, including part of the West Stand, in use during The Championships 1997. Courts 14 and 15 were removed to facilitate an underground Royal and Buggy route to link the new No.1 Court with the Centre Court complex.

1997-1998

Demolition and piling was completed by October. Only the South Stand, which was programmed for demolition after The Championships 1999, remained. The bulk excavation and carting away progressed during this time and this was finished by the end of 1997. Two tower cranes, one at the north end and one at the south end of the site, were erected. The Lodge was demolished in August 1997.

The next major work undertaken was the erection of the reinforced concrete frame, completed shortly after Easter. Courts 14 and 15 were now in use but Courts 16 and 17, although finished and grassed, were not in play.

1998-1999

Construction work continued apace after The Championships 1998. Work also commenced, ahead of programme, on the part of the existing South Stand of the old No.1 Court adjacent to the Centre Court complex.

Visitors to The Championships saw approximately 700 additional seats provided by the new extension on the west side of Centre Court, together with public toilets installed under the stand and Courts 16 and 17 back in use.

1999-2000

After The Championships 1999 the remaining section of the South Stand of the old No.1 Court was demolished and in its place the southern 'finger' of the new Facilities Building was erected and completed at the same time as the remainder of the Facilities Building and the Centre Court extension. The new facilities available were accommodated within three separate buildings, namely the Centre Court West Stand extension, the new Millennium Building and the Officials' Pavilion, linked by high level bridges.

The Centre Court West Stand extension comprised:

- Level 1 Ladies' North and South No 2 Changing Rooms; Public Toilets
- 2 Ladies' and Gentlemen's No 1 Changing Rooms; Public Toilets; Press areas; Radio Wimbledon and First Aid rooms
- 3 Gentlemen's North and South No 2 Changing Rooms and bridge to Millennium Building
- 4 Commentary positions overlooking Centre Court and Southern Courts.

The Millennium Building comprised:

- Level 1 Members' Entrance and Reception; Officials' Buttery; Ball-Girls/Boys Changing, Rest and Canteen facilities; Competitors' Courtyard, Mini Gymnasium, Doctors' Surgery and Drugs Testing Rooms; Plant areas and extension of Royal and Buggy Routes
- 2 Members' Garden and Self-Service Restaurant; Press Entrance and Reception, Writing and Interview Rooms; Photographers' facilities and Press Courtyard
- 3 Competitors' Main Entrance and Garden; Members' Private Party Dining and Lido areas; Press and Photographers' rooms
- 4 Competitors' Dining, Lounge and Lido areas; Press Writing rooms and Dining facilities
- 5 Plant areas

The Officials' Pavilion comprised:

- Level 1 Lower Referees, Umpires and Ball Boys/Girls Offices
- 2 Referees' Offices, Meeting Room and bridge to Millennium Building
- 3 Press Restaurant and bridge to Millennium Building

2000-2001

During this period the Clubhouse was closed while exploration and enabling works were carried out in readiness for the refurbishment planned for after The Championships 2001. During the closure of the Clubhouse, the Members' facilities and Club offices were transferred to the Millennium Building.

2001-2002

The complete refurbishment of the Clubhouse was carried out, with the rearrangement of the Main Entrance Hall to incorporate twin dog-leg staircases up to the Members' dining and lounge facilities and linking to new entrances/exits to the Royal Box. Also included was a designated corridor to the Millennium building.

The Members' Balcony was renewed and extended with bridge links to new balconies on each side. Other facilities such as a Games Room, Boardroom and function rooms were provided. Extensive alterations were also carried out in the Centre Court where improvements were made to the Royal Box, commentary boxes and the terraces to the southern stands.

In Car Park 4, two grassed terraces (each capable of containing two practice courts) and a gardeners' complex was constructed, all of which was enclosed within security fencing and hedging. Initially the lower terrace would have two courts and the top terrace, temporary Championship facilities.

The first part of Stage 3 commenced at the southern end of the Grounds, with Courts 11 and 12 and the gardeners' quarters being demolished. In their place a single Court 11 (grass) was constructed to replace the courts, using foundation laid pallets (to speed the process of consolidation). Alongside to the west an experimental SoftB clay court was laid and Shale courts 4 and 5 were moved three metres in a southerly direction.

Work was carried out to construct six new practice grass courts and attendant facilities on the Southlands College triangular area between Bathgate and Queensmere Roads.

The terracing within the bowl of Centre Court from the south-west corner to the north-east corner, rows A-H, was completely replaced with a lighter weight concrete with new steel reinforcement within.

2003-2004

Immediately after The Championships 2003, the Championship Entrance Building (turnstiles) including Barclays Bank, adjacent to Gate 3 and the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum Shop, on the Tea Lawn Extension, were completely demolished. The clearing of the site made way for the construction of a new building (Museum Building) containing Club Offices, Turnstile Entrance, Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum and Library, Ticket Office and Bank scheduled for occupation by December 2005.

2004-2005

After The Championships 2004, work continued on the construction of the Museum Building.

Two existing Continental Clay courts (No.7 and 8) were excavated and relaid with a HAR-Tru type surface.

After The Championships 2005 until the end of the year, a programme was carried out to evacuate the Centre Court east side to allow the development of the Centre Court.

At the end of October, the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum and Library closed and all objects put into storage in preparation for the opening of the new Museum. At the same time a new Wimbledon shop, situated on the ground floor at the south end of the building was opened. Also a temporary visitor centre was made available to the public in part of the Renshaw Restaurant.

At the beginning of December, Club staff moved into the first floor offices of the Museum Building, with the ticket office personnel occupying the ground floor at the north end. In April the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Museum and Library were opened.

Following The Championships 2006, all areas of the Centre Court and Tea Lawn were vacated in preparation for a rapid construction start. The Members' Clubhouse facilities were moved to the Millennium Building. Between July and September, the roof was completely removed, the North Stand accommodation for the old Museum Offices and Library was demolished and a large section of the East Stand removed. The North Debenture Holders' accommodation was stripped out, ready for refurbishment.

The new structural steelwork for the North and West Stand extensions commenced early in September and was followed by the installation of new precast concrete terraces and prefabricated commentary boxes. Groundwork, foundations and reinforced concrete works for the new East Stand recommenced in mid-September and the new structural steel and concrete frame started erection in November.

In Car Park 2, substantial steelwork elements for the new fixed roof were fabricated between late February and early May and left there in storage, ready for a rapid start after The Championships, when the sections would be hauled across Somerset Road and through Gate 13 ready for hoisting into position.

In July, Somerset Road was closed off for a period of six weeks and a temporary haul road constructed to facilitate the transportation of the 10 separate roof truss sections (the heaviest of which weighed in at over 100 tonnes) from Car Park 2 to the lifting positions in the South Road in front of the Clubhouse.

Lifting of the truss sections (by a 1000 tonne capacity crane specially brought in for the task) commenced in mid-August, and by the end of November the erection and welding of the main trusses had been completed. The rails for the moving roof were also installed and then, in late April, two of the 10 moving roof trusses (each over 70 metres long) were craned into position up on the roof and 'parked' at the North end.

In parallel with the above bowl/roof works, the interior spaces of the Centre Court East and North Buildings (constructed in the previous year but left void for The Championships 2007) were finished and fitted out to a high level of specification to create the new Public and Debenture Restaurant and bar facilities with associated kitchens, stores and toilet facilities, the new retail shop and first aid facility.

The Centre Court facilities comprised:

East Building	Ground floor	Tea Lawn (Public self-service buffet)
	First floor	Wingfield Restaurant (Public Waitress Service)
	Second floor	Terrace Restaurant (Debentures' self-service during The Championships, Museum Cafe and Staff Canteen for other weeks of the year, after 2009)

Third floor	Champagne Gallery (Debentures' Bar and Lounge) and eight suites
Fourth floor	The Roof Top (Bar area)

At the south end of the building, a new public toilet facility and Wimbledon Shop was provided.

North Building First floor	The Courtside Restaurant (Debentures' waitress service and Champagne Bar)
-----------------------------------	---

For the bowl, any existing seats that had been removed for construction operations for The Championships 2008 were refitted, together with 800 of the new specification wider, padded seats to bring the Centre Court up to the new capacity of 15,000.

Alongside all the Centre Court and Car Park 2 works, the construction of new No. 2 Court and the completion of the new court surrounds to grass Courts 7 to 10 started in earnest. Demolition of the Water Tower, maintenance workshops and toilet block in July was followed by the removal of the Croquet Lawn in early September. The piling and groundworks for the new No.2 Court commenced in August and by May 2008 the new structure for the 4,000-seater court was essentially complete.

Work on Centre Court began immediately following The Championships. Critical activities included the fabrication process of the next three roof trusses. These three trusses (each weighing in excess of 70 tonnes) and the 10 end-arm units (each weighing 16 tonnes) were lifted up during the first week of September. This completed the heavy lifting for the five northern trusses and fabric installation commenced early in October. The next three (southern) trusses were lifted at the end of October and the final two in December.

Construction works on the new substation building behind the Covered Courts was also completed. The first consignment of the new wider padded seats for Centre Court and No.2 Court, manufactured in Australia, arrived at Wimbledon early in December. The installation of the seats was completed by April. During early spring, the installation of the Centre Court roof was completed, enabling the testing and commissioning process to be carried out. On Sunday 17 May the new roof and management systems were tested during exhibition matches, played before a capacity crowd of 15,000 people.

The installation of the roof brought the complete modernisation programme for the Centre Court Stadium to an end. The Centre Court seats were re-numbered to a three-digit system. The new No.2 Court and adjacent facilities were available for use. The introduction of this court necessitated re-numbering of the southern courts, with No.2-No.11 becoming No.3-No.12. Gate Houses 4 and 5, plus the ticket collection and accreditation offices were built and the permanent boundary wall in Church Road between Gate 5 and Gate 8 was in place.

The completion of The Championships saw the commencement of a two-year construction programme to complete the Long Term plan Stage 3 works. Old No.2 Court and the grandstand overlooking old No.3 Court were demolished along with the Groundsman's Cottage and the remaining sections of old-style boundary wall fencing on Somerset Road. The construction site was essentially in two separate areas, north and south.

On the north site, the new 2,000-seater bowl for (new) No.3 Court and the concrete substructure for (new) Court 4 were constructed, but would not be ready for play until The Championships 2011. Immediately to the south a new Facilities Building was constructed and completed.

Between the 2010–2011 Championships all the facilities under construction at the southern end of the site were completed; this comprised the construction and fitting out of the new Groundsman's accommodation and workshops, and the new public and marquee guest toilets; the completion of the fitting out of new No.3 Court; and the new seating to No.3 Court and Court 4. In addition, two new balcony terraces with canopied covers were constructed at the south-west and south-east corners of No. 1 Court to provide additional restaurant and bar facilities for the No. 1 Court Debenture Holders.

With No. 3 Court and Court 4 brought into play, The Championships 2011 saw the completion of the original Long Term Plan.

WIMBLEDON MASTER PLAN

In late 2011, the Club began a planning process for further development of the Grounds over the next decade or so. The objective of this process was to create a Wimbledon Master Plan designed to ensure that the Grounds and buildings would continue to provide The Championships with the best possible facilities and environment and, therefore, help to ensure that The Championships would continue to be widely regarded as being the world's premier tennis tournament. The Wimbledon Master Plan set out a vision for the future and was presented to Members, the media, neighbours and other interested parties in April 2013. It was designed to meet the expectations and needs of all constituencies including players, spectators, Members, media, staff and contractors and provided a blueprint for construction and development work for many years to come.

PROGRAMME

The key components of the vision outlined in the Wimbledon Master Plan were: the comprehensive redevelopment of No.1 Court, including the installation of a new fixed and retractable roof, to be completed by 2019; the construction of new covered courts and clay courts on the Grounds to the west of Somerset Road; a thorough refurbishment of the Millennium Building to provide expanded and improved facilities for players, Members and the press; a major redevelopment of the area to the north of No.1 Court including new Championships courts; a removal of the clay courts and a reorganisation of the Championships courts at the southern end of the Grounds to improve spectator circulation and viewing opportunities; the creation of new accommodation underground for staff and support operations; the refurbishment of the Clubhouse and a commitment to do all this following the aesthetic of 'tennis in an English garden'.

2013–2014

In August 2013, construction began to create new basement space under Courts 14 and 15, to provide accommodation for the Ball Boys and Girls, photographers and an expanded 24-hour restaurant for the Media, ready for The Championships 2015. Also, construction started to create a tunnel under Somerset Road, directly linking the main Grounds to the proposed new covered courts and new clay court area. The refurbishment of the Clubhouse began in September and was officially completed on 3 April.

The re-introduction of Courts 14 and 15 brought the total number of courts available during The Championships back up to 19. Basement accommodation was provided for Ball Boys and Girls, photographers and an expanded 24-hour Media Restaurant. Consequently, the space freed up in the Millennium Building was used to provide stretching areas, medical facilities, massage space and ice baths, as well as a larger lounge for the players. The tunnel under Somerset Road was completed, but not opened. The Aorangi Pavilion was turned into a dedicated player facility. Improvements included locker rooms doubled in size, a new restaurant, a lift to make the building accessible on both levels, new creche facilities, separate toilets for guests and a new warm-up space at the rear.

In Aorangi Park a long-term temporary building was constructed to accommodate the Service Stewards, cleaners and security staff during The Championships. The project to install new wrought iron railings along Church Road was completed.

2015-2016

Commencing in November, enabling works for the construction of the No.1 Court retractable roof was completed in April. Piled foundations were constructed for the new super columns in the north-east, south-west, south-east and Loading Bay and reinforced capping to all stair cores put in place.

2016-2017

A fixed-price contract for the No.1 Court project was agreed with the main contractor, Sir Robert McAlpine. By the end of the period the work was well underway, with the removal of the old fixed roof and the east, north-west and west trusses installed. Immediately after The Championships 2016, the part of Aorangi Park north of Courts 14-17 was made a restricted area and most noticeable was the presence of four huge tower cranes.

The bowl was expanded to allow, in due course, two additional rows of seats, extending the capacity of the court by approximately 960. Also, a start was made to provide the new hospitality 'ring' and part of the new fixed roof. Eleven new commentary boxes were installed.

Court 19 was removed and concrete slabs placed in position, with the plan to form a new public catering area and a basement, where an officials' restaurant would be located.

The Centre Court metal halide sports lights were replaced with LED lights, which provide a better quality of light for playing and broadcasting. (The new No.1 Court roof is also equipped with these new lights).

The Pergola Building underwent a significant refurbishment, including new structures, flat roofs and glass doors. The project to provide a larger Event Control Room in the external vacant space at the top of the Referee's Tower north west of Centre Court was completed.

Planning application for the Somerset Road development was agreed by Merton Council and final approval was awaited from the Greater London Authority. The scheme will provide six indoor courts and six outdoor clay courts within a single storey building, with basement car park holding 450 vehicles. Completion is planned in 2022.

The No.1 Court project, including construction of the new fixed roof and the construction of nine of the trusses on Practice Courts 1 & 2 and the bus turnaround area, proceeded apace.

The Championships saw the opening of the new Walled Garden public area. The old Aorangi Food Court was removed and there was a new Food Market adjacent to the Walled Garden. On the level above, there was the new Larder in an expanded area where the Aorangi Cafe and Phillips Suite used to be. Elsewhere around the Estate, the Courtside restaurant was completely refurbished, to create a new multi-purpose room. Following on from the formation of Wimbledon Broadcast Services as host broadcaster, new broadcast production facilities were created by reconfiguring a third of the Broadcast Building.

The North and South Dressing Rooms were reconfigured, creating new Ladies' and Gentlemen's Championships Dressing Rooms, complete with new showers, lockers and back of house support areas.

At the Bank of England Sport Ground in Roehampton, the ring beam project was completed so all 12 courts had inflatable covers for the Qualifying Tournament.

The Ticket Office had a full refurbishment and a reconfiguration of the ticket pick-up point and entrance doors to improve the operation.

2018-19

The fully operational new No.1 Court was completed and, apart from the moving roof, it now has a newly opened ring of hospitality suites, a living wall surrounding the big screen, a new officials' restaurant and completed walled garden.

Other projects include a full refurbishment of the Gentlemen's and Ladies' Members' Dressing Rooms, a new floor providing offices in the Museum Building, Café Pergola enhancements and a new Members' Brasserie in the Millennium Building. A rolling programme of toilet upgrades has continued.

On Somerset Road work has been undertaken to improve drainage in Car Park 1 and prepare for the construction of new indoor courts starting after The Championships.

2019-20

For 2020 new works included a complete makeover of the Terrace (Court Debentures) and staircase refurbishments and new toilets in No.1 Court as part of the rolling programme. Competitors have a new kitchen and servery for their Restaurant in the Millennium Building.

Work started on the development of the Community Sport Ground at Raynes Park, with the construction of grass tennis courts and an additional air dome. On Somerset Road, the old covered courts were demolished and work on their replacement began, a significant project.

Proposals for a new arrangement for Gate 20 to better service broadcasting and an exciting new Media Pavilion, to be located on the top of the existing Broadcast Centre, received planning approval.

New works for The Championships 2021 included the remodelling of Gate 20 to enable improved facilities and access for broadcasters in preparation for future works in the Broadcast Centre and the Media Pavilion. Gate 1D on Church Road was redesigned to provide a new logistics hub and ticket resolution point. On Somerset Road the covered court project was entering its final phase, with the external envelope nearing completion and clay court surrounds visible, while a project for the redevelopment of the Millennium Building had been submitted for planning.

The Wimbledon Park Project (the golf course land) was in public consultation and a planning application was due to be submitted after The Championships 2021. The project consists of 38 new grass courts and a new parkland show court with ancillary facilities.

At the Community Sport Ground (formerly Community Sports Ground) in Raynes Park, two packages of construction were completed to give three new indoor courts and 16 new grass courts, together with maintenance facilities and improvements to the site's drainage.

New works completed for The Championships 2022 included the refurbishment of the Centre Court bowl, six new indoor covered courts and six new outdoor clay courts on Somerset Road and the Technical Support Room behind the Broadcast Centre.

The Media Pavilion and some new spaces created in the Broadcast Centre were in use but would not be fully complete until 2023. The design of the Millennium Building remodelling was in progress, anticipating the first phase of construction to link it to the tunnel under Somerset Road starting after The Championships 2022.

A planning application for the Wimbledon Park Project (the golf course land) was submitted after The Championships 2021. The project consists of 38 new grass courts for practice and qualifying, an 8,000 seat show court with ancillary facilities and a 23-acre AELTC park which will be open to the public.

At the Community Tennis Centre in Raynes Park, construction was underway on the final stage of the project, a new clubhouse and extended car park, to be completed in 2023.

The new Media Pavilion (located on top of the Broadcast Centre) which contains the Media Theatre, the replacement for the old Press Interview Room, was completed and put into action for the annual Media Conference in April 2023.

The new player link between the Indoor Tennis Centre (ITC) under Somerset Road and into the Millennium Building was completed. 2023 saw the first players using the ITC as player drop off and reception rather than at the front of the Millennium Building. The tunnel includes an animated display with a tennis theme. The new entrance into the Millennium Building was the first part of a larger project to refurbish and extend the facility to enhance its role supporting Players, Media, and Members. Some alterations to the west façade of the Millennium Building near Gate 5 were visible as part of the same long-term project.

'The Serving Ace', a new 1.64 tonne permanent sculpture created by artist Mark Reed, arrived on the Grounds and was located next to No.1 Court and Gate 1.

At the Community Tennis Centre in Raynes Park, work continued to complete the final stage of a long running project to redevelop the site: a new clubhouse to replace the temporary accommodation. This was due to be completed in the late summer.

The Wimbledon Park Project continued through the planning process during the year with the playing of golf now ceased. 4,500 local people attended community events and walks across the former golf course where they were able to ask questions about the proposals. More than 300 saplings grown from acorns collected from the old oaks in Wimbledon Park were planted in Merton and Wandsworth.

Enabling works were completed on the Millennium Building, to allow a fast start on the full renovation of the building immediately after The Championships 2024. A new lift shaft was constructed on the western side of the building, the terrace outside the Members' Brasserie was extended and significant work was carried out on the drainage and sewer links on the lowest level of the building.

Considerable improvements took place to the Southern Concourse. Above ground, it involved creating a series of tarmac squares framed by porphyry stone edging. Below ground, the project involved bringing up-to-date the 100-year-old infrastructure, including replacing broken clay pipes and adding new ducts to allow cables to be installed in future without digging up the surface.

Work took place to completely refurbish both floors of the Court 18 wing of the Broadcast Centre to create a new studio for ESPN ahead of the first year of their new 12-year broadcast rights contract. The project provided ESPN with a rationalised and state of the art space, with the centrepiece being a huge 11-metre 950kg sheet of glass that looks across Court 18 to No.1 Court.

The Media Development project in the Broadcast Centre continued with the replacement of key clamp handrails with glazed balustrades, creating outstanding presentation locations for broadcasters. Other improvements included the installation of architectural lighting in the Media Theatre, respraying the façade and the remodelling of the secondary interview room.

The No.1 Court Shop, the largest on the Grounds, was completely refurbished. Retail space was increased by 25 per cent through expansion into areas previously taken up by store rooms and corridors and creating new and larger store rooms deeper in the No.1 Court building.

As part of the AELTC's commitment to be net zero by 2030, it was agreed that there was a need to commence degassing the estate. This process began in the staff restaurant in Centre Court, with the replacement of all gas kitchen appliances with their electrical equivalent.

Other projects included replacing the plastic seats on Courts 4, 8 and 18 with the same upholstered seats as elsewhere in the Grounds; the installation of cooling systems in the Indoor Tennis Centre dressing rooms; refurbishments to The Lookout, the American Express facility to the back of No.3 Court; the replacement of the lift in the south-west corner of Centre Court; the conversion of Aorangi Courts 11 and 13 to hybrid grass courts.

Away from the main site, the final phase of the Raynes Park project was completed, with the opening of the new pavilion, as well as ancillary buildings and a large new car park at the Community Tennis Centre.

At Roehampton, a project was undertaken to support a range of improvements to the Wimbledon Qualifying and Community Sports Centre. This saw a series of accessibility upgrades, with the inclusion of ramps and widened staircases to help guests move more easily around the grounds; some minor works to the newly refurbished dressing rooms; redecoration of the remaining player circulation areas within the pavilion building. The site has also been made ready to accommodate an increase in capacity from 3,000 to 3,500.

2024-25

Following The Championships 2024, work began on the comprehensive refurbishment, bordering on a rebuild, of the Millennium Building. The project is designed to deliver a step change in the Member, player and print media experience at The Championships. This project should be substantially complete by The Championships 2027. The first year of works includes removing the existing roof and upper floor, before re-instating it in new materials so that it can be extended upwards in later years. The AELTC has appointed McAlpine, the contractors on the No.1 Court project, to deliver the Millennium Building project.

In April 2025 the AELTC announced plans to undertake a programme of enhancements to The Hill. The enhancement works are scheduled to commence following the conclusion of The Championships 2026 and the new-look Hill will be ready to welcome guests at The Championships 2027.

The planned developments will allow far greater accessible viewing opportunities and will transform wheelchair access to The Hill's various tiers, including the Orchard and Pergola areas, situated at the top of The Hill. The plans will also deliver more seating through a number of new low retaining walls which will optimise visibility of the No.1 Court large screen by reducing the gradient of the existing tiers.

During The Championships 2024 and the weeks that followed, the Club identified the need to review its roof maintenance regime and to replace obsolescent mechanical parts. These improvements have been prioritised and will be implemented over the coming years. The AELTC continues to progress its decarbonisation strategy through replacement of gas boilers with immersion heaters, as well as degassing kitchens across the estate. This is being coordinated with wider development plans and the longer-term decarbonisation strategy.

THE AELTC WIMBLEDON PARK PROJECT

Following a period of public consultation, a planning application to transform the former Wimbledon Park Golf Course was submitted to Merton and Wandsworth Councils in August 2021. Wimbledon Park Golf Course was reduced from 18 holes to nine holes from 1 January 2022 and continued as a nine-hole course until 31 December 2022. With the purchase of the 73-acre golf course, the AELTC Grounds have nearly trebled in size from the existing 42-acre site.

The intention is to utilise this space by building a new stadium, the Parkland Show Court, and 38 grass tennis courts along with new facilities for players. The extra space will also allow the Qualifying Competition to be held on-site rather than at the Wimbledon Qualifying and Community Sports Centre in Roehampton, as it is now. The project also contains plans to deliver significant benefits for the local community, including a 50 per cent increase in publicly accessible green space in the local area for residents to enjoy.

The AELTC proposes to do this by creating 27 acres of parkland, made up of 23 acres in the south and four acres in the north (the latter included as part of an addendum issued on the plans in May 2024). All of the veteran trees on the site will be protected and 1,500 new trees will be planted. The Wimbledon Park Lake will be desilted, a boardwalk created and facilities for sailing and angling will be enhanced. Specific areas will be set aside to create natural habitats for protected species of flora and fauna, both British and European.

There will be greater access to The Championships for those living locally with the expansion of the Community Ticket Scheme. Outside of The Championships period, local community groups will have access to the facilities within the Parkland Show Court and the former golf clubhouse.

In October 2023, Merton Council's Development and Planning Committee resolved to approve planning permission, but in November 2023, Wandsworth's Planning Committee resolved to refuse permission. Consequently, in January 2024, the Mayor of London's office decided to call-in the application, meaning that planning officers from the Greater London Authority (GLA) were required to make their own assessment of the proposals. A public hearing, presided over by the Deputy Mayor for Planning and Regeneration, took place in September 2024, at which the planning application was approved.

A judicial review challenge of the GLA's decision has been lodged by an opposition group and will be heard in court in July 2025. In parallel, the All England Club has put a separate legal matter before the court: to establish that there is no statutory trust over the land. The All England Club's position remains that there is not, nor has there ever been, a statutory trust affecting the former Wimbledon Park Golf Course land, but only the courts can determine this.

The AELTC Wimbledon Park Project team has engaged with more than 10,000 local residents at more than 100 events and guided tours since the plans were initially announced.

Details of the proposals, the consultation process, the planning application, FAQs and other information relating to the AELTC Wimbledon Park Project are available at www.wimbledon.com/wpp.

ROSTROM reports

British sport's m

The motion is put:
"to delete all reference to amateurs and professionals from the rules" at yesterday's Lawn Tennis Association meeting. There were only five dissidents, but one if you can.

IT'S ALL OPEN NOW

B RITISH lawn tennis will be "open" from April 22 next year. The shamateur was kicked out yesterday at the most momentous annual meeting in the Lawn Tennis Association's 80-year history.

Three hundred legislators, representing tennis clubs throughout the country, voted overwhelmingly to abolish the distinction between amateur and professional. Only five dissidents voted against the proposal.

The first tournament to be played under the new regulations will be the British hard courts championships at Bournemouth, starting on April 22.

From then on, all British tennis, including Wimbledon, will be open with specific legal provisions available to any player on merit.

'OUTLAWED' THREAT

Britain now stands in grave danger of being outlawed by the rest of world tennis, for the decision to go it alone was in defiance of the International Lawn Tennis Federation.

The only hope of saving British tennis from international "excommunication" is that the Federation, which announced its decision to abolish the distinction between amateur and professional in the Olympic by mid-April, will grant each country the right of self-determination.

That was why the original motion for Britain to go it alone from January 1 was dropped yesterday in favour of an amendment by Cecil Barker, chairman, for proposed that deletion of all reference to amateurs and professionals in the rules should be delayed until after the Federation's meeting.

A group of technical professionals played a vital part in yesterday's decision.

Another amendment, by John Aston, secretary of the Birmingham Club, removing a whole year's compensation, was voted by the players. John Cairns, chairman, to take general preference in the voting.

That the sport of tennis was put first and second in every respect, that the possibility of moving on Britain's tennis was kept.

BEYOND THE CHAMPIONSHIPS

While The All England Club and The Championships have been the primary focus of this book, Wimbledon's role and reputation within the game is something the Club is rightly proud of. From establishing a Gentlemen's Doubles Championship after Oxford University's early competition had faltered to ushering in the age of Open tennis, The AELTC has always been at the very forefront of the sport, and many of its greatest champions have been immortalised by having courts named in their honour around the world.

OPEN TENNIS

The expansion of air travel in the fifties resulted in a great increase in the number of foreign players at Wimbledon and other tournaments throughout the world, but with this surge came an epidemic of what had become known as 'shamateurism' – the receiving by amateur players of financial assistance in excess of amounts permitted by the International Tennis Federation.

The need for reform was evident. The initiative came from The All England Lawn Tennis Club, led by the then Chairman Herman David, who in late 1959 put forward a proposal to The Lawn Tennis Association that The Championships be made open to all players. In July 1960 the ITF rejected this move and several years followed in which argument persisted at all levels of the game. In 1964 the Club tried to persuade the LTA unilaterally to declare The Championships 'open' but support was not forthcoming.

In August 1967 an invitation tournament for men (sponsored by the BBC to mark the introduction of colour television) was held on the Centre Court, with eight players taking part – all professionals. Most of these players had won honours at Wimbledon in their amateur days but had forfeited the right to play there on turning professional. The segregation of the two categories was soon to come to an end.

In December that year the Annual General Meeting of the LTA voted overwhelmingly to admit players of all categories to Wimbledon and other tournaments in Britain. At a special meeting held in Paris on 30 March 1968, the ITF, faced with a fait accompli, yielded and allowed each nation to determine its own legislation regarding amateur and professional players. Three months later the first Open Wimbledon, offering £26,150 in prize money, was staged. A new era had begun.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY DOUBLES CHAMPIONSHIP (1879-1883)

When, early in 1884, The All England Lawn Tennis Club decided to add a Gentlemen's Doubles Championship to their programme, the Oxford University Lawn Tennis Club offered to transfer their 60 guinea Challenge Cup to the new event. The Committee were pleased to accept and agreed that the inscription on the trophy should be altered as little as possible.

The O.U.L.T.C. had instituted a gentlemen's doubles event for the 'Oxford University Challenge Cup for Pairs' in 1879 when, at the new Norham Gardens, 14 club pairs contested the matches, each over the best of seven sets.

The following year 12 pairs competed, but in 1881 and 1882, when eight pairs participated, the matches were reduced to the best of five sets. In 1883 the number of entries dwindled to six, but due to withdrawals only three matches were played to settle the issue. Interest in the event had considerably waned, with the leading players expressing the opinion they could not justify spending several days just playing doubles. Consequently the university discontinued the tournament.

Apart from the transference of the trophy there is no connection between the Oxford event and The Championships at Wimbledon, although for sentimental reasons the surviving champions from Oxford were presented with a commemorative medal at the Jubilee Championships in 1926. Also, for many years the Wimbledon Programme traditionally listed the champions and runners-up from Oxford.

ALL ENGLAND CHAMPIONSHIPS

Sometimes the title 'All England Championships' is incorrectly given to the events at Wimbledon, because of the promotion of the properly named 'The Lawn Tennis Championships' by the All England Lawn Tennis Club.

However, long before the Ladies' Doubles and Mixed Doubles Championships were inaugurated at Wimbledon in 1913, All England Championship titles existed elsewhere. The All England Ladies' Doubles Championship was held annually from 1884 to 1953 in conjunction with the Derbyshire Championships at Buxton and the All England Mixed Doubles Championship was held annually from 1888 to 1938 in association with the Northern Championships, staged alternately at Liverpool and Manchester.

The ladies' doubles event from 1899 to 1907 and the mixed doubles event from 1900 to 1912, held at Wimbledon, both had non-Championship status and were used mainly to augment the programme.

JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIPS

The Junior Wimbledon Championships have been staged on grass during the second week of The Championships from 1947 to date, originally as an invitational event, but from 1975 upgraded to Championship status. Quite often this event is confused with the Junior Championships of Great Britain (under 18), which was staged on the hard courts of The All England Lawn Tennis Club from 1924 to 1939 and 1946 to 1990 (early September up to 1981 and April thereafter). From 1970 the event was generally known as the British Junior Hard Court Championships. The tournament was staged under the management of the Lawn Tennis Association.

The former event is quite often referred to as 'Junior Wimbledon' which is acceptable, but to refer to the latter event by the same title is confusing and incorrect.

SUPPORT FOR OTHER EVENTS

From 2009, the ATP revised the format of the Tennis Masters Cup, the season finale of the ATP Tour, to the ATP Finals, a singles and doubles round robin to crown the season-ending singles and doubles champions. Alongside the LTA, the AELTC lent its support to the bid for London to host the event, and The Championships logo featured on the event collateral. The event was staged at London's O2 Arena from November 2009 up to November 2020.

As one of the four Grand Slams, the AELTC also contributes to the international development of the sport through the Grand Slam Player Development Programme (formerly the Grand Slam Development Fund), with more than $60 million delivered to the ITF since 1986, to administer the fund on behalf of the Grand Slams.

The Programme has helped to provide competitive opportunities in developing tennis regions throughout the globe and has also helped talented individuals to succeed where finances may have otherwise proved a barrier to their success.
